PLANE YELLOW BIRD WAS SIGHTED 850 MILES AT SEA

The Monoplane Passed Over the American Steamship Whytheville at 5:45 P. M. Yesterday—Had Been in the Air About Eight and a Half Hours—The Yellow Bird Made a Graceful Take-Off For Its Atlantic Flight—The Plane Green Flask Was Wrecked in Its Attempt to Hop Off For Rome.

S. S. WYTHEVILLE AT SEA, June 13—(AP)—The monoplane Yellow Bird, passed over the American steamship Wytheville, at 5.45 p. m. E. S. T., "latitude 41'00 north, 49'48 west. All O. K."

"Culver, master."

The position reported by Captain Culver is about 850 miles east and slightly south of Old Orchard. It is about 300 miles south and somewhat east of Cape Sable.

The aviators had then been in the air about eight and a half hours and thus appeared to have averaged about 100 miles an hour.

BELIEVED TO BE STOWAWAY ABOARD YELLOW BIRD

PORTLAND, Me., June 13—(AP)—Arthur Schreiber, 22, of 526 Washington avenue, tonight was believed to be a stowaway aboard the Yellow Bird as it winged its way to France.

A letter written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Schreiber, have convinced them he stowed away before the huge monoplane raced down the sands on the takeoff.

"God will save my boy," Mrs. Screiber said as she walked the floor of her home, awaiting some word from the plane.

The letter was given to the Schreibers this afternoon by a chum of young Schreiber. The envelope carried the instruction, "not to be opened until three hours after the departure of the Green Flash for Rome."

The letter indicated that the young man first intended to stow away in the American plane which cracked up when it tried to take off. It was believed that he discovered there was no room in the Green Flash and accordingly climbed into the Yellow Bird.

The text of the letter was:

"Dear parents: I am attempting to go across on the airship Green Flash. If I succeed in getting on do not worry for me. I am doing this thing of my own accord, and was not influenced by anyone and wish no one to be held responsible for the consequences.

"I am doing it because I know that if I succeed, I can do much for your happiness.

"Please do not think bad of me. I will cable you if I arrive in Rome.

"I am constantly thinking of you.

"Love ARTHUR."

STORY OF TAKE OFF OF THE FRENCH PLANE YELLOW BIRD AND WRECK OF GREEN FLASH

OLD ORCHARD, Me., June 13—(AP)—Somewhere over the Atlantic tonight three young Frenchmen were thought to be driving their plane—the Yellow Bird—on toward Paris

The huge single motored monoplane shipped from France for the flight, sped down the hard packed sand of the beach here and at a speed of 94 miles an hour lifted gracefully into the air at 10.08 a. m. (E D T.)

While the French plane sailed on its way to the capital of the European republic—and glory for its crew, Armeno, Lotti, Jr., sponsor and co-pilot; Jean Assolant, pilot and Rene Lefevre, navigator—the Green Flash, groomed for a hop to Rome, crashed in an attempt to take off and lay tonight a mass of wreckage, hardly worth salvaging.

Roger Q. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey, pilot and navigator, respectively of the plane, escaped uninjured when the wheels spread and the plane nosed over and whirled about.

There was a possibility that an added and unwanted passenger was also aboard the Yellow Bird. Two men told of seeing a youth clamber aboard while the motor of the plane was being warmed up and the parents of Arthur Schreiber, of Portland, were advised by two of his friends that he had stowed away.

The Yellow Bird was reported but once after she left the beach. The big ship passed over Matinicus Rock light about 20 miles off the coast from Rockland, a little more than an hour after the takeoff. She was then flying fast and about 1,200 feet high. When the coast guard amphibian which started with the French plane last saw her she was at an altitude of 2,400 feet and speeding on at 115 miles an hour.

Before the takeoff, Lotti announced that he would touch the tip of Cape Sable and then head for the "corner," the junction of the ship lanes which is approximately 1,000 miles east southeast of Old Orchard.

From there he had two courses in mind, the southern would take him over the Azores and make the flight cover 4300 miles. The northern would take them to longitude 47, latitude 29 and thence east to St. Nazaire and Paris a total distance of but 3,700 miles. Conditions when he reached the "corner" were to determine the course.

If the plane maintained an average speed of 100 miles an hour which was considered probable, it should have been far beyond Cape Sable at six o'clock tonight.

The Yellow Bird also should have made its way through the "thick" weather which covered the ocean for about 200 miles off the coast.

Dr. James H. Kimball, New York weatherman, said they would have "as near perfect" weather as would ever be found over the North Atlantic.

Radio reports from the plane were not expected until sometime tonight. Lotti, who also acted as radioman, said he would not send any messages until the ship had travelled at least 1,000 miles.

The young and rather nervous backer of the flight refused to estimate as to what time he should arrive in Paris. Following the southern route would add another six hours to the time required.

To Jean Assolant, benedict of but three days, fell the responsibility and the honor of taking the heavily laden craft into the air. With his bride nervously watching the huge all yellow ship gather momentum as it travelled down the beach, he took it aloft with a run of less than a mile and a half gained a few hundred feet of altitude and swung it about to the east.

Aviation experts assembled here for the flight later computed that the plane had a gross weight of 12,900 pounds and that it had lifted 27 1-2 pounds per square foot of wing surface.

PHILANTHROPY IN WILL OF MARY COPLEY THAW

PITTSBURGH, June 13—(AP)—In death, as in life, the helping hand of Mary Copley Thaw, philanthropist, today was extended, through her last will and testament, to various charities and church organizations in the United States and abroad. No estimate of the value of the vast estate was given in the will filed for probate today. Mrs. Thaw died last week, aged 86 years.

After setting down scores of bequests to relatives, friends, employes, charities, church organizations and schools, Mrs. Thaw's will called attention to the fact that her children—Harry K., Josiah C., Mrs. Alice Thaw Whitney, the former countess of Yarmouth and Countess Margaret Carnegie De Perigny—had received large financial legacies from their father. She therefore had determined to administer her own estate during her life time and had steadily given "to such benevolent work as providence has, from time to time, indicated."

"Knowing the minds of my children as to this determination," read the will, "I designate no specific sum to any of them, and expect to leave, as my residuary estate, little more than enough to provide for payment of my debts and such legacies, bequests and devises as are designated."

The residue of the estate is to be divided as follows:

Four fifths to her children, and one fifth in three parts to the third Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, Presbyterian Theological seminary, Omaha, Nebraska, and to Washington college, Tennessee, the latter to be used in maintaining the college as a memorial to a deceased son, Edward.

Mrs. Thaw ordered that the debts of all relatives owed her be cancelled or cut in half, and that all debts in excess of $50,000 due her from Harry K. Thaw be cancelled.

IMPORTANT POLITICAL EVENTS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, June 13 (AP)—Two events of great political importance took place in England today which have a bearing on Anglo-American relations.

The first was Premier Ramsay MacDonald's first open talk about his prospective meeting with President Hoover. The second was the declaration of David Lloyd George, liberal leader, that liberalism and not socialism must guide the policy of the recently victorious labor government.

It is safe to say that the British public is far more interested in the former event than in the latter.

Interest centers about the little Scottish town of Forres, which next Sunday will be the scene of a meeting almost as unusual as that to come between Mr. McDonald and Mr. Hoover. Forres is only about 17 miles from Premier MacDonald's Scottish home at Lossiemouth.

There, Charles G. Dawes, the new American ambassador to the court of St. James, having hastily presented his credentials to King George at Windsor castle on Saturday, is to meet Premier MacDonald at an informal luncheon. It is supposed that he will then invite the labor prime minister to Washington for a conference with President Hoover, with a straightforwardness far outside the imaginings of the old diplomacy and official tradition.

NORTH COVENTRY BOY DROWNED WHILE SWIMMING

BOLTON, Conn., June 13—(AP)—Elmore L. Burnham, 19, of North Coventry, was drowned while swimming late today in the lower reaches of Bolton pond with his brother and a companion. The three dove off a plank to swim to a raft and it was not until Roy, the brother, and Charles Scott, of New York, had reached the raft that Elmore was discovered missing.

Help was summoned and the police arrived with grappling irons and the fire department with an inhalator. The body was recovered after two hours of work but resuscitation methods were futile. The drowned youth, who was considered a good swimmer, was a native of Waterbury, and came to North Coventry last December from the south.

The body was taken to East Hartford by an uncle where services will be held. The youth's father, Henry A. Burnham, an engineer, was injured in a Boston hotel of his son's death.

HURLEY TO HOLD PROBE ON BARRETT FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, June 13—It was learned today that several witnesses were being summoned to appear before State Fire Marshal Robert T. Hurley, of Hartford, at a hearing to be held in the superior court rooms Friday moning at 10 o'clock, regarding the blaze which caused considerable damage to the Charles Barrett house on West Main street, the night of May 27.

As a result of the evidence introduced in this hearing, Fire Marshal Hurley, who holds that office in his capacity as commissioner of the state police department, will render a finding as to whether in his opinion there are grounds for continued investigation and possible prosecution of any person accused of arson in connection with the fire.

The hearing follows intensive investigation into the fire by State Policeman Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks and County Investigator Howe H. Wheeler. These officers were occupied in the city today, evidently in the work of summoning the witnesses.

The fears of North Windham residents that the town was contemplating the discontinuance of the secondary school in that village have now been put definitely at rest with a vote of the town school committee that the selectmen be petitioned to ask for the sum of $6,500 to make repairs and do landscaping work at the school. Sufficient funds will also be sought for the erection of an iron fence around the Natchaug school grounds, filling in the new athletic field at Mountain and Hayden streets and electing a new iron fence around the field. A proposition of the board of aldermen to provide traffic protection to school children by the installation of a new type of traffic signals for use at the danger points, has been turned down by the school board.

THE WORLD IN THE PALM OF YOUR HAND.

In Greek mythology, Atlas, the Titan, bore the world upon his great shoulders. But Atlas, under command of Zeus, knew not and cared not of what stuff the globe was made, of its manifold activities, its many races and its many ports.

Modern advertising, heralding all that is new, constructive and to the best interests of man, has placed the world in the very palm of your hand.

Today, the business man, medium of stature, but giant in mind, holds the world at his fingertips. The new god of progress, Advertising, has brought to all, the world, in compact, accurate and interesting print. Unlike the giant Atlas, we do not hold the world over our head, but directly in front of our eyes where we can follow the interesting procession of new discoveries, all of which tend to make living in this century more comfortably, more economical, healthier and complete in happiness.

It is through Advertising that you receive the first accurate announcement of the finished product. Advertising tells you in brief, convincing manner, when the results of scientific researches of which you may have been reading, are on the market and prepared for your own use.

To read Advertising is to Hold the World in Your Palm. The Willimantic merchants are endeavoring to keep you well informed of the latest things in merchadising. THERE IS NO GREATER SATISFACTION THAN THAT OF A PLEASING PURCHASE.

The Desire of Everyone is Something Better Next Time!

One never forgets an unsatisfactory purchase, no matter what price was paid. It is just as true that one never forgets a satisfactory purchase, which is always attended by pleasant memories.

Quality is always the basis of value, and quality (or the lack of it) is what creates the impression.

Quality always is an assurance of value and is never attended by "half price" quotations; garments offered at "half price" may be worth it, but seldom more.

If that statement is true of the goods you sell, whether it be eggs, milk, cream or fruit, it is most likely equally true of the things you have to buy. Think it over!

...ESTS NOW WITH SENATE.

...y a vote of more than two to one the house of representatives has declared its opposition to the debenture plan in the farm relief bill. There was never any doubt about it. It was not because there was fear the house would approve it that it was not brought to a vote before. The house resented the action of the senate in making provisions for the debenture plan inasmuch as it considered it was its prerogative to originate any such legislation. Therefore it was disposed to ignore it and insist that it be eliminated.

The great and glorious senate, ruled by the insurgents and the democrats, was peeved. It must have its way. They balked and balked and refused to pass the conference measure and forced the house to express itself on debenture if farm relief was to be voted. Of course it was a glorious victory to force the house to a vote, but it was an even greater victory for the house when it turned down the senate proposition by a large majority and now puts it up to the senate to pass the farm bill or to kill it, knowing full well that if it kills it the responsibility will rest there and no where else.

Trying to force unsound measures upon the country has been the practice of the senate relative to farm relief. It has made a bad spectacle of itself in this attitude. The line up behind the debenture scheme has been a heavy one. It represents politics in a manner which makes a bad impression.

There are times when that homely expression, the tail wags the dog, can be fittingly used. It seems to describe that the balance of power in the senate has been up to in this extra session of congress but it has accomplished nothing. It is working against the will of the people as expressed at the last election even as it was doing the same thing during the Coolidge administration. It seems blinded by the importance which it attaches to itself.

THE BROOKHART PLAN.

The talk by Senator Brookhart and his exhortation of progressives to stand together and if they are not strong enough to get what they desired to organize a third party is all bunk, as he and all those who are training with him must know from actual experience.

Brookhart is not a good loser and by his reference to a third party apparently thought he could force a change of heart on the part of some who were opposed to his attitude and ideas. If he thinks that opposition to the debenture plan is going to be fruitful to the republican party, which will not be the case, he might hesitate and contemplate what effect there would be of starting a third party.

All he needs to do is to recall the days of 1912 when a third party was actually launched. It was the third party movement at that time which was responsible for putting the democrats into office and keeping them there for a period of eight years. The two Wilson administrations were the direct outcome of the third party movement.

It is quite evident that there is no leader at the present time that would have the influence that Theodore Roosevelt did in 1912 in organizing a third party. It could, therefore, not have the full effect upon the republican party that it did that year, but it is certain that no such party could have any chance of putting its candidates into office, while the direct result would be to give aid and comfort to the democrats.

Brookhart and his crowd of insurgents are already getting much assistance from the democrats, in their opposition to the administration policies, which would please those same democrats more than to have a third party started under such a threat as Brookhart has made. They fully appreciate the bearing it would have upon dividing the opposition to the democrats, and the encouragement that would come from any split that exists in republican ranks. There would be no chance for Brookhart to accomplish his purpose but he might contribute a little more of his wildness to the political situation and help the senate to be an even weaker factor in the legislative branch of the government than it already is.

BORDER SLAYINGS.

The demand for the silencing of the dry guns, the efforts in behalf of compensation for those killed, the cry for the punishment of the gun users can be expected to be kept to the front loudly and persistently by those who deplore such conditions and those who are opposed to the enforcement of prohibition. They are furnished an issue.

Just as long as there are cases where life is taken in connection with the prohibition law, and it doesn't make so much difference what the circumstances are, there will be a handle made of them. It becomes evident therefore that the quicker this can be eliminated, barring such cases as those where self defense is involved, the quicker there will be removed one source of opposition.

It is realized of course that in the violation of the prohibition law there is no capital offense committed. When rum runners refuse to abide by the orders of enforcement officials they are not doing anything that calls for their death. However much there has been a disposition to make it appear so, all the persons who have been killed by enforcement officials have not been innocent. Some of the shootings have been intentional, some accidental, and it might be contended that all of them could have been prevented had there been obedience to the commands of the officials.

It has been declared by the enforcement authorities that the use of guns must be restricted. Enforcement officers have found it necessary to defend themselves, they have even been killed in the discharge of their duty, so that it would hardly be wise to deny them the protection of firearms. But it is to be expected that they will make judicious use of them. They have reason to do so, for the department had declared that if those restrictions are not respected the department will not provide the defense of the officers who are involved in the shootings. All of these cases deserve a careful inquiry, and they are apparently getting them, but those who are engaged in violating the law cannot be regarded as a class of angels even though such an act doesn't carry a death penalty.

FLAG DAY.

By decree of Governor Trumbull today is set apart as Flag day that we may pay particular honor to this symbol of our national institutions, and he urges the observance of the day by a display of the national colors by suitable exercises in the schools and elsewhere.

Flag day should be observed from one end of the country to the other. From the beginning our flag has meant much in this country. Just what it means has been admirably set forth by Charles Evans Hughes in these words:

"This flag means more than association and reward. It is the symbol of our national unity, our national endeavor, our national aspiration. It tells you of the struggle for independence, of union preserved, of liberty and union, one and inseparable, of the sacrifice of brave men and women to whom the ideals and honor of this nation have been dearer than life.

"It means America first; it means an undivided allegiance. It means America united, strong and efficient, equal to her tasks. It means that you cannot be saved by the valor and devotion of your ancestors; that to each generation comes its patriotic duty; and that upon your willingness to sacrifice and endure as those before you have sacrificed and endured rests the national hope.

"It speaks of equal rights; of the inspiration of free institutions exemplified and vindicated; of liberty under law intelligently conceived and impartially administered.

"There is not a thread in it but scorns self indulgence, weakness and rapacity. It is eloquent of our community interests, outweighing all divergences of opinion, and of our common destiny."

Our flag means all that we have striven for in war and in peace during the life of our country. It is a glorious insignia that tells of the past, that stands for liberty and that gives assurance for the future. By all means raise it, respect it and rally round it.

WELCOMING MR. YOUNG.

Returning from Europe are the members of the American committee that went to Paris to help in the settlement of the reparations problem. At the head of this delegation, and also head of the reparations commission by vote of the delegates, was Owen D. Young, and the suggestion has been made that he be given a fitting reception on his arrival in New York city.

Mr. Young has been closely identified with reparations matters, having been a member of the commission that worked out the Dawes plan, following a study of conditions in Germany. Which plan has prevailed since and will only be displaced by the new arrangement which is considered to better fit the present day conditions. It has been work of a most valuable character that Mr. Young has contributed. Upon both occasions, but more particularly as the result of his recent chairmanship of the commission, has there been appreciation among the other countries of his services.

That an American should have played such a conspicuous part in this important settlement is cause for much satisfaction on the part of his fellow countrymen. There is good reason for the suggestion that has been made that some recognition of this good work be expressed on his return to this country, but we have no doubt that the best kind of a welcome that Mr. Young could receive would be the assurance that the settlement he, along with the others, had been able to effect in the conference will be ratified by the government whose representatives participated therein.

Nevertheless it will be a gracious thing to let him know that there is full appreciation at home for the work that has been done.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Today is Flag day. Show your colors.

It is easy to see that the boy who was killed while trying to get on a truck should have known better, but no more so than the man who drove his auto in front of a locomotive.

The man on the corner says: Don't make a monkey of yourself is frequently offered as advice, and yet there's always a crowd finding much to enjoy in front of the monkey cage.

That Quebec woman must have been a bit shocked to read that her body had been found in the river, but there must have been keen satisfaction in being able to prove it wasn't so.

If it was the suggestion of President Hoover that Premier MacDonald, or whoever held that office, come over for a conference so much the better. A better understanding is always desirable.

SAVE

Everything has a reason, and if you wondered and wondered how in the name of harmony Mary May got her prominent situation in the window of the Old South Waffle shop, molding russet moons, you would only heed to step inside and order an order.

Then you would realize that everything and every one has a reason.

It seems as though nature, sorry when the job was over, sorry about Mary May's unlovable redness and the thick-limbed vacancy, created the waffle and wave the key to its soul into Mary May's keeping. It might have been worse: it might have been Algerian oyster stew—whereupon Mary May would never have met Victor Jones.

Victor couldn't help either the Victor or the Jones, but he often figured unhappily to himself — Victor did a lot of figuring—that parents ought to stop at one name. Anyway, Victor didn't care for oysters, so it was just as well that Mary May knew her waffles as well as she did.

Mary May had a few dreams—dreams not so very different from those of the lovely blond stenographer in the office building opposite. Admitted the first day Victor found the Old South shop he identified only the waffles. The second, a pair of plump pink hands that caused the waffles. The third, the honest stolidity of the face that bent above the red hands that executed the trick. After that, the constant shy grin of Mary May, who appreciated being appreciated.

"Like 'em?"

"Like? Say, would you call the moon 'cute'; or an orchid 'pretty'? Girl, you've been blessed by heaven. Funny how things happen. We all start out created equal—only we don't stay that way. Everybody with two hands, two feet, two eyes, two ears, one brain — and just look at all the different things that turn out in a few years——"

"You like 'em?" eagerly.

"Isn't it spelled all over me? Don't I ooze contentment? You're a wonder. As I was saying it's queer about the nature of things——"

"Come in tomorrow at this time and I'll have some browned extra in butter for you. You sure you like 'em?"

The courtship was long and ardent, and Mary May kept right on dreaming.

"Girl, did you ever see a whole field of buttercups in the sunshine? You're just like a buttercup—a big, capable buttercup. Sometimes I think you're more like a tall, graceful goldenrod bending in the wind. Again, you remind me of the wild yellow aster, the smiling sunflower, a laughing brown-eyed susan, a swaying daffodil waiting to be plucked."

Of course, Victor had his mind on the waffles hence the flow of his able tongue was abundant with waffley figures of speech. Mary May could never have been called either a daffodil or a buttercup—for a tomato is a tomato in any garden. But some words are sweeter than they are wise, and Victor was sincere enough.

"Mary May, I'm 35, but not too old for happy fancies about a rosy future. I've kept them to myself—you're such an innocent little girl, too sweet to be interested in an old fellow like I am." Mary May warmed like a fireless cooker. Urged by an attentive silence, Victor went ahead.

"You've figured in my plans a lot, Mary May. Would you like to hear about them?"

Would any woman?

"It all began way back months ago. I realized you deserve something better. You're too fine for the Old South, too good and capable. You're a goddess at the girdle. The minute I saw you I knew you were the one woman."

She might have said something about the suddeness of the occasion. She might even have emitted a little happy sigh. She might have blushed like a June rose. But she only reddened like the last beet of summer left drying alone.

Mary May, how would you like a little kitchen of your own—all your own—shining aluminum, pretty orange aprons, a window box with daffodils blooming all the time——"

"Gosh——"

"Just the two of us——"

"Ah——"

"It wouldn't be much to start. A good loop location——" softly.

"Wh——"

"Just a few tables, seating about forty—and you wouldn't have a thing to do all day long but make waffles."

"Ach," said Mary May. For Mary May had dreamed dreams, too. Only——Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 13 — Many years ago, when the storms of the war between the states had not as yet subsided, two young sons of a gallant confederate fighting man were so thrilled with martial ardor that they thought of little else.

They lived down in Tennessee, and when the oldest boy of the family was no more than 12 years of age he commanded a company of neighborhood boys and was an efficient captain and able drill master.

Today those same two boys are very important figures in Washington. Between them, they supervise the spending of something like $200,000,000 a year of Uncle Sam's money.

The Bystander has no data available as to who are the leading purchasers in the country, but he has little doubt the honor goes to these brothers, the Cheatham boys, respectively quartermaster general of the army and chief of the navy bureau of supplies and accounts.

Two Brothers

Maj. Gen. B. Frank Cheatham, who once was that boy captain of a youngster company in Tennessee, by a freak of chance now is junior to his brother and one-time lieutenant, now Rear Adm. Joseph Johnston Cheatham.

On the death of the father, responsibility for support of a family of brothers and sisters fell on Frank's shoulders.

His dreams of a military career, even with a West Point appointment within his grasp, had to be abandoned, or at least postponed, for the prosaic business of bread winning.

The Brother Joe, however, got an opportunity to enter the navy pay corps in 1894 and there he has been ever since, working his way to the top.

But soldierly Frank was to have his chance later. It came with the war with Spain.

His boyhood military ardor was unabated and he went out as a major of the First Tennessee volunteers to see active service in the Philippine insurrection and to win promotion to the rank of colonel of the federal volunteers who replaced the state troops enlisted only for the war with Spain.

And in 1901 Frank became a captain of regulars in the quartermaster corps he now heads.

His Chance

But he is primarily a fighting man. When the World war came he went to France as quartermaster of the First division, senior American unit overseas. Later he was successively corps quartermaster and inspector general of all quartermaster activities. Then his old experience in the line, in the combat units, drew him out of staff duty to command the 104th infantry, 26th division, in the Meuse-Argonne drive and to the end of the war.

Colonel Frank went back to his own job of quartermastering after the war, but with decorations on his breast both for combat work and efficiency in the supply services to mark him.

And when the time came to settle a fuss within the quartermaster corps in the selection of a new quartermaster general, naturally he was not overlooked.

Some Questions

Mr. Editor: Is it a matter purely of love on Mr. Higgins' part trying to keep the manager of the merchandising department of the gas and electric plant out of the poor house and shove me in?

Just where does George Gilman come in? Is he a city taxpayer, is he responsible for any part of the municipal gas and electric plant debts, is he reaping the benefits of municipal ownership by the city of Norwich of gas, electricity and water on a town tax basis? How does he stand in with the petty cash account or is it purely a matter of love? Also has Mr. Higgins got his eye on the same account that I am paying my part in taxes to help them put me out of business?

Former Norwich Leaders

(From the Norwich Bulletin, Aug. 29, 1882)

Charles Mallory

The sudden and peaceful death of Charles Mallory, Esq., of Mystic Bridge, removes another veteran, one of the oldest citizens. His age was eighty-seven. Mr. Mallory was about town in his usual health Friday, full of life and animation, greeting all his friends that he met with a pleasant word, and went to bed at night apparently as well as usual. On the next morning he was found to be lifeless, having apparently died early in the night without a struggle.

It is a remarkable coincidence that his excellent consort died in much the same way not quite a year ago, some time after they had celebrated their golden wedding. She had lain down for a nap before dinner. Her husband went to call her, but finding her pleasantly asleep, as he supposed, retired. Time elapsing, he went again but found she had quietly breathed her last.

The loss of his companion was a great blow, but he submissively bent like the reed before the storm and abided his time. Happy pair, now united on the other shore!

Mr. Mallory was for many years, from his early manhood we think, a member of the Congregational church, and one of the constituent members of the Mystic Bridge Congregational church, of which he has been a pillar and a supporter.

He was born in Waterford before that town was set off from New London. His father, Mr. David Mallory, lived, reared his family, and died on Mallory's hill, sometimes called Howard hill, on the Lyme turnpike about a mile west of New London. Uncle David had been a soldier of the revolution and was a worthy member of the First Baptist church of Waterford, then under the pastoral care of the Rev. Zadoc Darrow, and afterwards of the Rev. Francis Darrow. His faithful and well remembered attendance upon public worship, long after age overtook him, was a good example to posterity.

His son, Charles, early showed his industry and the germ of that enterprise that ever characterized his successful career. When a boy of twelve years he hired himself, with his father's approval, to a farmer on the Great Neck where, for more than one season, he took great pains to please and benefit his employers as well as earn more money for his father, who was in straitened circumstances.

At length, arriving at a proper age, he was apprenticed to his uncle, Nathan Beebe, a sail maker in New London. Here he finished his trade and finding no call for his services in the city he tied up a small bundle of clothes and a kit of tools and started across New London ferry.

At Mystic he found a little job, and did his work so well that other business came in. He hired a little loft and there found continuous employment. No bridge then crossed Mystic, but smacks were fitted out for fishing, some at home and some for southern ports, particularly Key West, then a hamlet, Charleston and the Havana. Soon coasting vessels began to be built, and the yard of Capt. Ed Packer became famous for its launches of fast sailing vessels of all classes.

An incident comes in, which illustrates the character of young Mallory and was often told by him with just pride, in his old age. When cold weather came on, that first fall after his arrival, he found that he must have a stove, not so much for comfort, for habitual industry does not mind temperature, but waxed thread will not work to the best advantage in a sail loft in freezing weather. So he looked about for a stove, but finding none at Mystic, he heard of one for sale at the Head of Mystic by Enoch Burrows, Esq., merchant and postmaster. Thither he went and bargained for the wheel iron stove and pipe, but he says:

"Mr. Burrows I have not the money to pay you down, but I would like to have the stove, if you will trust me."

The merchant, seeing he had come across lots from the lower villages, replies: "How do you expect to get this stove home if I let you have it?"

"Oh, sir, on my back," says the young man.

"You can take the stove," says Mr. Burrows. "A young man that can carry such a thing for three miles can be trusted. Take your own time."

So quick as he got fairly started in his business he returned to New London and took the girl of his choice, Miss Eliza Rogers, and they were united in marriage by the Rev. Abel McEwen, with whose church Mrs. Mallory was connected, and with which Mr. Mallory, we think, subsequently united. A better choice for a companion young Charles could not have made. Devoted, amiable, industrious, economical, intelligent, and very fair to look upon withal, entering into all his plans and yet never interfering, she was a model help-meet, and the mother of a numerous and highly respected posterity, many of whom now assemble to pay the last tribute of respect to one so worthy of their honor and esteem.

Mr. Mallory devoted his first spare money to paying up the mortgage on his father's house, and then sparingly invested in shipping; first in smacks, then in coasters and whale ships. The whaling business proved very lucrative, and he carried on the business as long as it was profitable and had the discernment to close up that class of business at the right time without the loss that other houses suffered.

The ship yard of Charles Mallory was another enterprise in which he became famous over the world, building many large ships and steamers, and himself with others founding a line of steamships to southern ports which still flourishes under the firm of C. H. Mallory and Co., pier No. 20, New York. Mr. Mallory was always conservative, and while acknowledging that it was about an even thing whether he kept his vessels insured by the underwriters or stood by his own insurer, he decided to keep insured and it probably saved him from the disaster and irrecoverable loss which ruined the equally fair prospects of several of his commercial contemporaries.

Mr. Mallory was a conservative whig and republican in politics, but no partisan, and averse to taking office but ever receiving the respect of both parties. He was a man that minded his own business, but if any young man sought his advice he was ever ready to give good counsel and was the means of helping many of Mystic's young and enterprising men to position, so long as it was mutually profitable.

He was the first president of the Mystic river bank, and afterwards the founder and president of the First National bank of Mystic Bridge which is located in Mallory's block, so-called; and he held this position at the time of his death.

His loyalty to the government during the war and his prompt but gratuitous tender of vessels to the war department in the first exigencies of the great struggle were ever remembered with gratitude by the Lincoln administration, and though no compensation was directly offered or received from Washington, there is no doubt but that it gave him and his steamers a certain precedence and added to his material wealth—a calculation he had never selfishly made, but which his fellow citizens regarded as a just recompense.

Mr. Mallory contracted his business to himself; and it is not known today whether it is true that he dies a millionaire, being, as has often been asserted, the wealthiest man in Stonington, and next to Capt. C. P. Williams, leaving the largest single estate which Stonington, that abounds in wealthy citizens, ever produced. It is immaterial. His life is a lesson of itself worth the study of the young, and has doubtless given a character and type to the generation of business men who have risen in Mystic, which contained not a dozen business houses on both sides of the river when he came, in 1816, if we have been rightly informed, and now it numbers in thousands.

We might mention the leading agency of Mr. Mallory in the establishment of the Mystic Bridge post office, and of the Mystic link to the Shore Line railroad, and other enterprises. One of his last acts was the gift of an eligible site for the new soldiers' monument, which, by the liberality of another member of his family, is to be erected upon the Mallory square opposite Congregational church. Mr. Mallory leaves five sons, viz: Charles Henry, of the firm of C. H. Mallory and Co., New York; David D., George W. and Frank of Mystic Bridge; and Benjamin. He lost an only daughter a few years since, Mrs. Annie Small, for whom he named one of his finest ships, and the loss of whom was a severe blow to the stricken parents. We shall greatly miss the genial face and pleasant greeting of our aged friend, to the last a vigorous and energetic-looking citizen.

Picturesque Portugese Proverbs

LISBON (AP)—Few nations have so many proverbs and popular sayings referring to facts of every nature as the Portugese.

Many of these adages, born of the people and continually used by them, show a certain shrewd understanding and often a philosophical strain which affords an insight to the national spirit in spite of the drawback of illiteracy and superstition.

There are proverbs about nearly all the months, referring to their chief characteristics, and nearly all are in rhyme.

Although the quaint wording cannot be reproduced, some of these sayings may be translated as follows:

"April brings a thousand showers," or "The days of May become horses," indicating that in May the dew makes the grass grow that feeds and fattens the horses. Of December the people say:

"Wherever the cold may be roving, it comes home at Christmas."

Some of the proverbs show an observant and sometimes cynical spirit, such as:

"Flies fatten on a weak dog," or "He who has no money has no attractions."

We also find sententious ones: "He who sleeps wins no victories" and "An idle youth, a hardworking or shameful old age." Attacking woman's vanity we have: "No mirror ever told a woman she is ugly."

The terse and quaint saying: "Thinking a donkey died," means that the donkey reflected so long that death overtook him before he came to a decision, and that those who dream and do not act achieve nothing.

There are fatalistic adages: "He who is born to be poor sees his gold turn into copper" or "What has to be is very wrong," inherited from the Moors of Moorish domination, and superstitious ones: "On a Tuesday neither marry thy daughter nor set thy loom nor start a ship for foreign lands."

Then very popular is "Woman who trusts in man's vows will reap a harvest of tears."

YOUR HEALTH

Sun Bath for Baby Increases Appetite, Induces Sleep, Improves General Condition

By Dr. William R. P. Emerson, Boston
From Gorgas Memorial Institute

The essentials of health for the baby are simple—namely, good food, abundant sleep, normal exercise, air and sunlight. Although the value of the first four of these essentials has been understood for some time, it is only recently that we have come to realize the importance of sunlight in the welfare of the infant and growing child.

Exposure of the skin to sunlight and air produces fundamental reactions that have an immediate effect on the whole system. The skin is the largest organ of the body. It has been called the mirror of the system. Its color and texture change with bodily health. It reacts to heat, to cold, to the light of the sun and to the coolness of the air. It contains the end organs of feeling, attached to it by millions of fine filaments that go to the brain and the central nervous system. Therefore exposure to the sun's rays should be regulated with exceeding care, in order that its stimulating effect be not overdone.

A sun bath properly given increases the appetite, induces sleep and improves the general condition. The texture of the skin is better, the tone of the muscles improved, and the baby's resistance to infection increased. If the food and other conditions are favorable, sunlight absolutely prevents rickets.

The sun bath may be given in a warm room with the sunlight coming through an open window, on a veranda or in the shelter of a garden or yard. The infant should be protected from too strong a draught, and the hands and feet should be kept warm. On cold days a hot water bottle or electric pad may be used. The head should be protected from the direct rays of the sun. In the heat of the summer, the bath should be given between seven and ten in the morning or between two and four in the afternoon. During the rest of the year, it may be given in the middle of the day.

It has been recommended that the child be put out-of-doors first in ordinary clothing, that is, without blankets or other covering, for three minutes, then for five minutes. Then remove one garment each day or every two days, being guided by the reaction of the child, until all clothing has been removed and the child is covered only by a sheet. Finally the nude body is exposed for thirty seconds front and back, the next day forty-five seconds, the third day one minute, and thereafter the exposures increased up to thirty minutes. The object of all this is to get the baby well tanned without sunburn.

This plan should require about two weeks for the child to be getting an exposure one-half an hour front and back. Babies with light skins can withstand the exposure only half the length of time of those with dark skins, and it is safer for such children to be given two or three sun baths daily of short duration rather than one long one. The length of exposure in any case must vary with the baby's tolerance to sunlight, temperature, wind, height of the sun and clearness of the atmosphere.

In the winter months some of the good effects of sunlight can be obtained through special glass that allows the penetration of the ultra violet rays. Windows of this glass can be arranged over a crib or box with one side open to allow a free circulation of air. Attractive portable sun bath cabins are now available at moderate cost. These can be put in the yard or on the roof and used for sun bath, a play house or sleeping out. They are especially useful in the winter months.

When the other essentials in the care of the infant are adequately provided for, the sun and air bath is of great value for the best health of the baby.

Stories That Recall Others

Duty

One head of the house is cranky about his food. He distressed his wife greatly by setting his cup of coffee in the platter of butter.

"What do you mean by doing a trick like that?" inquired the wife.

"I am only carrying out an injunction of humanity. It's the duty of the strong to support the weak?" replied the aggrieved husband.

Only a Dozen Bananas

Harry made a visit to his aunt in a neighboring town. In the night the aunt was aroused by a very sick boy. It was the night of his arrival.

Observing symptoms of an overloaded stomach, she said:

"Robert, did you buy any trash and eat it on the train when you came?"

"No, auntie, I didn't have a thing except a dozen bananas," replied the distressed lad.

ANTICIPATE SETTLEMENT IN CARLEVALE INSURANCE SUIT

Progress towards settlement of the suit of Joseph W. Carlevale, proprietor of the Norwich Barber Supply company, brought against three insurance companies, was made in the superior court here Thursday, it was understood, and when court comes in again next Tuesday with this case as the first business for the day it is anticipated that settlement of the suit can be announced.

It was reported that the settlement figure would be a little under $3,000. Carlevale sued for about $15,000 for the damage to his stock and fixtures at 54 Boswell avenue by a fire on April 20th, 1928.

No testimony was taken in the case Thursday but the morning was spent in conferences between the attorneys for Mr. Carlevale and for the insurance companies. Court came in at the regular time in the morning, but Judge Allyn L. Brown immediately declared a recess which lasted until about 2:30 at which time Judge Brown again took his place on the bench, the jury was called in and he stated to them that the status of the case was such that it did not seem feasible to go on with the trial at present. He then excused the jurors until next Tuesday morning and had court adjourned to this (Friday) morning for the short calendar session.

DECLARES JEWETT CITY COULD GIVE POINTS TO VIENNA IN ENTERPRISE

Dr. Boris J. Sohn of this city, who is spending some time in Vienna, Austria, in research work, has sent an interesting letter to Max Hanover, describing the life of the people in European cities. Mr. Hanover, in the belief that what he wrote may be of interest to the people of Norwich, asked The Bulletin to publish the letter. Dr. Sohn wrote in part as follows:

You have probably heard much about the wonders of European cities and of the advanced intelligence of their people, and that a number of Americans are visiting Europe for the educational lessons and the old world experiences which may be derived from a study of European life. It may be true that being the older section of the world, Europe made progress in certain branches of knowledge and industrial developments; however, in accordance with my humble observation, the life of the European people, with regards to their general initiative and state of happiness, is by far inferior to the happy standard of life enjoyed by the people of the United States.

I will attempt, in a concise resume to give you some of my observations with the assurance that it is unbiased first hand information. I am confident that you will find some of the habits and aspirations of the inhabitants, with whom I am making my temporary abode, strangely contrasting with the habits and aspirations of our American people; and, after reading the contents of my letter, you will agree with me that, for a place where one can enjoy a happy and contented life, I would rather live in the Rose of New England than in a big European city.

In endeavoring to compare the life of the common people in the small towns of the United States with those living in the metropolitan city of Vienna I find that the American initiative and enterprise predominates to an extent which is beyond comparison. For instance: take our small town of Jewett City; its people are self-confident, energetic, and, in a way, aggressive—they are particularly alive to the fact that they constitute a part of a great state and that they are citizens of the wealthiest democracy in the world.

Here in Vienna the terrible poverty of the majority of the people robs them of their self confidence, their zest and enterprise. The general business acumen in Vienna is a pigmy in comparison with the business acumen of the people in the United States, notwithstanding the fact that the city possesses a number of large business institutions. To elucidate the condition here which I desire to portray, I will take the average fruit store for an example: I visited several fruit stores located on main streets of Vienna, and found on display about two dozen apples, one dozen oranges, about one dozen bananas, and some other odds and ends—you may realize what may be the possibilities of earning a livelihood from such a stock, and the chances of providing for a family out of its proceeds? I visited several grocery stores with the object of observing the nature of the purchases of the patrons who visit them. I learned that the woman who purchases two eggs at one time is regarded as a fairly good customer, and it is the usual thing for a woman to purchase a glass of milk, bringing along her own container. Imagine butter being purchased in quantities equal in American money to less than one cent. Other items are sold in similar proportions—such being the trend of the retail business here.

Even the stores which have an outward prosperous appearance are, with very few exceptions, devoid of business. The closing hour of the stores ranges from 5 to 6 p. m. during week days and even on Saturday—and though the people are striving to put on an appearance of contentment, it is easily evident to an American observer that all is not well with the general public.

During the period of my stay here, I have not seen a pair of silk hose to be worn by the thousands of young and handsome women who go about their business in the large city; neither are they on display in the beautiful show windows seen here. The women display lots of color in their attire and make a serious effort to appear neat and stylish, but quality is conspicuously absent. The moving picture houses give an idea of the condition of the general public. With a population of over two million souls, Vienna possesses a very limited number of moving picture establishments for the amusement of the general population; besides they are invariably very small, cheaply constructed, and entirely devoid of the richness of decoration and the comfort that is universally prevalent in American moving picture houses. And in order to attend a moving picture here one has to provide an admission ticket several days in advance, just as if a New Yorker would provide for the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera House.

The restaurants also vividly demonstrate to an observer the lack of employment of the people, almost bordering upon the need of servitude. On entering a restaurant one is met by an army of servitors, consisting of chief waiters, sub chief waiters, regular waiters, sub waiters, and assistant sub waiters, who in humble toadyism greet the guest with cringing cordiality, evidently expecting a small gratuity of a few pennies for a nominal and needless service rendered. This is due to the fact that they are glad of the opportunity of serving without receiving any pay from the owner. The poverty of Austria is due to her having been deprived of her rich provinces, such as, Hungary, part of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania and other dependencies as a result of the World war. A vivid example of this is the hospital with which I am affiliated and which is the largest in the world consisting of a large number of imposing buildings spread over a large number of city blocks, and which is visited by an army of patients coming for treatment from the four corners of the earth. But with all its largeness and the wonderful service which it renders, there is not even a beginning of comparison between the wealth and bountifulness prevalent in the hospitals in the United States. Vienna is rich in human material, possessing a great number of professors and specialists in every branch of learning, but many of them wear torn shoes and the richness of the American profession and the abundance of hospital supplies which is the rule in the United States is something to which the doctors of Vienna look forth with almost forlorn hopelessness.

Of course for the few chosen rich (as riches is regarded here) there is a different life than that of the general public. It may be called the other side and the brighter side of the picture. Vienna is one of the outstanding cities in Europe and is conceded to be one of the show places of the world. During the period of its prosperity it attained a beauty which God and man contributed to create its grand magnificence. The architectural beauty of its buildings, the enticing grandeur of its numerous monuments, its stately museums of art, its grand municipal and administrative buildings, the vastness of its greatest hospitals in the world, and its institutions of higher learning are unsurpassed by any city in the world. Especially during the periods of spring and summer, when nature puts on her beautiful garment and her display of colors, the main streets are lined with magnificent trees, shrubs and beautiful flowers presenting to the eye of the visitor the enchanting beauty of a magic city. It is outstanding in contrast, and is especially manifest to those who are used to life amidst sun-obscuring skyscrapers. The untarnished cleanliness of the city is a great revelation to all visitors, irrespective of the country which they come from—the people of Vienna, notwithstanding their cruel poverty, are so thoroughly imbued with an admirable civic pride and love of the city that they spend their last cent to keep it spotlessly clean.

An outstanding feature of the life in Vienna is the numerous beer-gardens and coffee-houses in which the people of all classes gather for recreation purposes. Some of them are planted in open-air among beautiful trees, shrubs and flowers and are illuminated by most elaborate electrical displays. In these places of amusement the people, having plenty of time at their command and being of indolent temperament without any cause or reason for hurry, spend their leisure time in peaceful amusement. Some of the women, even those of humble means, bring their children and their light work, such as knitting and sewing, leisurely spending their time at a nominal cost. The rush, hustle and bustle of American life is entirely unknown here. The people of Vienna are apparently satisfied with their lot and are inclined towards joviality, despite the biting want in which they are living at present. Since the World war the Europeans seem to live only for today not caring what tomorrow may bring. As for the general public chasing in quest of money, the idea is out of the question, and the fortunate ones who acquire a competence are never envied by their neighbors. The attitude of the European towards money seems to be that money is a good commodity to possess in moderate quantity, and once one acquires a sufficiency enabling him to live in comfort he is contented to rest on his oars. The European does not consider it worth while to waste his health and energy in acquiring great wealth—he is rather bent upon enjoying life while he is in full possession of his health and strength. Of course as an American I can not subscribe to this philosophy of life and can't be reconciled to the indolent life of the European. It probably would take a wise arbiter to determine which mode of life is more conducive to the progress and the happiness of mankind.

In connection with the foregoing, I can't refrain from describing the attitude of mind of the European business-man in relation to business. You may form your own deduction from the following incident to which I was a witness: Dr. Miller of Schenectady, N. Y., who is here in interest of medical research, desired to purchase a coat for Mrs. Miller who is also stopping in Vienna. As all doctors who are here to improve their medical experience are working every minute of the day except the dinner hour, Dr. Miller endeavored to persuade the owner of a ladies' wearing apparel shop to meet him at 1 p. m.—the dinner period of the merchants of Vienna being from 12 noon to 2 p. m. The merchant, who probably was sitting idle the entire day for want of a customer to disturb him, told Dr. Miller, with most profuse courtesy, but with equal emphasis, that he could not afford to disturb his dinner hour rest period, and consequently Mrs. Miller had to do without a coat until the doctor could find time to accommodate himself to the leisure of the Vienna merchants. This is characteristic of the attitude of the European merchant towards business.

Vienna possesses great universities and excellent and well provided libraries which are constantly filled by students who are seriously in quest of information and research; you will always hear people who come here from all parts of the globe, discussing world questions with exciting enthusiasm. For the wealthier class here there are theatres and opera houses and other places of amusement which surpass in splendor anything seen in other countries, but the artists are poorly paid, and to some of them, though they don't possess a decent pair of shoes, nevertheless, art must be, and is maintained for art's sake. The show windows in the larger business establishments are arranged with such artistic and decorative display that they are a marvelous revelation to the visitor. It is hardly possible for an American to form a conception of the proficiency and artistic taste of the local window dresser. I believe that cannot be equalled by any window dressers anywhere in the world.

In conclusion, after my attempt to describe the underlying philosophy and habits of the people in Vienna, I fear that their general behavior and characteristics are somewhat mysterious and baffling to the mind of an American citizen.

Weisler sued on a claim for a commission on the sale of real estate. There was no session of the court Wednesday.

BINGHAM'S $1,650 VERDICT ALLOWED TO STAND

Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court has denied defendant's motion to set aside the verdict in the automobile damage suit of Nathan A. Bingham of this city against Fred S. Slate of New London. Bingham secured a verdict for $1,650 for injuries received on Nov. 18, 1928.

In denying the motion to set aside the verdict, Judge Brown says:

The sole reason urged by the defendant in support of his motion is that the court erred in using the following language in its charge to the jury: "As I understand it, the claim of the plaintiff is that either he was well into the intersection so that under this statute the defendant had no right of way, or if it is looked at from the other point of view, if he had not reached the intersection the statute would not have any application any way. I don't think the evidence, you, gentlemen, will find it is of any controlling importance but I speak of it in passing because of the reference in argument."

Upon the evidence it was not clear as to whether the collision of the motor vehicles of the plaintiff and defendant occurred within the intersection or at a point to the east thereof. Prior to the accident the defendant was proceeding easterly on Bank street and the plaintiff westerly and about to turn southerly into Lee avenue. The court quoted the statute providing that the driver approaching a highway intersection shall grant the right of way thereat to any vehicle approaching from his right, provided the vehicles are arriving at the intersection at approximately the same time. After defining the term "intersection," the court went on to emphasize the fact that unless the vehicles were approaching the intersection at approximately the same time, the statute would be of no controlling importance. Then was was used the language complained of.

Having reiterated what the effect of the statute would be if the vehicles were arriving at approximately the same time, these two sentences were interjected to direct the jury's attention to the other two possibilities, either of which the plaintiff claimed might have been found upon the evidence, so rendered the statute inapplicable, to wit: (1) that the plaintiff had gotten well into the intersection before the defendant had reached it, or (2) that he had not entered it at all and the defendant had proceeded past it before the collision occurred.

As frequently happens these suggestions, with relation to the possible situations relative to the application of the statute, stated extemporaneously during the progress of the charge, were doubtless not so clear and concise as they could have been made with more time and opportunity for revision, but when read in the light of what had preceded, they are not such as to warrant the court in setting aside the verdict because of the error in the charge.

The verdict was manifestly a just one. The defendant's liability as the case was tried was perfectly clear, the evidence disclosing that as he proceeded with a clear view down this steep hill toward the car of the plaintiff, at a speed of between 35 and 50 miles an hour, without any justification he crashed into the plaintiff's slowly moving car at a point where the concrete roadway was over 40 feet wide and unobstructed. Under such circumstances something beyond an inept reference to the plaintiff's claims in argument should appear in the charge to warrant setting aside the verdict rendered.

The defendant's motion is denied.

APPOINTS BUNDLE DAY FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

Next Monday is announced as Bundle day by Miss Elizabeth Huntington, chairman of the Norwich committee of Near East Relief. On that day and the following every Norwich family is requested to tie up all the clothing that can be spared and send to one of the school buildings of the city. It will be collected on Wednesday, June 19, under the supervision of Near East Relief, Miss Katherine Reynolds, state director.

"Clothing is as necessary in Armenia, Syria, Palestine and Greece as food and money," says Miss Huntington. "Because of several centuries of severe oppression and persecution these countries still suffer deep poverty, and it is a real privilege to be able to help them. Recently freed, they will return slowly to a more prosperous condition, but they cannot obtain self-support at once. We trust our citizens will make as liberal gifts of clothing as Hartford, Meriden, New Haven, Bridgeport, Norwalk and other Connecticut cities recently have done.

"This effort is the close of public appeals to be made by Near East Relief in our city. Its campaign closes June 30 and we are endeavoring by then to obtain the cash, pledges and supplies to complete the work overseas. This will take approximately two years. Since these gifts of clothing make it necessary to buy clothes overseas our city is credited at the rate of $.30 for every pound contributed. The quota suggested when the final campaign began, a year ago in January, was $5000. Since that time $3,828. has been raised."

The efforts of this charity since January of this year have been centered on orphan children. Its income has made it possible to do almost nothing for refugees although the needs of the latter are severe. If enough clothing is given it will be able to help the refugees in this way.

TEMPORARY INJUNCTION IN ALIENATION-CONSPIRACY SUIT

A temporary injunction has been issued by Judge Allyn L. Brown in a suit of an unusual character to come before the superior court in which Wojciech Malek of Jewett City alleges that Joseph Ruszenas of Griswold has alienated the affections of Mrs. Malek and that members of the Ruszenas family have brought about fictitious suits and assigned mortgages fraudulently to block Malek from getting any damages in legal proceedings.

Malek alleges that in 1925 the affections of his wife Barbara were alienated by Joseph Ruszenas and he asks $12,000 damages in a suit brought against Joseph and Victoria Ruszenas, husband and wife, and Casimir Ruszenas, sometimes known as Charles Ruszenas. The last named is brought into the suit because it is claimed he joined the alleged conspiracy with his father, Joseph Ruszenas, in bringing an alleged fictitious suit against his father for $15,000 so as to prevent Malek from making a first attachment. DAWSON REACHES QUARTER FINALS IN BRITISH AMATEUR TOURNEY

By FRANK H. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

SANDWICH, Eng., June 13—(AP)—John Dawson, smiling young American, tonight still had his chance to win the British amateur championship crown, which only W. J. Travis and Jesse Sweetser have taken away from Britain.

Dawson today defeated Edward Kyle and S. L. McKinlay and is among the select eight remaining for the play in the quarter finals tomorrow morning.

England, in the person of A. J. Evans, London barrister and Kent Country cricket star, will attempt to stop Dawson's rush toward the final. Should Evans fail either a Scottish carpenter named John Smith or the titled Michael Scott will oppose the Chicago youth in a semi-final tomorrow afternoon. If the American can stage another victorious day he probably will find his opponent in the finals, the giant Cyril Tolley, biggest and one of the best of British golfers.

Bobby Baugh, Birmingham boy, who captains the Oxford golf team, fell before Tolley today, leaving Dawson the only American survivor. Dawson, however, is one of the worthiest representatives of American golf to visit Great Britain in recent years.

St. George's galleries like his golfing style and his friendly, modest manner on the links. Experts who have been comparing him to Bobby Jones tonight are justifying their judgment by citing how he has rallied in every match after a slow start. The visitor seems to find difficulty in getting started over the tricky outward journey but masters all his problems and with a fine match winning mind and great powers of recovery, sticks and wins convincingly.

Not the least of Dawson's difficulties today was a gale sweeping toward the channel. It was golf under normal British seaside conditions but there was a warm sun with the wind. Accuracy with woods was made difficult by the wind and putting problems ruined many a hope.

Dawson's victim in the morning is a Scotsman but he has been in the Malay states and after the match confessed that residence in the tropics caused him to lose the art he learned as a boy of hitting the ball through a gale.

After shipping Kyle back east of Suez, Dawson met McKinlay from the west coast of Scotland where wind is as much a part of golf as balls, but with a three hole lead McKinlay could not hold his advantage on the long homeward holes.

The play proceeded with the usual number of upsets, the most striking today being the elimination of Philip Perkins, the champion. The title holder was put out by Andrew McNair, who a few hours later was trounced by Evans. Joshua Crane, the Boston veteran, after surviving the native challenges lost to young Baugh and Baugh in turn lost after a great strife with Tolley. All the famous native stars, with the exception of Tolley, have been eliminated.

The results of the fifth round: Rex Hartley defeated Robert Harris, two and one; Edward Tipple, 19 year old London youth, won from T. J. Taylor, Yorkshire star, four and three; Cyril Tolley defeated Robert H. Baugh, Jr., three and two; Major Keith Thorburn defeated Reginald Strake, one up; John Dawson won from S. L. McKinlay, two and one; A. J. Evans defeated Andrew McNair, six and four; John Smith won from William Trulloch, four and three; Hon. Michael Scott, won from R. B. Baylies, two and one.

In the play tomorrow morning Hartley will play Tipple, Tolley meets Thorburn, Dawson plays Evans and Smith meets Scott.

FIRESTONE TEAM COMES HERE WITH GOOD RECORD

Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds, the Velvetmen meet the fast Firestone A. C. of New Bedford. This club comes here with a fine record having won ten straight games against the fastest semi-pro clubs in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and should be able to give the locals plenty of competition before the game is over. Manager Kenyon will send in Blackburn, a speed ball artist, to toe the slab against the Velvetmen who made a great record for himself in the past seasons twirling in the fast Blackstone Valley league and also in the past season getting a tryout in the Eastern league.

Manager Eriback, of the Velvetmen, realizing that he is up against a tough proposition, will use "Rus" Fisher on the mound with either Murphy or Eccleston on the receiving end. Fisher, being one of the best twirlers in eastern Connecticut, is a big fellow with an exceptionally fast ball and plenty of stuff. He will be given a good test against the visiting aggregation on Sunday.

Both complete lineups will appear in Saturday's paper.

PIE TRAYNOR'S BROTHER SENT TO PRISON FOR ROBBERY

NEW YORK, June 13—(AP)—Arthur Traynor, 28, semi-professional baseball player and brother of Harold (Pie) Traynor, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, today was sentenced to seven and a half to 15 years in prison for attempted robbery.

Traynor was arrested in a downtown office building on May 22, after he had attempted to rob Thomas Lenz, jeweler, in his offices on the 15th floor of the building. An alarm shouted by Lenz, who had been struck with a blackjack, resulted in the locking of the exits of the building and Traynor was trapped in the lobby.

Traynor was indicted for attempted robbery in the first degree and attempted grand larceny in the first degree. Five to ten years of the sentence was imposed under the Baumes law for using a dangerous weapon in the commission of a crime.

His only previous offense, police said, was trespassing for which he was fined $5 in Somerville, Mass., where his family lived. Traynor has played baseball with several southern teams.

ELKS NOSE OUT DUWELLS IN CLOSE GAME, 8 TO 7

Hollyhock Island was the scene of another good ball game in the Junior Twilight league, Thursday evening when the Elks nosed out the Duwells by an 8 to 7 score.

After leading throughout the greater part of the game, and holding a three run lead over the Elks when the latter took their last turn at bat, the Duwells blew up completely in the seventh and final frame and the Bills walked off with the game by counting four runs.

It was a tough game for the East Siders to lose, but it was a tougher blow to Sports Hamill, who twirled for the losers. Sherry pitched a nice game for both nine strong Elks team to five hits while no less than eight went out via the strikeout route. Errors at critical times, however accounted for several runs, especially in the last frame, when the Elks scored the four necessary runs to win on two scratch hits.

Geer started in the box for the Elks and was hit rather freely. He was relieved by Fuller in the fourth inning and from that time on the Duwells could do little on the offensive at least. Fuller allowed but one hit during his stay in the box and fanned six men in less than four innings.

The Duwells scored once in the first when Dickerman got on by way of an error by Buckley, took second on an infield out and scored on Couture's double to right.

The Elks tied matters in their half of the same stanza on a couple of walks, a passed ball and a long sacrifice fly by Geer.

In the second, the East Siders counted once more on hits by Rizzoto and Kos, the latter being a long triple to left. The Elks took the lead in their half of the second counting twice on a triple by Matthews and a single by McGuinness.

In the third, the Duwells added three more and in the next frame brought their total to 7 by tallying twice. With the exception of the last half of the fourth, when the Elks counted one run, there was no more further scoring until the last half of the seventh when the Elks staged their rally. Bamber led off in this inning with an ordinary single to left field, but when Rizzoto played the ball poorly and let it get away from him, Bamber completed the circuit. McGuinness struck out, Fuller hit to third and when Burrelle fumbled the runner was safe. Bulkley rolled a slow grounder to Hamill, and when the latter threw wild to first, Fuller took third and Buckley second. Hamill then fanned Fitzgerald for the second out and things looked brighter for the Duwells. Geer, however, hit to short and when Couture threw wild to first, both Fuller and Buckley scored and Geer took second. Whitmarsh hit another grounder to short, the Duwell shortstop fumbled again and Geer rode home with the winning run.

VANCE PITCHES NICE GAME FOR DODGERS

CINCINNATI, June 13—(AP)—Dizzy Vance was his old self today as he made his first start since May 16, and Brooklyn shaded the Reds by 2 to 1 in the opening game of the series. Vance fanned only one man, but gave just five hits and should have had a shut out. Cincinnati scored in the first inning on two singles with Bancroft's wild throw attached to one of them.

Sissie Says

What thrill is there in this horseback riding that the younger set is falling for now?

Ask one of them what kick he or she gets out of it and their alibi is either that they are doing it to get thin or doing it to get fat.

The only one that I can see that's getting thin is the poor horse. And I've yet to see one riding along the road that did not look like they was sitting on a good healthy thistle.

There's a girl up our way what makes the scales groan every time she steps on 'em. Why she's so stout she has to weigh one side of her at a time and then strike an average.

She's taken up horse back riding and it's my fervent prayer that the horse holds out until the summer's over. When you see her on a horse you'd think she was riding between the humps on a camel, the horse sags so in the middle.

And as that horse jogs along she just bounces up and down and every time she comes down that old horse just bends in the middle 'til his stomach almost scrapes the road. And she calls it sport.

But as for reducing that's out as far as she's concerned. Since she started riding them horses she's lost just three ounces. Believe it or not, it's the truth. She says she likes it but I'll bet it's the same as when women used to wear corsets, it hurt but it was the style.

I remember once when I was up in Maine six or seven years ago I was misled into believing that horse back riding was great sport. It was—for those that was on the ground looking on, but not for me.

That horse and I were the best of friends but we couldn't stay together to save my soul. Every time that animal would start to run I'd go up in the air and when I come down I'd meet the horse coming up. Then I'd start out for an altitude record.

All that stopped me and the horse parting company was them things you put your feet in. Syrups I think you call 'em. Anyway they made me stick to the horse.

And after I'd rid a mile or two I didn't care whether I broke my fool neck or not. And for three days I ate my meals off the buffet and slept on my stomach in a feathered bed. If I had a wrestling match with a steamroller I couldn't have been any more jumbed up.

Yet they say horse-back riding is beneficial to you. The only ones that get any benefit out of it as far as I can see is them that rent the horses.

You watch these embryo Tom Mix's and Buffalo Bills next time you see them and see if they look as though they were enjoying their ride.

It's a fad that's all.

TAFTVILLE A. C. TAKES CLOSE GAME FROM JEWETT CITY STARS

The newly organized Taftville A. C. ball club took a close decision from the Jewett City All Stars 9 to 8, in the opening game of the twilight season at the Providence street grounds last evening. Although Jewett City outhit the Taftville club they were unable to overcome the large lead piled up by Taftville in the early innings. The game was a free-hitting affair with the Taftville club scoring five runs in the first inning after Jewett City had counted three. The visitors rallied in the sixth inning but their efforts fell short by a single run. Lefty Dugas was the hitting star with four singles in four times at bat. The score:

TWO MORE CREWS ARRIVE AT RED TOP

RED TOP, June 13.—(AP)—The Harvard training camp was augmented tonight with the arrival of the freshman and combination crews from Cambridge. Little time was lost by the new Crimson arrivals to go for a practice spin over the course.

The varsity restrained from any hard drill and were sent to the three-mile mark where racing starts were tried. The eight rowed back at a slow beat. The junior varsity, which went out on the water with the combination crew, was given the same workout.

Marcus Bell, a waiter, took the position of R. I. McKesson, in the junior varsity boat for today's workouts. McKesson was suffering from a slight attack of indigestion but is expected to be ready to row tomorrow.

The freshman and combination members will be quartered in the old railroad building near the boathouse and will eat their meals with the other oarsmen.

CUBS AND PHILLIES PLAY FIVE-INNING TIE GAME

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, June 13—(AP)—Chicago and Philadelphia today battled for five scoreless innings before rain interfered and forced postponement of the contest.

It was a pitchers' battle between Charley Root and Claude Willoughby, Root allowing four hits and Willoughby three.

Chicago made three double plays to check the Phillies each time they threatened. Cubs filled the bases in the first but none scored.

PIRATES SLAM OUT WIN OVER GIANTS

PITTSBURGH, June 13—(AP)—Hard hitting by Sheely, Grantham, Traynor and Lloyd Waner enabled the Pirates to come from behind and defeat the Giants 11 to 7 here today after spotting the visitors six runs in the first two innings. The Giants scored five times in the second when Melvin Ott capped a rally with his thirteenth home run with two on, but the Pirates came back with an equal number in their own half. Walker had permitted one run and had filled the bases when Carl Mays relieved him. Hemsley treated Mays with a triple and the Buccaneers were back in the game.

Hill got credit for the victory which Swetonic saved, and the loss was charged to Genewich.

YALE JUNIOR VARSITY SHOWS WAY TO BIG CREW

GALES FERRY, June 13.—(AP)—Yale's junior varsity eight had something on the first boat in the late day workouts down stream, gaining a length during two separate runs at low stroke. Coach Ed Leader halted the crews several times and after each new start the "jayvee" shell pressed to the front. The impressive showing of the junior varsity was made with a stroke one half a beat slower than the varsity.

The other two shells followed the varsity and junior varsity for a mile and a half but found the water too rough and turned back. Coaches Spuhn and Grant gave the two boats two two-minute runs, the freshmen gaining three quarters of a length each time. Racing starts were used and the stroke did not drop below 34 to the minute.

As the crews reached the dock, Coach Spuhn sent the freshmen to the boathouse but the combination eight continued upstream for over a mile and back.

Among the spectators who arrived today, were R. C. Durant, who rowed on the varsity crew last year; Harold F. Woodcock, general manager of Yale athletics, and George H. Nettleton, Yale, '96, chairman of the athletic board of control.

ROBERTSON TEAM TIES FOR FIRST IN MONTVILLE LEAGUE

The Robertson Paper Box team of the Montville Industrial Twilight league went into a tie for first place by defeating the Eastern Connecticut Power company team 8 to 7 last night on the Shelton field in Uncasville in one of the most subborn battles ever waged on that diamond.

Barring the fifth inning in which he was touched up for four clean cut hits, including two doubles, Johnson pitched a winning brand of ball, while Moraski was generally "there or thereabouts" in the pinches. In the closing inning the Electrical Men had the tying run on base, but it was left there. Some people might call this good pitching, while others might call it weak hitting—it was one or the other. Take your choice. The score:

Jenny Wren is Triumphant

Those who always have their way
Also have regrets some day.
—Old Mother Nature.

When Mrs. Brown had gone into the house, Mr. Wren had something to say. He had quite a lot to say. "Now you see," he began, "what happens from building in such a silly place as this. If we had built over in one of those perfectly good houses, we wouldn't have been bothered. I felt it in my bones that something would happen here. Half our work has been undone and there is no knowing when our whole nest will be pulled out. It is no place for a nest, and I knew it in the beginning."

"Tut, tut, tut, tut!" scolded Jenny Wren. "You know too much. Didn't we drive her away? We can always drive her away. I have set my heart on a nest here and here it is going to be!"

"All right, my dear, have your way. But if something happens, don't say I didn't warn you," retorted Mr. Wren. "I tell you again, it is no place for a nest."

Mrs. Wren flirted her tail and didn't say a word. She flew out of the shed and in a jiffy was back with a little stick which she took into the clothespin bag. Mr. Wren sat around for a few minutes and sulked. Then he, too, went to work, and soon was working quite as hard as was Jenny.

Meanwhile Mother Brown had told Farmer Brown's Boy about the queer place Jenny Wren had chosen for her nest. "I don't like to pull that nest out," said she, "but how under the sun am I going to get my clothespins? I don't need them today, but I shall need them on washday. I can't hang clothes out without clothespins."

"We'll buy some new ones," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I'm going to the village this afternoon and I'll get some new clothespins. They don't cost much and it is worth more than they will cost to haave a pair of Wrens nesting in such a queer place. I'm going out to see them for myself."

So Farmer Brown's Boy went out to the shed and no sooner had he stepped inside than he received such a scolding as he had never had before in all his life. It made him laugh to hear those two litle tongues go. The scolding began before he was near the clothespin bag and as he walked up to it and peeped inside, it seemed as if Jenny and Mr. Wren had quite lost their heads with excitement. Farmer Brown's Boy remained only long enough to peep in. As soon as he had disappeared in the house Mr. Wren began again.

"You see," said he, "it's just as I thought it would be. We'll never have any peace here. Those two-legged creatures will be coming and going all the time, if they do not do worse. It won't surprise me to come home some day and find the nest gone. You must have been crazy when you decided to build here."

Jenny Wren pretended not to hear. She went right on hunting for nesting material and left Mr. Wren to talk to himself. Finally the nest was finished. In due time there were six eggs in it. Mother Brown, Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy came and went without ever offering to touch the nest. Jenny Wren and Mr. Wren got used to them. They didn't even scold when Farmer Brown's Boy would once in a while peep in to see those eggs.

"I told you!" cried Jenny Wren triumphantly. "I told you that this place would be all right."

"The babies haven't arrived yet. Wait till they come. That cat will get them as surely as the sun rises in the morning," grumbled Mr. Wren.

"You can borrow all the trouble you want to, but don't bring it home," snapped Jenny, and went into the clothespin bag to sit on the eggs.

Let's try it again with fresh strands — same length. Tension is exerted, then relaxed. SUPERTWIST springs back taut like a rubber band. The other cord sags—no elasticity — it's dead.

PUTNAM

TRIO OF YOUTHS PLEAD GUILTY; TWO BOUND OVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 13—The first steps taken by the state against the three youths, one a murderer, was taken by the city court of Putnam, late this afternoon in a special session when Jerry Nelson, 17, and Wendell Hardy, 18, were bound over to the superior court for trial. Both pleaded guilty to assault, theft of money and theft of a Ford car, from Donald Cockburn of Melrose. Frank Rockas, 13 year old murderer, was returned to the state industrial school in Manchester, N. H.

The trio was brought to Putnam in custody of Sergt. George L. Gardner and Officers John T. Murphy and Donald E. Geddes of the state police from Danbury this afternoon. They were immediately brought before Judge M. H. Geissler in the city court. Judge Geissler appointed Officer Joseph G. Page as special probation officer and placed the defendants in his care. All entered pleas of guilty through the police office. Prosecuting Attorney Johnson told the court of the history of the boys, producing their criminal records which started at an early age. Because of his extreme youth Rockas was turned over to the New Hampshire authorities to be returned to the school at Manchester.

The contents of a letter found on Nelson by state officers in Ridgefield last night and addressed to Captain of Police William J. Jarvis were disclosed tonight. In part the letter read: "We left him (Cockburn) sitting on an ant nile with his hands and feet about the tree. He was tied up. He got a lucky break and we are sorry we did not kill him now for he was responsible for us getting caught."

Apparently neither of the trio was aware that Cockburn had released himself or that police knew of his whereabouts, for the letter addressed to Capt. Jarvis was written after the boys had been arrested in Danbury.

State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford said tonight he will make arrangements for the arraignment of Hardy and Nelson in superior court within a few days. They are to be brought to trial on a bench warrant.

FEDERAL OFFICERS REMOVE CONFISCATED LIQUOR AND CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 12—Officer Stanton Briggs in charge of the federal prohibition forces in this district was in Putnam tonight where he took into custody 50 gallons of alcohol seized by the local police in a rum chase last Friday evening. The large cargo of contraband was removed to the cell room of the local police station and taken to Willimantic under federal police protection. Capt. W. J. Jarvis also turned over to the federal authorities a five-passenger Chrysler sedan seized by the police when the driver of the transport car abandoned his vehicle on Canal street and escaped. Capt. Jarvis said tonight that a search for the driver of the transport car is drawing to a close and that his arrest is expected soon. His name was given as George Savard, Providence. The case will no longer be a matter of local jurisdiction and Savard, if arrested, will be turned over to the federal authorities under a recently enacted Jones law.

John B. Byrne of Sewart street, Putnam, former state bank commissioner and present vice president of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company of Hartford, has been elected vice president of the Connecticut chamber of commerce it was learned today. The appointment of Mr. Byrne to this post in Connecticut's commercial world was announced at a banquet of the chamber held Tuesday in Hartford.

Miss Gladys Stratton of 96 Farrows street, while sitting in the waiting room of the depot this morning was fleeced of her pocketbook containing a sum of money and other valuables, the theft it was said was the work of a pick pocket. The occurrence was called to the attention of Putnam police and with the cooperation of local railroad officials alarms were dispatched to Boston advising police to be on the lookout for a man whose description was given. Later Miss Stratton reported to the railroad officials that the supposed amount of money contained in the satchel had fortunately been left at home and that only a small amount was obtained by the snatcher. With this information William E. Sault, assistant superintendent of the New Haven division dismissed the complaint.

A crowd of several hundred people congregated on the campus of Pomfret school tonight to witness the annual display of fireworks. Many beautiful set pieces when touched off illuminated the countryside for miles around and the bursting bombs were heard in Putnam—a distance of six miles.

"Rinso makes washday easy" says Mrs. E. M. Hanks of Norwich

"Rinso makes such an easy thing of washday. All I do is soak the clothes in those rich, lasting Rinso suds. I don't have to scrub or boil a thing, they're so beautifully white and sweet.

"Rinso is fine for dishes [illegible] cleaning, too."

MRS. E. M. HANKS, Hamilton & Stanton Aves., Norwich, Conn.

Extra-white clothes—try it!

Not only does Rinso save scrubbing and boiling . . . it gets clothes so much whiter you'll be amazed. Safely, too—you can trust your finest cottons and linens to Rinso's rich suds.

One cupful of this famous granulated soap gives more suds, does more washing, than two cupfuls of lightweight, puffed-up soaps—it's so compact. The makers of 36 leading washers recommend it. Get the BIG package.

DANIELSON

CLASS OF 47 GRADUATED AT KILLINGLY HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 13.— With the usual formal and impressive circumstance another senior class of Killingly high school was graduated today, 47 young men and women receiving their diplomas and with them the inspiration to carry on. Capacity audiences, in keeping with tradition, attended the class day exercises this afternoon and the graduation exercises this evening, in the high school auditorium. Gold and green, the class colors, were predominant in the pretty decorations of the stage, flowers and ferns being effectively arranged. The class motto—Virtuti Vincimus — We Conquer By Strength—had a prominent place in the stage arrangement.

The class day audience was largely composed of relatives and friends of the graduates, admission being only by invitation. These exercises opened at 3 o'clock with music by the school orchestra followed by a prayer by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord. I Love a Little Cottage, a musical number, by Misses Beatrice Beckett, Alice Vachon, Esther Byars and Margaret Brown was followed by the address of welcome, delivered by Thomas U. Day, president of the class. An honor essay, Scientific Reveries, was read by Miss Frances C. Swainson. Preceding another honor essay, Verse of Today, by Miss Mildred B. Pierce, a saxophone duet, Crown and Crown, was played by Mr. Day and Robert Grenon. T. Emmett Clarke gave the class history, Miss Mary T. Haveles the class prophecy, Miss Gertrude C. Reynolds the class will. The last essay of the program was that on The Independence of Modern Youth, by Russell E. Danielson. A solo, Roses, was sung by Miss Beatrice Beckett. A feature of the exercises was the singing by the graduates of their class song, written by Miss Alice E. Olsson. The class gift to the school, presented by Robert Grenon, was a divan, two chairs and two rugs, for stage furnishings. The gift was accepted for the school by Henry Ricewasser. The exercises closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and benediction.

The graduation exercises, open to the public, were at 8 o'clock. The address on the subject Progressive Conquest was delivered by Prof. Arthur Rudman of Bay Path Institute, Springfield. The exercises opened with prayer by Rev. William Swainson of Dayville and included in addition to the address a violin solo, Romance, played by Gerard Gorman, and a vocal solo, Who is Sylvia? by Miss Alice Vachon. The school orchestra played during the evening, featuring one number. The Trumpeter, with Milton Phelan as solo trumpeter.

Even members of the graduating class were without an inkling as to which one of them was to be honored when Miss Emma F. Pilling stepped forward to make the second annual award of $50 from the Killingly Woman's Club Scholarship fund. This year the money and the honor went to Miss Susan Della LeGendre, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gallup. Miss LeGendre, a graduate in the classical course, was selected because of the excellence of her scholarship and promise of continued achievement. She is to enter the Wheelock school in Boston in the fall.

In making the presentation Miss Pilling explained the Killingly Woman's club's aim in creating this fund, and the hope the club has for it in the future. The fund now amounts to between $1100 and $1200. If it can be increased, the annual gift to some graduate of Killingly high school will be increased to $100, with further increases as the fund enlarges. The hope is that this fund may have reached or passed the $2,000 mark by June of next year, and some day be not less than $5000.

The diplomas were presented by Supt. William E. Parker of Killingly's schools, the exercises closing with the singing of the class song, America, and with benediction.

IDEAS FOR THE DYE-WISE

PRIZE LETTER FROM MIAMI, FLA.

Dyed 10 Garments —Spent 65 Cents

"I decided to try Sunset Dyes and Dytints. Having a faded blue crepe kimona, began on that with Bright Blue Sunset. It came out beautiful, bright, clear blue.

"With a camel's hair paint brush I renewed the blue flowers on my summer hat. I purchased one cake of Bright Blue Sunset, one cake of Heliotrope Sunset, one package Peach Dytint, one Blue Dytint for silk only. A discolored white Crepe Romaine dress was dipped into Peach Dytint. A rich peach color was obtained. Then a wash satin night gown and a pair of scanties went into the same bath and a beautiful color resulted.

"I tinted a white crepe de chine trimmed with white lace using Blue Dytint for silk only. The result was lovely. I put in a dotted swiss dress, faded blue dots on white; this weak bath just brought back their original blue. I dyed my faded blue georgette, using Blue Sunset with Heliotrope. This dress looks better than when new. I boiled a faded Swiss dress in soap solution to extract the original colors and tied knots in it. I dyed it with Bright Blue Sunset. The blue with white is very effective. I dyed a figured Crepe de Chine Heliotrope with a Blue cast.

"For sixty-five cents I have dyed one kimona, one night gown, one pair of scanties, six dresses, one hat."—Katharine G. Summerson, Miami, Fla.

For fast dyeing use Sunset Soap Dye—15 cents a cake. For beautiful tinting use Dytint, wonderful new tint, in big box, 10c.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS OPENING OF E. C. M. EXHIBIT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 13.—A capacity crowd at the opening of the third biennial textile exhibit and style show of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at the state armory tonight attested its delight at the beauty of the fabrics so interestingly displayed and its interest in the machines and mechanical appliances that have such an important part in textile manufacturing. The opening of the exhibit was preceded by a parade of military organizations stationed at the armory and by the headquarters company of Putnam.

Grouped along the westerly side of the drill shed are the displays of the Ponemah company of Taftville, showing solsette; of the Wauregan mills, showing shirtings, dress and rayon underwear materials, and the Quinebaug company showing rayon, shirtings and other fine cotton lines. Powdrell and Alexander, a local concern and largest manufacturers of curtains in the country have one of the very fine displays of the show, exhibiting a variety of curtains and curtain material. The Assawaga company of Dayville has a showing of a fine line of woolen goods, including overcoating and cloaking. A novelty is the Wauregan Milk bar display, with its windmill in operation, on the orchestra platform in the northwest corner of the drill shed. Cold milk dispensed there went big with the crowd this hot night. The Draper Mfg. company, the Stafford Loom company of Readeville, Mass., and the Crompton and Knowles Loom Works of Worcester all have new model automatic looms running and weaving cloth. An interesting exhibit is that of The Prairie Window Ventilator company of Providence.

Other exhibits are by the Shambow Shuttle company of Woonsocket, the Durant Mfg. company of Providence, manufacturers of productimeters; the Whitney Mfg. company of Hartford woolens; the Totokett Mfg. company of Occum, dress materials in cotton that are very new and very handsome; LaBelle and Page, Danielson, building materials; J. B. Ford Sales company, Boston; the Eastern Connecticut Power company, Danielson division, power meters; Allen and Allen, Providence, dye stuffs; the Ashland Cotton company, Jewett City, with an unrivaled display of voile, crepe and other rayon products. Two great butterflys, done in voile and crepe, grace the background of this top notch display. A loom of this section is turning out rayon material.

The State Trade school, Putnam, has a showing of sections of brick work and other things to show what is being done in the electrical, home economics and other departments of the school. The Central Worsted company has a display of its famous worsteds. The Whitin Machine company has an ultra modern spinning machine in operation. Other displays are by the Jacobs Mfg. company, Danielson manufacturers of mill supplies, and famous wherever textiles are made; C. S. Mersick company, New Haven, gears; Veeder-Root company, Hartford, counters for textile machinery; U. S. Ring Traveler company, Providence; Putnam Top Roll Covering company; New York and New Jersey Lubricant company; E. H. Keach company, Danielson, electric refrigeration. Theis Dyeing and Processing company, Central Falls.

The local chamber of commerce has quarters off the main floor, as has the Service battery for dispensing ice cream.

The drill shed is very prettily decorated in green and white. The designs are numerous and attractive. The entire decorative scheme was designed and executed by Ralph M. Shoales of Danielson and it adds greatly to the fine effect of the entire exhibit.

Hector Gosselin, resident here, is a patient with a broken leg at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam and Miss Bertha Caswell has a badly crushed foot as a result of an accident at Attawaugan last night. A consequence is that Arthur Edson of North Scituate, R. I., will appear in the town court Friday to answer to a charge that he failed to grant the right of way. Gosselin and Miss Caswell were riding tandem on a motorcycle, trailing the Edson Ford just before the accident occurred. Gosselin started to drive by and when almost abreast Edson swung his car into the driveway at the Randolph Joslin place, causing a crash. State Officer Royal Scranton, who investigated the accident, ordered Edson to appear in court.

State officers were sent from here last night to a point on the North Woodstock-Dudley state highway to investigate an accident in which Richard Converse of Grosvenordale claimed his car was forced off the narrow and winding state highway by a big passenger bus. Converse claimed he had to leave the road to escape being struck by the bus, and when he did so his car crashed into a tree. Converse was uninjured, but his car considerably damaged.

Mrs. Sarah Noland of Bridgeport was a visitor here today with relatives and to attend the graduation exercises.

Mrs. Sarah Paine of Red Bank, N. J., came here to attend the graduation of the senior class of Killingly high school today, her granddaughter, Miss Ruth Remington Shippee being one of the graduates.

The annual outing and picnic of the members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., is to be held Thursday afternoon of next week at the Miss Helen Palmer place in Brooklyn.

Prior to delivering the address at the commencement exercises at the high school this evening Prof. Arthur Rudman of Springfield talked before members of the Danielson Rotary club at their regular weekly meeting.

Mrs. Mabel V. Gill, 64, wife of Clayton N. Gill, died yesterday at the home in Hampton. Mrs. Gill, a native of Putnam, was Miss Mabel Bundy before her marriage. In addition to her husband she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Willis of Hampton and Mrs. Charles Rowland of Groton.

Customer—But I warn you, Herr Schnieder, I cannot pay for this suit for three months yet!

Tailor—Quite all right, I assure you.

"Splendid! When will it be ready?"

"In about three months."—Dorfbarbier, Berlin.

Old and Young

Not all young folks are dull; not all old men are wise;
Wisdom does not come always with the years.
A keen young mind may see the truth of things;
Don't be too sure that age the vision clears.

The venerable man whose hair is white
May look perhaps as if he knew a lot,
But if you listen to him, you will find
He thinks that things are so when they are not

If youth were always wrong, and old men always right
We could be sure of getting sage advice
By taking counsel only from the old,
Regardless of the young. Now, wouldn't that be nice?

But as it is, the old are often wrong,
The young can tell you better what to do.
So listen to advice from young and old,
And then remember, it is up to you.

STUDEBAKER
WORLD'S LARGEST BUILDER OF EIGHTS announces another thrifty Eight of champion quality
The Dictator Eight
ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN (115) INCH WHEELBASE
$1185
at the factory

STUDEBAKER'S New Dictator Eight is precisely what you would expect of the Builder of Champions. The finest expression of modern motoring—a straight eight by Studebaker! Companion car to the World Champion President and the famous Commander. Champion quality at a low One-Profit price—possible only because Studebaker builds more eight-cylinder cars than any other maker in the world.

The New Dictator Eight is a motor car of almost breath-taking beauty—gracefully low swung on the famous Studebaker double-drop frame, its color harmonies striking and distinctive, its exterior brightwork in lasting, glistening chromium.

In economy of fuel and oil this new eight rivals the thriftiest sixes. Performance is measurably more satisfying than any other car at its price has ever provided.

This New Dictator Eight was developed on Studebaker's Million-Dollar Proving Ground, by the same brilliant group of engineers whose genius and research have endowed Studebaker cars with the ability to win and hold every official stock car speed and endurance record.

You who have always wanted a straight eight (and who has not?)—may now enjoy the silken smoothness of Studebaker straight eight power, the unhesitating traffic mastery of it, the flexibility and pick-up which it gives you. The economy of operation upon which you have insisted will be yours, along with low initial cost.

Supporting your judgment, is the overwhelming choice of straight eight power by the greatest engineering minds of Europe and America. And back of it all, a bulwark of security, stands Studebaker, for 77 years world-known for manufacturing integrity.

The New Dictator Straight Eight offers you champion performance at a One-Profit price utterly without parallel in motor history. Come in and see it—drive it—today!

HERE IS THE EVIDENCE OF FINE-CAR QUALITY!

SUPERVISOR E. B. FLOYD PRESENTS CLASS FOR HONORS

Wednesday evening, June 12, the graduating class of the public schools of Voluntown received their diplomas at exercises held in Union hall. There was a very large attendance. The hall was decorated in blue and gold, the class colors. The class motto, "Onward to Success," was prominently displayed on a blue and gold banner. The program included: The march of the class of 1929, through the hall to the stage where they were seated during the exercises; address of welcome, by Miss Grace Bitgood given in a very pleasing manner and followed by the class song. Edwin B. Floyd, of Norwich, supervisor of the town schools presented the class of 1929 to Chairman Wm. H. Kaufmann of the town school committee, who conferred the diplomas. An operetta, "In the Florist's Window," was presented in a very pleasing manner by the children of the school, who received well merited applause. An orchestra from Norwich played throughout the evening and their popular renditions gave great pleasure. The graduates were Marion Fletcher, honor student, Grace Bitgood, Grace Bromley, William Macomber, Margaret Bitgood, Josephine Bebo, from the Center school and Jeanette Gray of the Wylie school.

GOSHEN

Children's day exercises occupied the place of the usual morning and Sunday school service Sunday. There were songs by the school and a flower exercise by Miss Clara Gillette's class, recitations by Fannie Weronick, Ruby Faulkner, Sophie Olinick, Olive Cox and a duet recitation by Ida Joczek and Eleanor Thomas, an exercise by Harold Gorski, Peter Gorski, Harold Hinckley and Clarence March. A reading, "Old Ironsides" was given by James March and the Value of a Smile by Miss Alice Faulkner. A very interesting feature was the books of the Bible represented by candles arranged in groups, each one lighted, from a tall one designated as the "Spirit of God," by various members of the school. A short description of each book was given by the pastor, Rev. Howard Bushnell. The thought conveyed was the light shed abroad from the Bible, illumines the whole world. The organist, Mrs. E. W. Jones was at the organ, Mr. Bushnell accompanying on the violin. Fifty were present. Mrs. Fred Faulkner led the C. E. meeting, "Seeing Things Through," a lesson in perseverance, was the subject. A sketch by Mary Kostowich, Alice and Ruby Faulkner and a recitation by Helen Kostowich were given. At the close, Mr. Bushnell gave a film of pictures from Bible lands. Twenty-three were present. A farewell gathering for Miss Dorothy Davies, teacher for the past two years in the lower grades at school No. 12, was given Tuesday evening in the social room of the church. The program opened with community singing. A group of popular songs with ukulele accompaniment, by Stephen Gorski, a duet by Stephen and Sophie Gorski, and a number of selections on the silver stringed guitar by Bennie Jarmelow were greatly enjoyed. "Aloha Oe" the Hawaiian folk song, was sung by Stephen Gorski with guitar accompaniment. This was followed by the presentation of a Friendship pin of white gold set with amethysts, to Miss Davies as a token of love and esteem from her pupils and friends in school, church and community. Miss Davies is to teach the third grade in a school near her old home in Newark, N. J., and will begin her work in September.

The committee appointed at the town meeting this spring to arrange for a celebration July 5th in observance of the 125th anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Columbia, met Saturday evening and voted to put on an historical pageant written and directed by Miss Lelia Church of Rockville. Miss Church is well known all over the state, having conducted pageants in various cities. Recently she has put one on at Mt. Holyoke college, and is at present conducting one in New London, N. H. The committee meets again this week to make final arrangements for the pageant and to choose the cast. Other features of the celebration will include speeches, two of the speakers already procured being Robert C. Strong, executive assistant of the president of Dartmouth college, and George Goddard, state librarian. THE COUNTRY VS. THE CITY.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

One of the commonest, and, at the sametime, the strangest componentr of what we are accustomed to call "human nature" is its apparently irresistible tendency to huddle up.

"The herd instinct," it is called by some, and perhaps that is as good a name for it as any. It is the tendency to flock, swarm, crowd, throng together into pseudo-simian imitations of what Kipling in his monkey tales called the "KanderLog."

It is the underlying explanation for gangs and organizations and circuses and cities. It is the spirit which makes both mobs and armies. It is far form being wholly admirable, yet it is so general that one might be tempted to say it rules the majority.

Where did we humans get it? Where did it come from? How did we come by it?

Of course, no informed evolutionist pretends to believe that men came from monkeys. That fabrication is just a straw man, set up by the ignorant or the fanatical to afford them the opportunity to "knock the stuffin' out of it."

But, dismissing it from consideration, the wonder becomes even greater where men and women get this characteristically monkeyish taint. If we were actually descended from apes, then we could claim that this apish proclivity came to us honestly. But, since no one holds any such theory, that explanation must be abandoned.

The fact, however, remains that a very large portion of the human race can't seem to be comfortable unless it is in a jam—or within easy walk of one. In a recent editorial of the New York Herald-Tribune the writer noted, with evident disapproval, how Europeans and Americans "are idiotically" crowding into overcrowded cities, digging caves in the ground and building new cliffs up from the ground in which to herd themselves." "And the more we huddle," he wrote, "the more we need new ways of rushing from one huddle to another."

That is the view which this manifestly urban editor, writing in one of the most conservative papers of the continent's biggest city, takes of city life, as he and his city-herded fellows live it.

Just one huddle after another; just out of one huddle into another; just huddling, huddling, huddling—for what? For the very sake of huddling, apparently.

Now, I'd like to have some pshychologist or psychiatrist, or whatever he calls himself, set forth and define the charm of huddling. What—on—earth is there about huddling to make it so attractive? It isn't cuddling that we're talking about, nor even petting, but just huddling. Getting in with the crowd; joining the press; making one of the mob; crashing gates to a sweltering party; hanging to straps and standing on one anothers' feet in a sardine-packed subway; being jolted and jostled and joggled and bumped and thumped and bunted into a sidewalk crush, etc., etc.

If that often mentioned visitor from Mars, or any other planet, should ever get to the earth and find himself in one of its big cities, it is not unlikely that he would wonder hugely what the crowds thought they were doing, and why they didn't elbow their ways out of the jam. He would wonder still more, if he could go into a railroad station and see the hordes of outsiders who were daily hurrying to get into the swirl. He would charitably admit that there possibly might be some excuse for those who were born to it staying with it. But what excuse could he find for those who were not born to it scurrying into it like chattering monkeys into a monkey-cage?

Yet exactly that last thing is what millions of country-born people are doing year after year. Boys and girls who were born under the shadow of Graylock or on the banks of the noble Hudson or among the Edens of the Blue Ridge turn their backs on their natural heritages and swarm to Boston and New York and Philadelphia and Chicago—to join the growing huddle and help make it more huddlesome.

Don't misunderstand me as making any sweeping denunciation of all cities and all city dwellers. So long as the primal curse holds and we must earn our bread by the sweat of our brows, the bunching of workers into organized industries must be accepted as an economic necessity. And every such bunch is an embryo city.

But, because we accept an admitted misfortune which we can't help, is hardly adequate reason for falling in love with it.

I'm writing this in an upper room of an old farmhouse among the Berkshire hills. From my western window I look steeply up at bluff Douglass Knob, gently shaking his woodsy hair as the summer breeze ruffles it and picks up piney or birchy odors to waft to me. From my eastern windows I face the more majestic Taconics, rolling up to the blue skies in fold after fold of height. Just across the smoothly paved highway a trout brook tinkles and gurgles on its way to join, first Kinderhook creek, and then the Hudson river. On a neighboring knoll a dense growth of pines is fringed with glistening lady birches, every last twig glistening white till it is hidden in the unique green of the opening leaves. In the pasture just behind the house I can see old Dan, the farmhorse, nibbling happily on the tender young grass. On a bush in the swamp sits Mr. Bobo-Link with a song actually bubbling with ecstasy from his throat. Out in the syringa, in front of the house, a pair of our northern mocking birds are finishing the nursery nest which—barring cats and red squirrels—will soon be filled with a hungry brood. On the broad flagstone before the woodshed door lies Stubbs, the house-cat, his feelers occasionally twitching and his claws working as he dreams of the fat mouse he's going to catch a little later. When the sun goes down and the long twilight nears from the big elm in my neighbor's meadow will come fluttering across to me the ineffable song of the veery thrush—most celestially rapturous of all bird arias. The lilacs and pansies are still in bloom. In the kitchen garden the young plants, sorely discouraged by many sour spring weeks, are beginning to take heart and show promise. The columbines, both wild and cultivated, are redding the hillsides and the flower garden borders. The grassed fields are fairly laughing with lush green growth. Over all an unclouded, unsmoked, unbedusted sun is shining from a sky bluer than violets. And through my upstairs "den" is sifting from open window to open window the very breath of life, as God made it, mixed with no tainted gases of man's invention.

Yet there are those who would change all that—or surroundings like it—for the huddle of the city!

Heaven forgive us, what can they be thinking about?

Of course, there are two sides to country life. It isn't all picnicking, not all beer and skittles. There are worms in every rose and flies too often in the ointments of the apothecary. There are also snakes in every Eden, modern or ancient. But we don't have to follow the snakes' trails nor search the mout to listen to their hissings. Also—one might as well admit it, first as last—the country is "slow" and many people find it "lonesome." In regard to which criticisms one might retort that an oak tree is much "slower" than a toadstool, and that "lonesome" health is really better than huddled contagion.

Ah, dear brothers and sisters of the open spaces and the untrodden ways, we don't half appreciate the good fortune which surrounds us, or the splendor of the opportunities which are offered us. Too many of us seem to find cause for complaint and rebellion in the very blessings of our situation.

We don't have to follow the crowd, but can take our own road; we don't have to watch every step lest it fall on some huddler's corn; we don't have to imitate every fad of fashion, however silly or vulgar; we don't have to roll up the cuffs of our trousers every time it rains in Lunnon; we don't to jabber meaningess inanities because that happens to be the manner of Park avenue; we don't have to curb and check and snaffle our souls lest someone discover that they're not just like Mrs. Grundy's.

We don't even have to apologize if Miss Flapper sneers at us for being "old-fashioned."

We are, comparatively speaking, free to develop our own individualities and cultivate our own virtues. We are less hampered by conventions and customs. We are nearer to nature and nature's God. We may find fewer opportunities for having our hands manicured, but hardly more for keeping our minds and souls clean.

May I ask you to note the implications of the following two sentences, quoted from the latest chapter in ex-President Coolidge's autobiography in the Cosmopolitan Magazine:

"Country life does not always have breadth, but it has depth. It is neither artificial nor superficial, but is kept close to the realities."

But, if the youngsters have really been bitten by the city bug, doubtless there is no more use trying to cure them than trying to cure a cobra bite. The poison must run its course.

MTH MONEY MORE PLENTIFUL, SALES OF STOCKS ROSE ABOVE 3,000,000 SHARES

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP) — The stock market shook off to some extent the stagnation of recent sessions today, and moved forward with renewed vigor, under the impetus of more plentiful money. Total sales once more rose above 3,000,000 shares, moderate turnover in comparison with past bullish performances, but about 10 per cent larger than previous sessions this week.

Public utility, steel, and chemical shares led the advance, which was rather selective in character, and failed to include many of the coppers, oils, rails or motors. Much of the upturn was attributed to short covering, but the belief that many issues had reached bottom continued to grow, and it was rumored that some of the more powerful investment trusts were adding to their holdings.

The ease in money, which sent call loans from 8 to 7 per cent and time loans to a flat rate of 8 1-4, from 8 1-4 to 8 1-2 for the shorter maturities yesterday, was attributed to temporary conditions, resulting from the piling up of funds here against mid-month settlements, and bankers still warned that higher rates must be expected before the end of the month.

The federal reserve condition statements, which appeared after the close of the market, however, were interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the federal reserve authorities for the first time in months are now acting in a manner which would prevent any serious flurry in call money rates. The New York reserve institution showed a gain of approximately $10,000,000 in bankers acceptances purchased, and a gain of $22,000,000 in government securities.

In quarters close to the bank, however, it was insisted that no change in the eight money policy was indicated, that the gain in acceptances was the result of repurchase agreements, and the increase in government securities, merely incident to the new treasury short term financing. But regardless of the federal reserve policy, it appeared that member banks had purchased new government securities in order to have them for collateral against additional rediscounts. The New York banks increased their borrowings by about $13,000,000 and the reserve bank showed a similar increase in bills discounted which were secured by government obligations.

Other pleasing features in the credit situation were the extraordinary announcement of no change, one way or the other, in federal reserve broker loans, and the fact that, as expected, the New York reserve bank made no change in its rediscount rate. Both Sterling and Canadian exchange fell well below the incoming gold point, and a large importation of gold from Montreal was said to have been arranged.

The utilities were still feverishly bought in today's market, under the impetus of further reports of bringing together practically all of the important power companies in the east into an alignment sponsored by J. P. Morgan & Co. The Associated Press index of 20 utilities rose more than 7 points to a new high record. American Water Works, American Power & Light, Commonwealth Power, North American, and Public Service of New Jersey were among issues reaching new high ground, gains running from 3 to 9 points.

Auburn Auto again was a high flier, mounting 18 points further into new high territory. Such old favorites as American Telephone, American Can and U. S. Steel rose from 4 to 7 points. The first named drawing strong support on announcement of record sales of its subsidiary, Western Electric. General Electric rose 11 points to a new high record but a fraction under the 300 mark.

Bethlehem Steel, Allied Chemical, Montgomery Ward, Johns Manville, National Distillers, Union Carbide, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube were among other issues reaching new peaks. Although oils were generally sluggish, Wall street remained optimistic over the prospect of eventual production control, and prices held steady. Lago was an exception, rising 4 points to a new top. Hoe & Co. was better supported than for some time past, riding about 3 points to a new 1929 high at 22 3-8.

Air Reduction ran into profit taking, falling back 3 points, and Burroughs, Marlin Rockwell and Sparks Withington were soft spots, losing about 5 points each. Barnet Leather, National Surety, Penn Dixie preferred, and Peerless dropped to new lows.

In the commodities, wheat rose nearly 3 cents on a better outlook for farm relief and bullish Canadian advices, but later reacted on favorable harvesting reports and closed a cent or so net higher. Corn was firm on bullish Iowa reports and unfavorable weather. Cotton was steady, closing around 50 cents a bale higher.

Foreign exchanges were fairly steady, save for Sterling Cables, which fell to $4.84 3-4 around the low of the year, and the Canadian dollar, which sagged to near 99.15 cents.

JEWETT CITY

PETE GERAND HIVES BEES IN SWARM WORTH ABOUT $20

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 13—People working in the rear of the Finn block today, noticing a distinct humming sound all the forenoon. Later the air for a large area was found to be literally alive with bees. Shortly after noon as if by magic, the whole lot, estimated at 50,000, swarmed in a small wild cherry tree. The bunch of bees was as large as a half bushel measure, with such length that the bottom of the buzzing bundle hung three feet below the limb to which they were attached. Pete Gerand, an expert bee man was sent for. With a net over his face and a smoke bellows, he hived the whole lot in a short time, with a gallery of over 100 townspeople, shifting about uneasily at a respectful distance.

Mr. Gerand declared them to be a very large colony of Italians, worth $15 to $20.

MRS. BENTLEY'S BURIAL RECALLS SLATER EXHIBIT

The body of Mrs. Mary E. Bentley, 86, was brought here Tuesday for burial in Jewett City cemetery. She was a long-time resident of Jewett City, and is remembered by a few of the oldest residents as Miss Mary Hillman. Her first husband was John Blake, a brother of the late George Blake, of this place. Her death occurred in Westboro, Mass.

Attending the interment here was the only surviving member of her family of that generation, Charles George Hillman, of Norwich. He is well remembered here. In the days of the old Ferry street station in Norwich, back close to 50 years ago, Mr. Hillman was driver of a handsome coach and span.

Miss Hillman was a weaver in the Jewett City Slater mills. In 1876, John F. Slater, decided to exhibit his new cotton cheviots at the Paris exposition. They were a decidedly new advent in a new class of fine textile production. Miss Hillman was selected among all the other operatives of the big shop, to weave the bolts to be sent to Paris. A medal was struck in bronze by the French exposition, and awarded Mr. Slater for his fancy cheviots woven by Miss Hillman on specially prepared looms. The medal is today preserved in the archives of Slater library, Jewett City.

The Tydol Oil gang from Norwich came up here Wednesday evening, cracked out 4 runs in the first inning, pulled down 2 more, and lugged home the bacon 6 to 4, in a game with the All Stars of Jewett City. Both Shaw and Jodoin pitched a fine game, but the high pressure gas bunch were too slippery to rthe boroughites. Will Schugrue for the Tydol's showed the first demonstration of his new trick bat.

In order to reach the wide ones, Bill simply released a spring in the handle, and, presto, the stick was 10 feet long. Next Thursday, June 20, a return game will be played on the J. B. Martin grounds, with Taftville.

P. W. Chase, welfare superintendent for Ashland Cotton corporation, accompanied Frank Stanley, to the Norwich state hospital for treatment and observation Thursday morning. Mr. Stanley, an employe in the machine shop, seemed to be suddenly attacked with a violent sort of nervous breakdown. Dr. J. H. McLaughlin was called to attend the patient after he was removed to his home on Hill street. Mr. Stanley, is a young man, of excellent reputation, well and favorably known in the borough. Many will recall when he and Miss Aldora Casavant were married.

David Carter, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Carter will be graduated by Wesleyan university, Middletown, this week, with the B. A. degree. The young man has established a number of exceptional records. AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

MORE AND BETTER FRUIT FROM FEWER APPLE TREES

Dr. William A. Taylor, chief of the bureau of plant industry in the United States department of agriculture, in a radio address recently made certain suggestions to apple growers, the general observance of which he believes essential to the well-being of the apple industry. His suggestions were:

"Stabilize annual production and improve average quality by better culture, pruning and pest control.

"Eliminate from commercial orchards as rapidly as practicable varieties of inferior quality and unattractive appearance.

"Refrain from planting additional acreage, except of most desirable varieties on sure-crop sites where production costs are low or market quality unusually high.

"Grade rigidly, handle carefully, pack tight, store promptly, sell effectively.

"For the small-scale grower in the more important producing districts, this last item may sound like cooperation. That is, in fact, what is indicated in many sections as the best bet in apple marketing."

Dr. Taylor called attention to developments along these lines in the last 29 years. Comparing present conditions with those of 1910, he said: "There are about a third fewer trees of bearing age now, and there are only about half as many young trees in orchards not of bearing age as there were in 1910."

This has not caused a decline in apple production, he said: It has resulted in more concentrated production in favored localities and on smaller acreage. Many trees have been replaced or top-worked with more desirable varieties. Bearing trees are getting better care and more intelligent attention. The farmer who once had a few trees that were "hardly worth the trouble," and who marketed a few bushels of apples, many worm eaten and poorly developed, is now more likely to have the orchard in some other crop and may be buying his apples. The apple growers who are maintaining their orchards are getting, as a rule, more fruit and better quality fruit from their trees.

MAKING BEES MOVE

Bees often take up their abode where they are not wanted, as in a cavity in a wall. A good way to get them out is to put a bee "escape" over the entrance to the cavity, so the bees can get out but not in.

A cone of wire cloth about 8 inches high with a hole at the apex just large enough for one bee to pass through will serve as an escape. A regular hive should be placed beside the entrance for the return of the escaped bees. The queen remains in the old cavity and goes on laying eggs, but as the colony is quickly reduced in size the quantity of brood decreases. The younger bees leave the cavity and join the bees in the hive. A new queen should be given the bees in the hive as soon as possible.

After about four weeks, remove the bee escape and make as large a hole as possible at the entrance of the cavity. The bees will go in for the honey and carry it to the hive. For this method to work successfully, it is necessary that the bees have only one exit from the cavity.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS MAKE HIGHWAYS LAST LONGER

New developments in road construction and in truck design are contributing materially to the life of the road surface, says the United States department of agriculture.

The effect of 16-wheel trucks on road pavements is only half as severe as the effect of 4-wheel trucks of equal gross weight, according to tests by the bureau of public roads. This indicates there is little doubt that the heavy trucks of the future will have six wheels. Large economies will result in the preservation of road surfaces and in wear and tear on the vehicles, as well as in the cost of transportation by reason of the larger loads that may be carried on a single vehicle.

Experience has shown that fine crushed rock, and gravel roads, of which there are thousands of miles in the western states, are worn down at the rate of an inch a year and more by traffic of 500 vehicles a day. As a result of experiments conducted by the highway departments of Oregon and California, and the bureau of public roads, a method of treating or "processing" these roads by mixture of light asphaltic oils with the surface course in place on the road has been developed which practically eliminates all wear, dees away with the dust nuisance, and forms an incomparably superior better road. The new method of construction is now being widely adopted.

Similar methods for the treatment of sand-clay and topsoil roads in the south, developed by experiments conducted by the bureau in co-operation with the highway department of South Carolina, are being employed on a large scale in that area with similarly successful results and large economies.

HINTS FOR THE FARM

The farmer who sells his cream on a butterfat basis should adjust the separator so that the cream will test about 35 per cent butterfat. One of the advantages of such cream over low-testing cream is that more of the skim milk is kept on the farm. One thousand pounds of milk testing 4 per cent butterfat produces 114 pounds of cream, testing 35 per cent, or 200 pounds testing 20 per cent. The difference in weight, 86 pounds, is skim milk for which the farmer gets no pay if he sells the lower-testing cream.

A new fumigant composed of a mixture of ethylene dichloride and carbon tetrachloride is effective against clothes moths. Until last year this substance never had been used as a fumigant, but it now is being sold in large quantities.

Bermuda grass is an excellent soil binder for the south, where erosion is causing much loss of soil. When planted in newly-formed or even in old and large gullies, Bermuda grass catches the washed-down soil, holds it in place, and soon makes such a growth that the spread of the gully is checked and finally filled and the ground becomes cultivable again.

A good way to harvest sweet clover hay is to cut it with a binder and shock it like oats. The sheaves should not be large, and should be set wide apart to permit the air to circulate. The clover should be mowed to leave a stubble 6 to 8 inches high, especially if the stand is thick. Second growth comes from stem buds and not from the crown. If the stubble is high enough, clover will cure in the swath without raking.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE SAYS:

Don't expect to cut asparagus from a newly set bed. Let it grow and establish itself.

Make your last sowing of peas and plant an early type. Remember they must do their growing before hot weather sets in.

There is still time to start salsify, parsnips and French endive. Sow at once.

Cucumbers are due to go in and can be planted up to July 4, to keep a succession.

Make new plantings of beets and carrots. You will not have too many of them.

Turnips grow fast. You can plant them up to the middle of July.

Don't forget to take a daily lookout for bugs and give them a shot of poison. One bug can produce a big family in short order.

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP)—Directors of the Vick Chemical Co. have voted to increase the authorized stock from 400,000 no par shares to 1,200,000 shares of the same classification. One half of the additional stock will be issued to present holders on the basis of two shares for one.

Checker Cab Manufacturing Co. has sufficient unfilled orders to take care of entire production until about Sept. 20, says Morris Markin, president. Orders now on hand will force the company to increase by 20 per cent its original program for the year which called for 7500 units.

Orders for five electric locomotives, four for use in South Africa and one for the Patino mines in Colombia, have been received by the Baldwin Locomotive Works. The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. will furnish the electrical equipment. The Baldwin company is now loading 12 locomotives and tenders at its Eddystone plant for shipment to South Africa.

The Houston Gulf Gas Co., a subsidiary of the United Gas Co. has contracted to deliver to the Humble Oil and Refining Co. a maximum of 15,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas daily at its Baytown refinery, near Houston.

An issue of 25,000 no par common shares of the Waco Aircraft Co., formerly known as the Advance Aircraft Co., will be offered for public subscription tomorrow. A substantial common stock interest of the Waco company is being acquired by the Aviation corporation, it is announced.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Students of the Bible, impressed by the amount and thoroughness of research work that went into the making of Warner Bros.' production of "Noah's Ark," the most colossal of the seasons productions, are curious as to how certain phases of history are treated in the picture. The result has been that many letters reached the Warners for light regarding some things and a noticeable fact about the queries was that they contained an undercurrent of belief that whatever the Warners did in the matter would undoubtedly be correct.

It is known that the interior of the Ark furnishes one of the big spectacles in the picture and it has puzzled many students as to how the dimensions of the huge floating mass, for it had to be huge to hold all that it contained, were arrived at as well as on what was based the structural appearance of the Ark's interior. One writer said that while he had searched, he had never been able to find a picture purporting to show the interior of the Ark.

Of course, Vitaphone entered largely into several of the scenes in "Noah's Ark." This was announced early in the production activities and it was also told that the Tower of Babel would be shown exactly as it was originally constructed.

One of the queries sent by a minister in Kansas was about this same Tower. "What part would Vitaphone have in a scene showing the Tower?" was one of the questions, and another was: "How was it arranged to make clear the voices which issued from the Tower?" If the number of questions regarding the picture mean anything it is that it is being awaited with good deal of pleasant anticipation.

As is known, Dolores Costello and George O'Brien have the chief roles in "Noah's Ark," and the action sways from the present times to those of the Flood. Miss Costello is said to have a wonderfully fine role in the picture and one in which she is expected to show the best work of her brilliant career on the screen.

Palace Theatre

Colleen Moore, typifying the 1929 version of the modern American girl, comes to the Palace theatre today in her newest First National picture, "Why Be Good?" according to an announcement by the theatre management.

Always a favorite with Palace theatre goers, Miss Moore undoubtedly will draw more than her customary throng of followers for "Why Be Good?" is regarded as one of the most entertaining pictures in which she has ever appeared. The story which was written especially for her by Carey Wilson, deal both humorously and seriously with the age-old conflict of ideas between present and past generations.

"Why Be Good?" was produced by John McCormick, with William A. Seiter directing. Sound effects have been synchronized with the production, offering a decidedly realistic background for the action of the story.

You'll hear the snarl of infuriated tigers—

The bark of sea lions on rampage—

The blood-curdling laugh of the hyenas—the chatter of the monkeys, and the hundred and one strange and thrilling noises of the menagerie when you see the new Jack White Talking Comedy, "Zip! Boom! Bang!" which will be on the program at the Palace theatre today and tomorrow.

In this, his first talking comedy, Jack White has used the beasts of the forest and plain and the queer people of the side-show and circus midway for background and atmosphere. Raymond McKee, well-known star, has the featured role in the picture. Jack White personally directed the laugh-maker, a two-reeler.

Other sound featurettes on this program include a Pathe News, the oldest and greatest news, now in sound. Aesops Fables, those comical animals who tickle the ribs in silence, now bark, growl and meow to roars of laughter and a Pathe Sound Revue of current events.

John L. Nichols, a winter visitor at Los Angeles, has not had a tongue for 16 years, but he proved to be one of the most fluent speakers heard by the Toastmasters' club there. Surgical removal of his tongue was necessary in 1912 and eight weeks later he began gradually to develop the power of speech. There are only 16 of the 26 letters in the alphabet that can be pronounced without the aid of the tongue, Nichols says. The other 12 he sounds by blowing or whistling. Once he talked to 350 men at a convention for two hours and a stenographer taking down the speech admitted he only got one word.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Wife—You don't allow me half enough money for clothes.

Hub—If I did, you'd still go around looking half-dressed.—Boston Transcript.

Anne—They say a kiss shortens one's life three minutes.

Peter—Quite right. Er, let's kill off a few days.—Westminster Gazette.

"Can you define matrimony?"

"Yes. You go to adore, you ring a belle, you give your name to a maid—and then you're taken in."—Tit-Bits.

Manager—I thought you said you could do that job in an hour?

Cassidy—Bedad, I'll do that job in an hour if it takes me all day.—Detroit News.

Televox—Munchweiler is always borrowing trouble.

Robot—Yes, but that isn't the worst part of it—he always wants to pay back more than he borrows.—The Pathfinder.

The little girl was crying bitterly as she walked about, her head bent, and the kindly old gentleman was deeply touched by the sight.

"What have you lost, my dear?" he asked.

"I-I lost my penny," she sobbed. Moved by her grief, the old gentleman took a penny out of his pocket and said: "There, there, little one! Don't cry any more. Here's your penny. Now run along and spend it."

To his surprise she looked up and shrilled: "Why, you wicked old man! Wait till I tell my papa. You had my penny all the time!"—The Brick Kiln.

With the several small pitchers that Mrs. Henry Denison of St. Louis, Mo., and her husband received when they were married some 35 years ago she began a hobby and a collection. She has 350 pitchers now, and could have had more if she had wished for quantity. Rather, she likes "to have them from foreign places, queer places, from the corners of the earth. They are more companionable that way, they have more to say."

Many times civilians in the course of conversation with seamen ask what the letters S O S, the international signal of distress, represent. It seems that they are of the opinion that the letters are combinations of the words "Save Our Souls" or "Save Our Ships," or even "Save, Oh Save." Such is not the case. At the conference held in London, in 1912, under the auspices of the International Radiotelegraph, the three letters were adopted by this body to be used as a distress signal. The reason is that this combination of letters is perhaps the most easily made and is one which the least skilled operator can readily recognize, being composed of three dots, three dashes and three dots. Previously to 1912, the distress signal was C D Q.

NEW LONDON TAKING COMING RACES WITH LESS EXCITEMENT THAN OF OLD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 13—With the Yale-Harvard races on the Thames only a week away there is little evidence that the college aquatic classic is so near at hand. During the early years of the sport, the students from the colleges at New Haven and Cambridge spent a week before the struggle here, then remained to celebrate after the victory had been won. All that has changed. The automobile enables race attendants to start for New London at noon and then be here in time for the regatta. The New Haven railroad makes it easy to come to New London from New York or Boston to those who desire to have their lunch at home. The railroad company takes its patrons to the start of the races and enables them to see the finish. The hotels have not listed the reservations for rooms they usually have made, although the Mohican and the Griswold management report that they expect to have every room taken during the few days prior to the race on the 21st. The New Haven and the Central Vermont railway companies are already getting cars for the observation trains ready for use. There are thirty or more cars in each train.

COMBINATION FIREHOUSE PROBABLE AT TILLEY STREET

Whether the city will erect a combination fire house on Bank street that will house both the Niagara company and the Allen Hook and Ladder organization has not yet been determined, though the matter is said to be under consideration by the city council members. The city is understood to be negotiating for the portion of the Smiddy property at Bank and Tilley streets adjoining the Allen firehouse and that is supposed to be with the intention of rounding the corner of Bank and Tilley streets and erecting a fire house. There will be abundant space for a combination house on the land.

Motorists complain of the condition of the highway on Montauk avenue, especially along the trolley rails, where the concrete has been torn out and the surface is very rough.

The price of strawberries, 19 cents Tuesday, was boosted to 30 cents Thursday, with no reason given for the raise. The season for the berries will be at its height after a few days of hot weather.

LIVING IN THE PAST PRESENT STATE NEGLECTED

The iron fence surrounding the patch of grass in front of the County Historical society building has become dilapidated and is an eyesore to persons who have an interest in the society and who are interested in the surroundings of the property. Sections of the fencing are broken and others are tottering so that neglect is apparent to any one who passes.

The roadways of the city were never so generally oiled as they are at present so early in the season nor were the highways leading to and from the city. The oil lays the dust, also gives a more compact condition to the highway.

It is believed the number of licenses to be issued for the privilege of selling fireworks will be fewer this year than in years past, as the price of license fees has been doubled.

It is estimated that a large portion of the new buildings erected in this city the past few months have been located in the fourth and fifth wards.

ROUND-UP OF IDLERS OF THE OLD SOAK CLASS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 13—The police resumed their activities to rid the loitering places of drunks again tonight and as a result five were arrested and all will be in court tomorrow. Several weeks ago a crusade was made against the loiterers and many of their number were sent to jail. Summer being at hand and out-doors being a sleeping place for the intemperate instead of the tramp room, the bluecoats have renewed their efforts to rid the city of this type of men who obtain plenty of liquor and care little for work.

Ignored Traffic Laws

Another batch of violators of the city's parking ordinances will be in the police court tomorrow. Ideal weather for motoring prevailing today, the drivers again disregarded traffic laws, with the result that several were ordered into court. They include: James L. Graham, Washington, D. C.; Mary G. Shea, 39 Lincoln street, Westerly; Marian B. Chapman, New Haven; Ralph Stapins, 51 Hempstead street; Nathan F. Rubin, 417 Edgewood street, Hartford and Joseph W. Regan, 839 Columbus avenue, Springfield, Mass.

Michael Koleva, Montville, was in a Montville justice's court last night charged with non-support. The case was disposed of by Koleva agreeing to provide a stipulated amount for the support of his wife and child. He also provided a surety on a bond of $500 to assure keeping his promise. Koleva was arrested a week ago by State Police Officer Peter Busch but the case was continued until last night.

HAVE FAITH IN FRANCOIS WHOM TWO BOYS ACCUSE

Antonio Francois, 43, a fireman on one of the trawlers mooring at the pier of the American Fisheries company, Groton, was in Groton town court this forenoon charged with indecent assault. The complaint was amended to the less serious charge of breach of the peace. Francois pleaded not guilty but a fine of $50 and costs, the latter amounting to $12.55 was imposed by Judge Cornelius C. Costello. Francois was arrested last night at the fisheries plant by state police as a result of a complaint made to them June 8. It was alleged that on that night Francois made the acquaintance of two boys of 14 and it was claimed, took unnatural liberities with the boys. When the acts of Francois became known and a report was made at the state police barracks, he was sought, but he was not found until last night. Francois in his own defense declared that he was not in conversation with the boys on the night in question, but did meet them near the fisheries plant on the 10th, two days after the alleged assaults were committed. The boys, however, identified Francois, who is married, with being the man, in whose company they had been. Francois bears a good reputation at the fisheries plant, where, it was said, he never failed to send $50 monthly to his wife, who is a resident of Spain.

$10,000 GIFT TO BACKUS HOSPITAL AS MEMORIAL TO LEONARD O. SMITH

The Backus hospital has just received a gift of 10,000 from Mrs. Leonard O. Smith of 137 Washington street and her two daughters, Eloise Crowell Smith and Eva Virginia Smith, as a memorial to the late Leonard O. Smith. Under the terms of the gift the income is to be used for free hospital service for patients designated or approved by the United Workers of Norwich. It is thus quite as much for the benefit of the latter organization as the former. The United Workers are frequently finding cases requiring hospital treatment for which they have insufficient funds. This endowment gives free hospital service in such cases and will thus be a much appreciated public benefit. It is particularly gratifying to the people of Norwich that this memorial is given as Mr. Smith's great interest in this community and the welfare of its citizens is well known and will be long remembered.

PLANE YELLOW BIRD LANDED ON COAST OF SPAIN; FUEL ALMOST EXHAUSTED

The Three Frenchmen of the Crew and the Stowaway Were Well—Supply of Gasoline Was Depleted and the Radiator Was Almost Dry When the Plane Landed—After Refuelling the Aviators Will Start Early This Morning Across the Boy of Biscay For Paris—The Yellow Bird Landed About 3 P. M., E. S. T.

By The Associated Press

The monoplane Yellow Bird, French made, and manned by three Frenchmen last night landed in northern Spain within 150 miles of French territory after a non-stop flight from Old Orchard, Maine.

It was the first French air expedition to cross the north Atlantic in either direction and had the added distinction of carrying the first trans-Atlantic airplane stowaway. The addition of this youth made the number of persons the same as flew to France in the place of Commander Richard E. Byrd less than two years ago.

The aviators pushed their plane to its furthest limit. When they came down on a beach a few miles west of Santander the gasoline tanks were empty and the radiator almost dry. Otherwise both men and plane were in good condition and they announced their intention to complete the flight to Paris as soon as the plane was refueled.

The crew were Jean Assolant, Rene Le Fevre and Armeno Lotti, junior, the backer, and the stowaway was believed to be Arthur Schreiber, of Portland, Maine.

The plane took off at 9:03 a. m., eastern standard time, from the beach at Old Orchard. It was sighted over Matinicus rock light off the Main coast and again by the steamship Wytheville about 805 miles at sea.

As the plane neared Europe M. Lotti got in radio communication with ships near the Azores and later was in running communication with the station of Le Mouscat near Bordeaux, France.

The world on both sides of the Atlantic was thus apprised of the approximate location of the Yellow Bird and of the fact that shortage of gasoline would probably force a landing short of its goal at Paris.

LOG OF THE YELLOW BIRD

11:52 p. m., E. S. T.—American farmer hears Yellow Bird communicating with liners Rochambeau and Laconia.

June 14, 1 a. m., E. S. T.—Tells S. S. Rochambeau she is taking southern route toward Portugese coast over the Azores, because of diminishing gas supply.

5 a. m., E. S. T.—S. S. Niagara talks with Yellow Bird which reports all well on board. (Position of plane not given).

2 p. m., E. S. T.—Private radio operator in Paris gets message from plane saying she is 200 miles off Oporto, Portugal, and would try for a landing in southern France if gas held out.

3.00 p. m., E. S. T.—Radio station at Bordeaux gets message from plane it was flying north along Portugese coast. Fliers said they were keeping coast in sight and wireless communication was maintained for half hour.

THOUGHT THAT THEY WERE ON FRENCH TERRITORY

PARIS, June 15—(AP)—Saturday—A Havas agency dispatch from Santander, Spain, near where the Yellow Bird landed safely at about 8 p. m., G. M. T., (about 3 p. m., E. S. T.) today said that the Stowaway, Arthur Schreiber, of Portland, Maine, had not suffered from his long air voyage.

The plane also carried beside its crew of three, a live crocodile, ten inches long, as a mascot.

The agency learned that the Frenchmen thought they were in France and were greatly surprised when the first persons speaking the Spanish toague rushed up to them. When they learned that they had not accomplished what they had hoped, they determined to reach their native soil as soon as possible.

The aviators found one Frenchman among the many anxious to help them and with his aid as interpreter a telephone message was sent to Santander for 125 gallons of gasoline so that they could leave for Paris in the morning.

The village authorities soon roused the guard and Spanish carbineers immediately formed a guard of honor around the plane which was apparently undamaged.

The whole countryside was aroused by the unlooked for event and there were a hundred persons eagr to do very little service that th Frenchmen asked.

The dispatch to the agency also said that Schreiber appeared to be laboring under the influence of great emotion as the plane landed and expressed complete joy when he set his foot on the sands on which the plane had gently alighted. The three men of the crew had not suspected they had an unexpected guest until they were in full flight.

It appeared early today that the completion of the flight to Paris might be considerably delayed, possibly even until Sunday, because the large quantity of gasoline needed could not be carried rapidly to the little town of Comillas.

PRESIDENT HOOVER SENT CONGRATULATIONS

WASHINGTON, June 14.— (AP) — President Hoover has extended congratulations to President Doumergue on the flight of the French aviators in the Yellow Bird.

SWEDISH AVIATORS POSTPONE FLIGHT

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 14.—(AP)—The Swedish aviators tonight decided to remain here indefinitely until a special engineer arrives from Germany to go over the motors of their airplane Sverige. In spite of repairs made here by the crew and local mechanics the motor troubles that ended three attempts to reach Greenland persists.

It was thought that an engineer could arrive by June 23rd, bringing spare parts or a new motor. Earlier today Captain Albin Ahrenberg had said that he and his two companions awaited only favorable weather reports to continue their attempted flight from Stockholm to New York.

REDEMMED CLOTHING SHE HAD FAILED TO DECLARE

NEW YORK, June 14—(AP)— Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, widow of the noted polo player and sculptor and daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, today got back the clothing which she failed to declare on returning Wednesday from Europe but had to pay customs authorities $7,400 for her oversight.

Jewelry taken from her, valued at $100,000, was returned when she proved it had long been in her possession.

Mrs. Rumsey admitted her neglect and explained her failure as "pure ignorance." She said she thought she had declared all her purchases. The undeclared articles included a mink coat, gowns and lingeries. She declared thirty-six pairs of gloves, while ninety-six pairs were found in her trunk.

APPEAL FROM METHODS OF BORDER PATROLMEN

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., June 14.—(AP)—County officials, businessmen and citizens of International Falls tonight sent to President Hoover a telegram appealing for relief from what they termed "high handed methods of border patrolmen" one of whom shot and killed Henry Virkkula, of Big Falls, a week ago.

The message was drawn up at a meeting, held following the arraignment late today of E. J. White, border patrolman, charged with second degree murder for the killing.

President Hoover was told that the citizens of this town are appealing to him in a "matter that we regard as a desperate situation."

"For God's sake help us," the telegram said, after reciting that appeals to other officials have brought no results.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 14—(AP)—Hearings in habeas corpus proceedings for the release of 19 strikers and strike sympathizers held in connection with slaying of O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia chief of police, were postponed today until next Tuesday morning. Judge W. F. Those allowed bond were charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Late today the bonds had not been posted, but Tom P. Jiminson, counsel for the strikers, said they would be given.

The prisoners not permitted bond today have been charged with murder.

Aderholt was killed a week ago today when he with three patrolmen were fired upon from headquarters of the National Textile Workers' union, after going there to investigate reports of fighting and rioting among the strikers.

Farm Relief Bill Sent To White House

President Hoover Intends to Sign the Measure Today—Ends Years of Political Controversy.

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP)—The long struggle over agricultural legislation was ended today by congressional approval of the farm relief bill desired by the administration.

The measure, which represents the ultimate expression of years of study and political controversy was signed immediately by Vice President Curtis and Speaker Longworth and sent to President Hoover. He intends to affix his signature tomorrow—thereby enacting the measure into law.

Farm leaders are convinced that the president will soon name the federal farm board provided by the measure, ask a large appropriation with which the board will attempt to stabilize agriculture, and take a personal interest in seeing that the newest legislative remedy for economic ills is launched auspiciously.

Rejection by the house of the export debenture plan favored by the senate made possible today's final legislative action. A joint conference committee again agreed on the compromise bill, their action was upheld by the house in a few minutes and several hours later the senate did likewise on a 44 to 8 vote.

The senate action was preceded by numerous expressions of dissatisfaction from advocates of debentures. Many condemned the bill but declared nevertheless they would vote for it.

As soon as Mr. Hoover has signed the bill, a resolution will be adopted in the house and sent to the senate calling for an appropriation of perhaps $500,000,000, the revolving fund authorized by the bill, of which $150,000,000 or more is expected to be made available for the current fiscal year ending June 30.

Welcomed in Southampton, where he landed from the liner Olympic early this afternoon, and greeted in London tonight, the mid-west American, who won renown in wartime and post war world activities, declined to reveal his much discussed instructions from the American government.

SENATE TO DEBATE BORAH RESOLUTION NEXT WEEK

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP)—The tenseness which has gripped the tariff situation in the senate was relieved temporarily today as the senate deferred consideration until Monday of the resolution of Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, to limit revision to agricultural and related products.

Strenuous opposition to the resolution is held by administration senators. A vote early next week is in prospect, and in view of the democratic and republican independent support believed to be lined up for it—republican leaders tonight expressed uncertainty as to the outcome.

Senate leaders declared the issue must be decided before any recess is taken as the sub-committees already have begun taking testimony on schedules relating to non-agricultural products in the house bill. The sub-committee on agriculture will open its hearings Monday.

TREASURY SURPLUS TO BE UPWARDS OF $100,000,000

Federal Income For the Year Will Approximate $4,042,348,000—Income Tax Payments This Year Have Exceeded Those of Last Year by About $60,000,000—Internal Revenue Receipts Are About $4,000,000 Less Than the Amount Collected Last Year—Customs Receipts This Year Exceed Those of Previous Years Some $30,000,000.

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP)—More than one and a half billion dollars will be involved in financial dealings to be transacted tomorrow by the United States treasury.

This busy day heralding the approaching end of the fiscal year is expected to lend support to the treasury view that a surplus upwards of $100,000,000 will be available. Substantiation of the treasury experts' estimates of the revenue still to be collected means the federal income for the year will approximate $4,042,348,000.

The midyear financing of the treasury tomorrow will see $528,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness mature, another issue of $400,000,000 sold, and interest paid on the public debt aggregating $100,000,000, while the treasury expects income tax payments from the second installment for 1928 to amount to more than $500,000,000. The payments are due then but the final returns from the collections are not expected to reach the treatury until toward the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

Income tax collections this year have exceeded those of last year by approximately $60,000,000; and on June 12, had totaled $1,807,042,538. For the first twelve days of the month the collections had amounted to $31,557,224, or $1,560,000 more than for the same month last year.

Miscellaneous internal revenue of the government has reached $572,537,227 but is about $4,000,000 less than the amount collected in the same period in 1928, while the customs receipts thus far have totaled $571,454,064 an increase of nearly $30,000,000 for the similar period of a year ago.

At present there is a deficit in the government funds of $168,805,639 as compared with a surplus at the same time last year of $101,158,661.

If the income tax payments should approach those for the first quarter when $601,000,000 was collected, the government might finish the fiscal year with a balance approaching $200,000,000—but this surplus not held likely.

The amount of the surplus may be affected greatly by appropriations by congress before the end of the year. There is a likelihood also that the treasury department will diminish the balance by $45,000,000, that amount being slated to go to railroads for retroactive mail rate increases granted by the interstate commerce commission. The treasury expects to pay this before July, an appropriation for it recently having been approved by congress.

MINN. TO PROSECUTE BORDER PATROLMAN

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., June 14—(AP)—The state of Minnesota moved today to prosecute Border Patrolman Emmett J. White for the slaying of Henry Virkkula as the local government agent was taking steps to defend the customs guard. Second degree murder charges carrying life imprisonment upon conviction were filed and a second degree manslaughter warrant dismissed by the state while L. L. Drill, United States district attorney at St. Paul, announced he would defend the patrolman at the preliminary hearing July 2.

Request of County Prosecutor David Hurlburt to put bail for White's release at $20,000 was denied and the court set $5,000 bonds for its release.

Virkkula was slain Saturday as he drove along a highway with his wife and two children in their automobile. The customs guard was in search of liquor smugglers.

Hearing on the new complaint was held this afternoon and White declined to answer any questions.

Asked if he were represented by counsel White said: "I am depending upon the United States government".

MANCHESTER MAN KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC SHOCK

MANCHESTER, Conn., June 14.—(AP)—Edward Stevenson, 62, of 21 Ridge street, was killed by an electric shock today at 11:30 a. m., when he received a current of 220 volts while at work in the ribbon mill of Cheney brothers. Dr. Thomas G. Sloan, and Dr. Robert P. Knapp worked on him until 3 p. m., but failed to revive him.

Dr. W. R. Tinker, medical examiner, said that the electric current had killed the man because he had a weak heart and that ordinarily such a voltage is not fatal. Something in the electric service of the weaving mill had broken, causing the guards protecting against contact with the looms to become charged, said Dr. Tinker. Stevenson had placed his hands on the guards of two looms, establishing connection, and then dropped to the floor.

Two other men, Thomas E. Kane, and Norman B. Jones, weavers, had received light shocks and burns in the same way and were hurrying to shut off the current when Stevenson, a helper, came along and placed his hands on the guards. Dr. Knapp said that he had again treated them late tonight and that they were practically all right.

WOULD CREATE A VAST UNION OF NEWSPAPERS

NEW YORK, June 14.—(AP)—Eugene Greenhut today issued a statement explaining a plan to "create a union of daily and Sunday newspapers extending from coast to coast."

Mr. Greenhut, who is best known as the originator and organizer of the Hahn Department Stores, Inc., said in his statement that an organization of which he is the head proposes at the start "to set into this amalgamation a group of newspapers with records of earnings that will warrant a gross purchase price of at least $100,000,000."

Later, the statement said, other newspapers will be admitted to the union.

"We are creating this organization," the statement continued, "because we see an opportunity to do in the newspaper field what has been done and is being done successfully in other fields of business. There is neither politics nor propaganda in our plan."

M. Koenigsberg, former president of International News Service, has been engaged as technical advisor in the project, the statement said.

Reading a long prepared address, the Texan, who supported Alfred E. Smith as the democratic presidential candidate asserted that Mr. Raskob and his associates were changing the party into an instrument of the liquor interests and into a representative of groups opposed to the restriction of immigration.

The speaker, who declined to be interrupted during the forty minutes allotted him by the house said there still was no profession that Mr. Raskob was anything but a republican "with no interest in democratic principles," and added that it seemed that the new democratic chairman sought to destroy the democratic party.

SEVERAL WITNESSES TESTIFY IN FIRE INVESTIGATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 14.—A probe into the circumstances surrounding a blaze that damaged the residence at 1511 West Main street, owned by Charles Barrett, on the evening of Monday, May 27th was opened here today by State Police Commissioner Robert T. Hurley, in his capacity as state fire marshal. The probe by the marshal is in the nature of a hearing in which several witnesses are to be questioned behind closed doors. At the conclusion of the hearing Commissioner Hurley will prepare a decision as to whether the blaze was of incendiary origin, establishing a case of arson.

The hearing started shortly after 10 o'clock this morning in the common council chamber of the town building. Commissioner Hurley was accompanied by two secretaries, Lieutenant Russell A. Harmon, Sergeant Harris J. Hulburt and Officer Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks. The police investigation, made at the request of Fire Chief Wade U. Webster, has been conducted by Officer Heinold and County Investigator Rowe H. Wheeler of this city.

The first witness to be called was Miss Irene Mannick, local young girl, with whom Charles Barrett was walking along West Main street at the time the blaze in Barrett's house was discovered. Miss Mannick was followed in the hearing chamber by Barrett who remained under questioning for over four hours. Barrett created a stir at the scene of the fire when he became hysterical over the alleged loss of valuables. The pretentious 10-room house was willed to Barrett and his mother, Mary Barrett, from the Robertson estate.

During the afternoon George S. Hutchinson, a representative of the United States chamber of commerce and occupant of the second floor apartment in the Barrett house was called. Mrs. Hutchinson and her son, Rodney Clune, followed. At the time of the fire Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson were in Boston, Mass., and the Clune boy was attending a band rehearsal. Barrett maintained a room on the second floor, the lower apartment being vacant.

Fire Chief Wade U. Webster was next on the list to be called. A preliminary investigation by Chief Webster had disclosed that the fire had started from a mysterious origin in a partition on the second floor near a hot air furnace register.

A number of additional witnesses are expected to be called to testify before the state fire marshal when the hearing is resumed next week on a day that meets with the convenience of Commissioner Hurley.

With about $6,000 of the $12,000 industrial drive realized at a report meeting of the team captains Thursday night, the drive continued today in a clean-up of prospects who have not yet been seen. Despite the rising temperature, the "flying squadron" of chamber of commerce workers pitched right into their work. The drive has been extended for a number of days.

MEASURED HIMSELF ON CEMETERY GRAVE

Early in the week a man came here from New York looking up a line of genealogy, wherein his family name was concerned. He was back among the ancient kings and Egyptian prophets, but he was no piker, proposing to stop at nothing short of Noah. The visitor browsed around the town for a day or two, with side excursions to Plainfield and Canterbury, always with an eye for the antique. While in Jewett City, he gained the gratis services of two men who served him separately in the capacity of sight-seeing guide.

One day, his fancy ran to graveyards and granite. A visit, with an eminently qualified guide, to the Jewett City cemetery resulted in his gaining first hand information about Vermont, millstone pink, Quincy and Westerly granite.

Suddenly the ologist inquired how long a monument it would take for him. The guide, upon looking him over, declared that a six foot one would be about the thing." At this point the local man was struck with horror, had a hot flash and nearly threw a fit. The prospective gravestone purchaser, off with his coat and hat, and casting himself flat on his back on the grass beside a nearby monument, anxiously inquired if his feet "stuck over any on the end?"

The travelers found much of interest in the stories told by veterans of the Civil war, who fought with Lee and wore the gray. Following a fine visit with new experiences in many strange states, Mr. Tracy declares "Give me New England for all of any of them!"

Healthful vegetables need not be unappetizing

Little water and small amounts of sugar work wonder flavors in these beneficial foods

A FAMOUS cooking specialist, on the staff of two large magazines, has announced a discovery of importance to everyone interested in healthful, delicious foods.

This woman announces her discovery to all interested in better tasting foods. "We have discovered," she says, "that sugar in correct amounts added to the vegetables while cooking, intensifies the natural flavor in fresh vegetables, restores in large measure the flavor of freshness to slightly wilted vegetables, and enhances the flavor of canned vegetables." In all instances she emphasizes that sugar increases the food value of the vegetables. She gives the following delicious recipe:

PEAS COUNTRY STYLE—To 2 cups of shelled peas, allow 4 young tender carrots, and a small onion. Scrape and slice the carrots, and cook them and the peas in just enough water to cover, adding 1 level tablespoon of granulated sugar. When nearly tender add a chopped onion and 1 generous tablespoon of butter. Add salt and pepper to taste and 1 level teaspoon of sugar. Simmer until the onion is cooked.

The wonderful thing about sugar as a flavorer, recommended by good cooks and scientists alike, is that it develops the appetizing flavors of fruits and meats as well as vegetables—in fact makes nearly every good food more palatable. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

Any man who does you an ill turn will never forgive you for it.

PUTNAM

POMFRET SCHOOL CLOSES FOR THE SUMMER RECESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PTNUAM, June 14—The curtain fell at noon today on the 1929 school year at Pomfret school as the student body of the college preparatory departed for their homes on a special coach of the 1:35 o'clock train out of Pomfret this afternoon. The final day of commencement was known as prize day and elaborate exercises took place on the campus this morning. Services in Clark Memorial chapel marked the beginning of closing exercises followed by the awarding of prizes to the honor students and the presentation of diplomas to 27 graduates. The exercises took place in the Hard auditorium.

Dr. B. Iddings Brown, of St. Stephen's college, at Columbia university, delivered the prize day address. The valedictory was given by Dwight A. Horne, head monitor of the school and was spoken in behalf of the sixth form. Bishop Lloyd, chairman of the board of trustees at Pomfret school, pronounced benediction and this was followed by luncheon in the school dining room.

Thursday evening the torchlight parade of students about the campus, the bon fire and fireworks were held while a crowd estimated at 5,000 swarmed across the campus and looked on. The display of colored fire was one of the most beautiful seen at Pomfret in many years. At the close of the exercises the immense aggregation of humanity moved again across the green acre in front of the school dormitories and jammed Pomfret street for nearly two hours. The traffic lanes immediately became tied up, but efficient work on the part of officers from the state police barracks at Danielson ably solved the problem and the situation was cleared without a mishap.

The academic year at Putnam high school socially came to a close at two o'clock this afternoon with the last final examinations, which have been in progress for a week. The student body in carrying on the long established custom paraded from the school campus to the Congregational church where rehearsals for graduation took place. This will be the first event on the commencement program for 1929, and will be held Sunday evening.

Another incident as to "Why mothers grow gray," occurred today when the city street department took on the oiling of streets on the east side of the city. In the course of events a number of tempted sons wandered home from school in the role of "tar babies," covered from head to feet with a portion of the asphalt treatment originally intended to dampen the dust of the highways maintained by the city.

Far sighted business men who realize the value of a central spot for the sale of fireworks to be used in the celebration of the Fourth of July, are now making application for selling permits of the explosives to Mayor Charles A. Richard. While the chief executive of the city has made no statements as to the code of laws to be observed before a permit will be granted it is thought there will not be as many fireworks stands this year as was last. Mayor Richard said yesterday, that the explosives may be sold only in structures erected for that purpose and must be within a specified distance from any building. Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston will examine all structures and will carefully investigate all applications before the mayor issues any permits.

Members of the headquarters company of the 43rd. division were in Danielson last night where they took part in the Eastern Connecticut Textile exhibit. The guardsmen were called upon to do escort duty while in the borough.

Jerry Nelson, 17, and Wendell Hardy, 18, were lodged in Brooklyn jail Thursday evening in cells adjoining those occupied by the "Ice Box" bandits, convicted slayers of State Trooper Irving H. Nelson. Both of the youthful bandits who figured in a holdup in Putnam, Wednesday, are to await trial in superior court. It was learned this afternoon they will be arraigned some time during the coming week, on a bench warrant. Frank Rockas, the 13 year old murderer and leader of the trio, began his journey back to the state industrial school at Manchester, N. H., last evening in care of the superintendent of the institution who took him into custody on an order from Judge M. H. Geissler.

The stock of the bankrupt Bonneville clothing store in the Central block on Main street, was examined and checked up this afternoon by local attorneys who hold claims against the insolvent store. While it was not stated definitely it is believed that the clothing and other furnishings in the house are being prepared for referee's auction sale.

In the light of a beautiful sunset and after a blazing hot day that had turned the asphalt streets into a soggy marching ground veterans of three wars and members of civic and patriotic organizations marched down Main street to the north end of the city to St. Mary's school grounds where patriotic services in honor of the American flag, sponsored by the Putnam lodge of Elks were held.

With bands playing and the colors flying in the evening breeze the fifteen participating organizations marched between flag decorated curbs lined with hosts of spectators. Major A. D. McIntyre was marshal of the procession assisted by Lieut. F. H. Murphy, of the headquarters company. In the forepart of the parade marched a platoon of police officers. The Albert J. Breault post V. F. W., furnished the music for the first division bodies and following was the headquarters company of the 43rd. Div., C. N. G., Capt. J. J. McGarry commanding. The order of formation of the veterans units was as follows: Ansiem Mayotte post, American Legion; A. Wilder Merriam camp, United Spanish War Veterans; Albert J. Breault post, V. F. W.; Garde Foch, under the command of Capt. David Breault; Grosvenordale Garde Martial under the command of A. Therrien; St. Mary's Boy Scout band, followed by St. Mary's Boy Scout troops; Cargill council, K. of C.; Putnam Rotary club and Putnam lodge of Elks. Once again, the nine remaining members of the A. G. Warner post, G. A. R., Putnam's last surviving members of the Civil war, mustered together to take part in the Elks' tribute to "Old Glory." The aged veterans ever mindful of the task they were performing, rode near the end of the line in automobiles from which their colors were flying.

At the school grounds where disbandment took place the mandatory services from the Elks' ritual were read. Rev. James F. English pronounced benediction and also delivered the address of the evening—an oration in which he paid in behalf of the citizens of Putnam, highest tribute to the flag of the United States and to those who fought under it to uphold and defend the principals of the country which it represented.

L. Edwin Hill, secretary of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. organization, delivered the history of the flags of the U. S. As Mr. Hill commented on each flag, describing its origin, the period in which it was used, a Boy Scout came out from behind the speaking platform carrying aloft a replica of the banner. In this manner the audience obtained a vivid picture of the evolution of our country's standard until the development of the present day stars and stripes.

The Flag day services of Friday evening were by far the most impressive ever held in Putnam and the response to the city's organization to aid the "Brother Bills" in their parade effort far surpassed that of other years.

It encourages an extreme form of grain farming for quick returns whereas cash renters give more attention to hay and pasture, conserving fertility and producing livestock.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the West Town street school district, at a district meeting, voted to authorize the treasurer to borrow money to pay the teachers and the current expenses of the district for the previous year. A resolution to lay a tax to pay off a $1,500 mortgage was voted down.

Monday, June 9, 1879—The new abutment wall has been begun on Laurel Hill avenue and the heavy granite corner post set. With an additional width of 25 feet and an iron rail fence that avenue will be much improved.

The City and Tubbs' band filled our thoroughfares with music Saturday night as they passed to St. Patrick's church, where they played during the evening. The lotteries all closed on Saturday night and tonight the grand affair closes. The cash receipts probably exceedthe receipts of any affair ever held here.

The probabilities are that the larger part of the lodges invited to visit this city on Wednesday evening next by St. James and Somerset lodges, F. and A. M., will accept the invitation. The Masonic brethren of the city are making ready for a grand festival and, taken as a whole, it will probably excel anything of the kind that the fraternity has ever given heretofore.

Tuesday, June 10, 1879—The steamer Ella left the city yesterday to enter the fruit freighting business between Greenport, L. I., and New London, in which she will be engaged for about two weeks, when she will return to her route on the Thames. She has been made new from the transom, aft and thoroughly overhauled.

The new lamp posts have arrived and been placed in position in front of St. Patrick's church, Broadway. They are of beautiful design and of bronze.

The Young People's society of Buckingham chapel are to give a fair and festival this evening at the chapel. The proceeds are to be given to a charitable object and we bespeak for the entertainment a large patronage.

Wednesday, June 11, 1879—Mr. David A. Wells of this city was married on Tuesday to Miss Dwight, sister of his late wife, and of Mrs. Dr. Fordyce Barker of New York. The ceremony was performed in Calvary church, New York city.

SELF PROTECTION.

If it were possible to discriminate between the good and the bad there might be some excuse for those who experience losses and hardships at the hands of hitch hikers, but there doesn't appear. It is simply a case of judgment and that often goes wrong, as was glaringly illustrated by the case of the Massachusetts man who was held up on the Putnam pike by one of three young men who had escaped from a New Hampshire reformatory.

The Massachusetts man was carried away by sympathy. He had seen the truck ahead refuse to give the fellow a ride, probably the answer to all appeals, but he was influenced in his own decision by the appearance of the youth. He looked good, but his appearances were deceiving for it was not long before he put a gun into the ribs of the friendly driver, formed him to leave the car, and with the aid of the two companions who had been picked up was tied to a tree and left by the roadside.

This was by no means the first instance where well disposed drivers have been mistreated. Some have fared worse and the result has been a warning to drivers to refrain from yielding to those who appeal for rides.

There are cases where honest requests for rides are made, probably they are by far the more numerous, but the inability of the drivers to distinguish the good from the bad leaves nothing else for them to do but to treat them all alike and turn a cold shoulder in each instance.

Those who have been disposed to stick to their own ideas in this respect must be impressed by the result of the Massachusetts man's judgment. Because he was well disposed profited him not. He was the victim because he was willing to be, and we have no doubt but what he will display a different attitude and look at hitch hikers through different glasses in his future driving. He persisted in having his personal experience. He might have profited from the lesson of others but there's no certainty that all who read or know about his experience will adopt the trucksman's practice in the future. Therein, however, lies greater protection.

THE OIL ORDER.

Getting consideration for the oil conservation plan on a national basis is not going to be the easiest thing. It may be pointed out that there is a great overproduction and as the result of it there is a great waste and yet when it comes to having anything interfere with oil operations in the respective states it can be expected that it will encounter a howl of protest by all those who think that their particular state ought to be included. The idea of stopping the overproduction and the waste by the other fellow is a good thing but there is a different attitude when it comes to self.

That was the spirit that was encountered at the conference held in Colorado for the purpose of considering the order preventing the opening up of new wells on government-owned land. The conference didn't come to any conclusion but it was apparent that there was a division of opinion. States which appreciated the protection to the oil supply of the country were offset by those which had been contemplating the developments which would follow the opening up of new fields.

Because the country has been drawing much oil from the ground for years fails to inspire some who are newly interested in oil fields with the importance of conservation. They want to plunge in the same as those who raided the forests years ago and let the future take care of itself the best it can. They cannot see beyond the immediate present.

Ordinarily this situation would encounter no opposition. It is because of the production of oil so much faster than it is being consumed, and therefore so fast that it is being wasted, that there is need of placing the check that is represented by the president's order. Without doubt those who are displaying an opposition would take a different attitude were it not a fact that it has the effect of interfering with their pet schemes.

BUS SERVICE.

Even as busses have replaced trolleys here in the east it is only to be expected that there will be a gradual substitution throughout the country. As it is the east is by no means the only section of the country that is getting bus service. It will be found in all directions with the cities having a certain amount of suburban and intercity service in some states.

Through the middle west the bus service is being extended. There are terminals for several lines and schedules are maintained but except for the lines which may be linked up with a particular system there is more or less difficulty in getting information concerning service. It is possible to learn about the busses which run out of a particular city but when it comes to finding out whether there is bus service out of some of the other cities and what kind of connections can be made one may travel far and make many inquiries without being able to get a definite answer. Some may venture confidence that such transportation is available, some may have heard someone else speak about it, but there is little in black and white to figure on. With many separate lines and many routes there is of course no time table which includes them all and consequently those who like to study time tables are denied even that fun.

And yet the bus is growing in numbers and covering longer distances. It is possible to go from coast to coast by bus, some having sleeping compartments for the accommodation of a limited number. For a long time various lines have been furnishing a tourist service to any part of the country personally conducted.

Thus we have occasion to note an important change in transportation service, a change that has even had its effect upon public transportation within cities. In the fight to continue service the cutting of expenses has been found necessary by transportation companies and the bus has been readily turned to for this reason. Furthermore there has been a public demand for such a change. Busses are maintaining service where electrics could not exist and increasing both for long and short distance service. It is having its day, but no one knows for how long.

THE NEAR EAST CAMPAIGN.

If there has been any question as to the advisability of supporting the work that is being done in the near east, it should be dispelled by the great personal contribution which has been made in behalf of that cause by Rev. Christopher Thurber, a former Norwich boy.

For years he has been devoting his life to that service for humanity. His example has been an inspiration. His close application and zeal have created added interest. He has by his work put the stamp of approval upon it not only for himself but for others who know his conscientious and self-sacrificing devotion to that cause.

This state has been among the leaders in its contributions to the relief work in the near east. With this month there will end the effort for $5,000 from Connecticut, the last of the appeals which have been made yearly for contributions to care for the refugees, the mistreated and the orphans. Locally Bundle day is to be observed next week from which it is expected to obtain contributions of clothing for needy refugees and the orphans in Armenia, Syria and Greece.

There has been an eagerness to contribute to the proper care of the orphans in the past and now that they have gotten to the point where only about 20,000 of them remain to be helped it is proper that they should be given the assistance that will assure the successful completion of this great work.

The near east relief sees the time approaching when its responsibilities will cease but it cannot abandon what is now an incomplete job it deserves to be carried along that the finish of a finely administered job may be assured. We should bear in mind the application of the Golden Rule in this fine endeavor, as well as the fine example in giving of Rev. Christopher Thurber.

YELLOW BIRD'S STOWAWAY.

The stowaway whose sole consideration was to get the publicity attached to his act of crossing the Atlantic in the Yellow Bird contributed much additional weight to the French monoplane. It is not improbable that it would otherwise have been caused. It earlier exhaustion of the fuel than would otherwise have been cause. It may be figured that but for the presence of the young man aboard the plane it would have reached Paris without a stop.

At the time of the departure of the plane attention was halted by the report which showed that the French pilot ordered 100 gallons taken from the fuel tanks after he had been informed that 1100 gallons had been placed therein. Certainly it would have been possible for the plane to have carried this additional 100 gallons, or a tenth more gallons than it did, if the stowaway had not been aboard.

There is much cause for satisfaction that the Yellow Bird succeeded in its flight over the Atlantic even though it did not get to its destination without a stop. Its accomplishment with four instead of three men is all the more to its credit and yet that additional weight probably accounts for the taking of the southern route and its landing on the coast of Spain.

Stowing away in a flying machine is a serious matter for all concerned. There is more involved than the violation of rules and regulations. It might easily mean the loss of life for the whole party or the wrecking of plans for a flight. It takes courage to do such a thing but it represents a recklessness that shows no consideration for the others. It demonstrates the need of a thorough inspection of planes before setting out on long trips, something which the Yellow Bird apparently did not receive at the last minute.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

In the same paper the other day I read these two accounts which speak for themselves as to the administration of justice. In New Haven a man of good standing and belonging to the old American stock, through sheer carelessness in operating his automobile caused the death of two individuals. For this misdemeanor he was sentenced in the superior court to three months in jail. Whether this was a just sentence or not it may be hard for an outsider to judge, but what do you think of it in comparison with the following: On the same day in Lynn, Mass., a man, evidently Polish, out of work and hungry, robbed a man of 15 cents to buy food with, and for this awful crime was sentenced from three to five years in state prison. Is it true or not that the man without friends who is down and out has no show whatever in our courts? This claim has been made. In spite of instances like this we still prate about "justice to all".

To one who loves rural scenes and likes to ramble over country fields and hills it is amazing how little attention is given to poison ivy. It is one of the most persistent of all vines in its capacity for growth, and is as tenacious of life as a cat. It will grow in all sorts of soil and with the utmost rapidity. There are a few things that the farmer could do to satisfy the general public more than to eradicate poison ivy. Most of the land adjoining the roadside that supports this nuisance belongs to the farmer. While we admit that his hands are generally needed in getting a living, there are still seasons when he could devote himself to this work of destruction. Some of the most delightful rambles here in New England are to be found in narrow paths and mountain sides, but poison ivy makes it impossible for many. Let us prohibit the farther life of poison ivy!

If a person is so secular-minded as to keep in touch with the stock market—and I am told that there are, even outside of New York—he must be more and more impressed with the increasing importance that is being put on common stocks. For a long time it would seem that the preferred stocks were the financial uppercrusts, or the nobility. But within a few years the common stocks have been coming into prominence. In this there is a parallel to the history of the human race. For many centuries (altogether too many centuries) the nobility was the preferred stock in this human stock market: it was your kings, emperors, czars, princes high and low, mostly low, while all the rest of mankind was mostly common fodder. But times have changed along this line and in some instances most completely. The common stock is rising in this great human stock market, and is now getting at least some merited recognition.

One of the admirable things of this world is thrift, and thrift is not confined to any age, race or creed. Many of those Old Testament patriarchs, while they did not quite measure up to the ideal of sainthood, certainly had some gray matter and were thrifty. Of course it would hardly be fair to measure their activities by the yardstick of modern business ethics. As the writer of these notes looks at some of the new settlements of our city, made up largely of foreigners, he cannot fail to admire their capacity and evidently willingness to work. Where only a few years ago was only a barren pasture now is a thriving community with flower and vegetable gardens of which anyone may justly be proud. In this age we do not judge men by what their grandfathers were but by their capacity to do and by what they actually accomplish.

Among the factors that make for human greatness is it race or the willingness to accept opportunity? Which of the two is the more important factor? If to opportunity you add a powerful will to succeed you have a combination of powerful forces that cannot be easily broken. Where these things exist mere race vanishes entirely from view. We no longer bow down to a man whose grandmother was related to the duke of Wellington. The writer recently heard a young Hindu read an essay at graduation. He was honored with the magna cum laude degree, next to the highest bestowed upon a graduating student. Only a few years ago he was a poor boy. By dint of energy he worked his way through the University of Calcutta, he came to this country and graduated as a bachelor of divinity. We forget the color of his skin when we see the keenness of his mind and the nobility of his spirit.

When you see a person whose life seems to be made up of a series of contrarieties, don't be too harsh in your criticism because nature sets him a very conspicuous example. Now in the first place we do find people who exhibit strange contradictions. They remind us of the prediction that Jacob made of his son Reuben: "Unstable as water thou shalt not excel!" We are all acquainted with such people, and possibly we ourselves more or less come under this condemnation. But if man is fickle he can find congenial companionship with nature. For instance, compare the weather in April and May with what it was during the early part of this month, and certainly this goes Reuben one better in the general line of instability. We most assuredly have a right to conclude when we think of the conspicuous instability of man, he is not alone in this matter.

The address given this year to the graduating class of the Yale Divinity school was by Professor Henry H. Tweedy, who is in charge of the department of homiletics. His subject was The Problem of the Impossible. It was a remarkably keen interpretation of the spirit of the age. Prof. Tweedy said that the only way to deal with the impossible was to make it possible. At first this statement seems, of course, to be a contradiction of terms. If anything in itself is actually impossible it can never be anything else. In every age of the world when anything radically new has been attempted the general cry has been, "It can't be done!" Prof. Tweedy used illustrations to prove his point. Edison failed in several hundred experiments to find something that could stand the heat of electricity, until he found the carbon fibre. So much has been done to conquer what was supposed to be impossible that we may ask does it really exist?

Not long ago a certain man was sitting in his summer house at the twilight hour writing an article for a monthly magazine, entitled, "Yesterday and Today". He was asked to make a sharp contrast and to put it vividly. In so doing it happened that he was not compelled to draw upon his imagination. He could not honestly say in that beautiful sunset hour that "cannon at the right of him and cannon at the left of him volleyed and thundered" but he could with a clear conscience say that airplanes above him were buzzing and humming. Now was not that a contrast to the experience of Jonathan Edwards who loved to write in the stillness of the twilight hour? The writer also thought of the almost impossible gulf between the automobile and the old stage coach. All these things put emphasis upon what Galileo once said, and suffered for saying it, "the earth does move!"

THE FIRST BURYING GROUND IN NORWICH

A special meeting of the board of managers of the Society of the Founders of Norwich was held at the home of Mrs. Huntington Wilson on Thursday evening, May 23, 1929, for the purpose of considering what action, if any, could be taken to ascertain, fix and preserve the location and boundaries of the old cemetery near the John Mason monument off Lee avenue at Norwich Town.

At this meeting the following paper was read by William S. Case of Norwich Town:

Where are its boundaries?

The first necessary step is to give as good a description as is possible at this time of the locality in which this burying ground is situated.

There is a division or boundary line between the Gager and Post home lots, east and west.

The corner of the Gager home lot where it juts into the back part of the Post home lot was, some time after the settlement, separated or fenced off from the rest, for the reason that it is much better land than the other land surrounding it. After its separation it was known as the "Foxborough lot."

Ninety years ago my grandfather, Deacon Samuel Case, purchased the "Foxborough lot." Eighty years ago my grandfather, William Wheat Hood, purchased a part of the Post home lot and built a home for himself. While digging the foundation the workmen dug into an old cellar with the result that the present house stands upon the original site of the old Post homestead. Considering the circumstances, it should not be surprising that possibly I may possess more and entirely different information than any other person.

Tried To Interest Others

On Thursday evening, May 9th, Mr. Murray called upon me seeking information relative to the "first burying ground in Norwich." I wish to say right here that Mr. Murray is the first and only person who has ever taken the initiative to seek such information from me.

I have endeavored at various times to interest others in this subject and with but one exception I never succeeded in doing so. For that reason I am really glad to be here this evening. What I may have to say will be an honest effort on my part to convey to you any information I may possess relative to this matter.

It is undoubtedly impossible for any one at this late day to commence with the beginnings of the history of the town, follow along with any known facts, and locate this burying ground. It can only be done by someone more or less familiar with some particular phase of this subject, and by harmonizing facts, traditions, recollections, inferences, and the study of the meaning that it was intended to convey by the use of perhaps indefinite words and statements used to describe certain facts and conditions.

I am obliged to commence at a late date nearly 180 years after the founding of the town and work in both directions to harmonize these facts.

Purchase of "Foxborough Lot"

In 1839 my grandfather, Deacon Samuel Case, purchased of Elisha Tracy that part of the Gager home lot known as the "Foxborough lot."

It contained about three and one-half acres and included that portion of the burying ground purchased by the town of John Gager. At this time the burying ground, although neglected, still retained the evidences of its former use. The stone marking the grave of Mr. Gager (Samuel Gager) was still standing, and a few other graves or groups were marked with good-sized stones or boulders.

The boundary lines of this property have been preserved until the present time. Mr. Case was in possession of this property for five years. In 1844 at the earnest solicitation of Lyman W. Lee, who was at that time living in the Barrett house, and in possession of the former Post home lot, Mr. Case sold to Daniel L. Huntington the "Foxborough lot" containing the small burying ground. At this time on the Post side of the boundary line there was not a vestige of evidence visible of its former use.

A few years subsequent to this sale to Mr. Lee, the Gager grave stone had been removed, broken in several pieces and deposited under the old oak tree. These pieces remained there for years. Some few were gathered together and placed under the Mason monument. The rough stones were removed, and from this time the old First burying ground had entirely disappeared. It was entirely obliterated and had assumed its former natural appearance. The fact that the boundary line between the Post and Gager home lots is still preserved, and the preservation of the Gager burying ground with its stone and markers until 1844, makes the location of the entire Post-Gager burying ground a possibility at this present time.

Disposal of Post Estate

The Post estate, after being in the possession of the family for three generations, was sold to Ezekiel Barrett April 14, 1775. The Post portion of the burying ground in all probability was in fairly good condition. There is every reason to think that the same respect was shown to the burying ground as to the whole by the descendants of both families.

Mr. Barrett built the present house and occupied the same for more than 60 years. Now at some time during his occupancy all signs of the Post burying ground disappeared, but the Gager part was still preserved.

At the present time the town owns the burying ground. It can be located, and perhaps its original bounds restored. To do this we must bear in mind that the deed of the Foxborough lot to Mr. Case includes the Gager portion of the old burying ground, and until the time of its purchase had been respected as such, although all trace of the Post portion had long since disappeared. This lot was in the possession of Mr. Case for five years. Mr. Case lived for 40 years after this date, until 1884.

This lot was very near his home, so that he and other members of his family were cognizant of practically all that transpired in regard to this burying ground. My father, William T. Case, was 7 years of age when the Foxborough lot was bought. There were four older brothers, The late S. Bailey Case was 19 years of age at this time. It was a large family—ten children. Some of the older ones worked in the garden; the unused portion, containing the Gager part of the burying ground, was the playground of the younger children.

In later years I was shown about the position of the Gager stone as it stood during those five years. These facts enable me to locate the Gager part of the Post-Gager burying ground.

Obliteration of Post Burying Ground

The obliteration of the Post burying ground did not encroach upon the Gager part. We can now view the burying ground as a whole from what had been preserved until 1884—one part preserved, the other part entirely lost to sight. The boundary line between the two parts is the same now as it was at that time.

The first person to die was the wife of Thomas Post. Miss Caulkins says she was buried on the home lot of her husband, and the place of her interment was soon after sequestered, and appropriated by the town authorities for the common place of burial of the inhabitants."

On Dec. 16, 1661, it was recorded: "The town hath purchased a burying place of Thomas Post, vide, a parcel of land eight rod one way and five and one-half rod the other way in the home lot of the said Thomas Post, towards the rear of his lot adjoining the west side of Goodman Gager's lot."

Afterward an addition was made from the adjoining lot of John Gager. In 1692, more than 30 years after the date of the first burial, it had assumed the shape of an "irregular oblong plot—eleven rods in extreme length by seven rods in its greatest breadth."

Location of Post Burying Ground

We now come to the location of the Post portion of the burying ground. I can give it only one location, and for this reason: That I have always been told that this is its location.

We have certain knowledge relative to the location of the Gager addition to the Post burying ground, for it was included in the Foxborough lot, and that these two portions were joined together in one plot.

We also know that the Post portion was not in the rear of his lot adjoining the west side of the Gager lot, but was towards the rear and did include the place of interment of Mrs. Post. This locates the burying ground as a whole very near its original bounds.

Now does this location agree with the description given in the record? It certainly does.

The nature, the composition of the soil of that part of the home lot of Thomas Post that does adjoin the west side of the Gager-Foxborough lot is unfit for burial purposes. It is a high hill with a very steep hillside. The ground is very coarse stone and coarse gravel.

Starting at the north corner of the fence on the west side of the Foxborough lot was a path leading around the foot of this hill to a pond of water where the cattle could drink.

This corner of the fence in the boundry line between the Gager burying ground and the Post burying ground is the point by which both portions may be located, having never been materially changed during the long ownership of the Post-Barrett-and-Lee families, more than 250 years.

It was an irregular oblong plot.

It was not marked with any bounds.

It was the Gager addition that increased its width.

The widest part begins at the corner post.

Its shape was assumed or caused by the evidences of its use.

These were its dimensions in 1692.

It was used until seven years later, 1700.

There were occasional burials afterward. The last one recorded in 1740.

The size must have increased considerably in seven years' use.

Possesses Post Home Lot 115 Years

In the deed of conveyance of the Post home lot by Joseph Post of Lebanon when sold to Ezekiel Barrett, after describing the bounds, is this clause: "Excluding about 32 rods of land within the said bounds belonging to the town of Norwich, being the old burying ground with liberty of a pent way across my other land from the Town street to the above bargained premises, to pass and repass." Miss Caulkins says that this reference is probably the latest record of the old graveyard.

The Post home lot remained in the possession of the Post descendants for 115 years, in the possession of Ezekiel Barrett 63 years, and in the family of the late Lyman W. Lee until some time about 1928, 90 years recording only transfers to two families in a period of 268 years. This statement of course refers only to that portion containing the burying ground in the Post home lot.

The latest burial in the Post-Gager burying gorund was that of George W. Perkins, a respected resident of Bean Hill, who died June 20, 1838, aged 42 years. His death was caused by a carbuncle. It was also thought that it was connected with the smallpox. Dissolution followed very quickly after death. Because of these distressing circumstances almost immediate burial was necessary. A grave was opened in the Post portion of the old burying ground. It was about 25 feet from the corner post in the boundary line between the Post and Gager home lots.

After a long time the body was transferred to another burial ground, presumably Scotland, Ct., his native town. The body was removed in the night. Deacon Case, who had been inoculated in his early youth for the smallpox—a theory that was just beginning to be put into practice by, and with the consent of the town authorities, after a long and bitter contest with the medical fraternity, assisted in both instances. The great coat worn by him on this last occasion hung for years in the woodshed, an object of suspicion and fear.

The depression in the ground caused by the removal of the body remained visible until a few years before the death of Mr. Lee when quite a quantity of topsoil was removed.

Two Interesting Points

I wish to call your attention to two points relative to the location of the burying ground.

First, that the possession of the Foxborough lot with a small burying ground included, at a time when my father was a boy from 7 to 12 years of age, produced an impression upon him never to be forgotten. Thus during my boyhood he took the opportunity to form a like impression upon myself. It is because of this fact that I am able to attempt the location of the Gager part of the burying ground.

Second, that although this last burial in the Post part occurred at a time when I was very young, yet the fact was that my grandfather's services at this burial in this old part of the Post burying ground was occasionally referred to for many years afterward.

The real fact is this: That at one time Deacon Samuel Case owned the Foxborough lot which contained the Gager part of the burying ground, and he knew where the bounds were.

At a later date he assisted in opening a grave in the old Post burying ground. Mr. Lee, the owner of the former Post home lot, was present, and they both knew the bounds. The Gager lot at this time was in good mowing.

The location I have tried to give you of the Gager part of the burying ground is undoubtedly correct. It was joined to the Post part in one oblong plot.

That this is the property of the town of Norwich there can be no doubt. That it still remains subject to the will of the voters and taxpayers is perhaps a fact.

Now this point or place seems to be a logical one to end the subject. But I am asking you to indulge me for a few moments. Perhaps you may have thoughts like these: Why should this one family for three generations show this interest, sentiment and respect for this burying ground and the people who lie buried within its boundaries?

My explanation is this: That the playground of this large family—ten children—was the unused part of the Foxborough lot containing the Gager burying ground with the few stones remaining. It produced an impression that affected the whole family.

My father died in 1910. Some time after his death I found among his papers a few lines upon the very subject we have under consideration this evening.

I have two reasons why I wish to read them now.

First—They plainly show this sentiment referred to and also show that I have not overdrawn this fact in any way.

Second, these lines are more or less descriptive of the locality and are written by one who in his youth beheld the graves and memorials of some of the Founders of Norwich.

First Burial Spot in Norwich

On a gently sloping hilltop where our fathers settled down
There is an ancient burial lot, the most ancient in the town,
Where our fathers laid their loved ones to return again to dust,

II

Our Dear Old Pilgrim fathers from a far-off distant place
To this primeval forest wild they turned an anxious face
And then amid these hills and dales they fixed their humble homes
And here within this burial spot they laid away their bones.

III

They fixed upon this burial spot, close by the old Town street
That daily as they passed along this spot their eye might greet.
And when they all as years passed by were gathered one by one
By loving hands were laid to rest, their life work being done.

IV

Around this hill the meadows are all dressed in living green
And flowing in the distance was the Yantic river seen.
While far away on either hand the forests seem to rise
And from the distant hilltops spread their branches to the skies.

V

Here is the lane where mourners walked, They all were mourners then;
They came from every hearthstone, the hillside and the plain,
And with their reverend pastor, with all members of his flock
They all indeed were stricken—for they all had felt the shock.

VI

Within this burial spot are laid the most of those who came,
Who journied through the wilderness, a long and weary train,
They settled down, devoid of fear, to build themselves a home.

VII

As death drew near they one by one obeyed the stern command;
For let us settle where we will, He soon shall feel His hand,
Methinks I see them passing now in silence through this lane
And all have come as mourners in this sad and mournful train.

VIII

Up through this lane, upon this hill, they bear their honored dead
And as they laid them down to rest the bitter tear was shed;
Not one of all the hamlet but had lost a bosom friend
And then they all in sorrow turn and to their homes descend.

IX

Upon this ancient burial spot a granite shaft now stands,
Attracting all attention by the view that it commands;
Upon it are inscribed the names of famous, noble men
Whose gallant deeds for liberty are told by tongue and pen.

X

The rising generation live in ignorance of this spot,
The very names here carved in stone are nearly all forgot;
Here lie the men who bought this town and made for you a home,

XI

Near by this stone a stalwart oak lifts high its towering head
As it in stately silence keeps the bivouac of the dead.
The busy town speeds on, wildly on, and heeds not tree nor stone;
These fathers of the hamlet sleep—forgotten—and—alone.

YOUR HEALTH

"Adenoid Face" and Train of Symptoms Follow Non-Removal of Adenoids

By Ada E. Schweitzer, M. D., Director, Division of Infant and Child Hygiene, Indiana State Board of Health.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute.)

An adequate supply of oxygen is so essential to the processes involved in growth that most mothers are careful to keep the air in the nursery in motion, and to insure ingress of fresh air. Some babies fail to get enough oxygen even under the most favorable external conditions, because of some obstruction to breathing. Parents often are puzzled to account for a baby's difficult breathing, thinking he is "too young" to have adenoids, and are surprised to learn that this condition may be present at birth.

If a baby has difficulty in breathing, fights for breath, and appears to swallow its tongue, an examination by the physician should be made to discover the cause of the difficulty. The child may have adenoids. Such infants are likely also to suffer from convulsions, vomiting and prolonged coughing attacks. Relief should be sought at once. If the symptoms are less severe and the condition extends over a longer period, the child at the age of 3 or over will present a typical facial deformity known as adenoid face. The mouth is held open, the lips are thick, the teeth project. A discharge of muco-pus from the nose is usually present or the nostrils may be filled with crusts that block the anteriorares and the pus is then swallowed. The child breathes noisily, often being heard "all over the house." He gets out of breath easily, and is very restless during sleep.

Mouth breathing causes dryness of the tongue and the child frequently complains of thirst. He is likely to bolt his food because he can hardly chew and at the same time get enough air through the mouth. He must have air, so he swallows the food without chewing and makes the stomach work overtime. Digestion is interfered with and the child suffers from faulty nutrition.

The voice has the dead tone noted in nasal obstruction due to a cold. The most serious damage is likely to be the change in the shape of nasal bones. The passages are narrowed and as the jaw narrows the palate arch raises. The space to be used for breathing becomes more limited. The lower jaw fails to develop and the chin is "weak."

Early diagnosis and treatment will prevent many of these deformities.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 14—It has not been often that a governor general of the Philippines has come to his post with as complete a preliminary background as Dwight F. Davis of Missouri should have when he takes over in Manila.

For one thing, he is the first former war secretary to get the job. Chief Justice Taft, of course, filled both posts, but in the reverse order. He was first president of the Philippine commission, then first civil governor of the islands under Roosevelt with instructions to "sit on the lid," and then Roosevelt's war secretary.

It will be interesting to see how Mr. Davis reacts to executive responsibility in the islands after his several years as the right hand of the Washington administration on insular affairs, which is a part of the war secretary's function.

Also it will be even more interesting to note which group of Mr. Davis' friends is right about how his new assignment will effect his political future.

One lot hold that the governor generalship has been and will be again a stepping stone to further political advancement; the other that it amounts to political exile, as a general rule.

His Career

Mr. Davis has been credited with senatorial ambitions. Both he and "Young Teddy" Roosevelt, who goes to Porto Rico as governor, are of that small group of financially independent Americans who have embarked on politics as a career.

They are in the game for the game's sake, not for salary or, particularly, for social reasons.

Mr. Davis is considerably older than Mr. Roosevelt, however, and it seems probable that he sees no very early prospect of getting into the senate in the present political situation in Missouri.

Roosevelt has a liking for executive work. The Bystander recalls talking with him at Kansas City after the Hoover nomination and then learning that the New Yorker was anxious to keep actively in political harness. Although he expected no cabinet office and would not consider another hitch as an assistant or under secretary in Washington.

What he hoped for was assignment by President Hoover to some important presidential commission, and the governorship of Porto Rico probably affords him a good substitute for that. Whether it will give him opportunity for further political advancement as time passes is another matter.

Army Losing Out

In connection with Mr. Davis' appointment, the Bystander learns that army seniors are giving considerable thought to the fact that the group of older army and navy men with wide background of colonial experience is diminishing rapidly.

There are not so many, like General McCoy, to whom the government can turn. The elders have been looking over the field of younger men in both services recently with a view to encouraging a selected group to specialize on insular affairs, feeling that there always will be need of non-political colonial experts.

Sunday Morning Talk

Jesus Calls Us.

Peter says to Jesus: Lord, if it be thou; or, since it be thou, just the faintest suggestion of a doubt; bid me to come unto thee on the water, and Jesus said: Come. Jesus knew his courage would fail, but he wished him to learn a much needed lesson. But when he saw he was the wind bolstered—as long as Peter looked at Jesus, he was safe, but when he turned his gaze and thought from Jesus to the dangers about him he was filled with fear and began to sink. Lord save me—he turned instantly to the only source of help and made one of the shortest, most pointed, genuine and effective of prayers. Immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand. He is ever ready to succor the needy and answer the faintest, genuine cry for help. "Before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear." Wherefore didst thou doubt; we need not fear the tempest but only the weakness of our faith. Hence Christ does not calm the storm but takes Peter by the hand. "It is of no use to be near Christ in person unless we are near Him in faith!"

Jesus calls us; o'er the tumult
Of life's wild restless sea,
Day by day His sweet voice soundeth,
Saying Christian, follow me.

Jesus calls us, by Thy mercies,
Saviour may we hear Thy call
Give our hearts to Thy obedience,
Serve and love Thee best of all.

Jesus calls us from the worship
Of the vain worlds golden store,
From each idol that would keep us,
Saying, "Christian, love Me more."

In our joys and in our sorrows,
Days of toil and hours of ease,
Still He calls in cares and pleasures,
"Christian, love Me more than these."

In spite of the efforts to reduce highway grade crossings there were 1,125 more of them in 1927 that there were in 1926.

WORLD ADVERTISING WILL BE DISCUSSED

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— International advertising will be discussed in all its complicated phases at the convention of the international advertising association in Berlin from August 12 to 15.

American advertising leaders are hopeful of mustering a delegation of 2,500 to represent the United States at this meeting.

The cooperation of statesmen and diplomats in Germany and elsewhere is expected to make the convention one of special economic significance. The president of the association, C. C. Younggreen, was quoted recently as saying that the convention's purpose will be to show "the place of advertising in international trade, its relation to mass and quality production and the fundamental effects of advertising on living standards the world over."

Dr. Hans Luther, former chancellor of Germany, is expected to be chairman of the convention and it has been planned to transmit a special message from President Hoover on "Advertising—an aid to world prosperity."

CHEMICAL PRODUCTS SHOW IMPORT GAIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Prodigious expansion of international trade in chemical products is reflected in the department of commerce's list of more than 450 separate chemical items imported into the United States during March.

These include edible and inedible animal products, varnish gums, turpentine, tar, pitch, gums and resins, crude drugs, vegetable oils, essential and distilled oils, dyeing and tanning materials, camphor, balsams, non-metallic minerals, acids, anhydrides, alcohols, explosives, matches, pigment paints and varnishes.

The item which led in value was nitrate of soda, with a total for the month of $4,253,784.

CURB ON SPECULATION HITS COFFEE EXCHANGE

SANTOS, Brazil —(AP)— Once the scene of feverish activity, the floor of the famous Santos coffee exchange is silent.

Prior to the adoption of the valorization scheme by the state government of Sao Paulo, to stabilize coffee prices and coordinate its movement from production areas to the coast, sales would involve as high as 5,000,000 bags monthly.

Today, sales average 6,000 monthly and a movement of 25,000 bags is exceptional. The government action, taken three years ago, has checked speculation so effectively that the few sales now taking place on the floor usually are for the purpose of hedging.

"CONSTRUCTIVE YEAR," COTTON 'CHANGE SAYS

Gardiner H. Miller is beginning his second term as president. Fifteen members of the 1928-1929 board of governors will continue as members of the 1929-1930 board.

The outgoing board cites among its achievements "the limitation of interests in future contracts; the organization of a control committee; the establishment of deliveries in the south, as well as New York; and the trading in textile securities."

WALL STREET'S DIMES GO FOR STREET SHOWS

NEW YORK —(AP)— The financial district's summer season of street vaudeville got away to a lively start this year.

Jigs, fliptops, tumbling and fancy diving are the specialties. When school is out for the summer little bands of hard working artists descend on Wall street and display their tricks to the passing crowd.

The divers scramble for nickels and dimes in the fountain pools at Bowling Green and City Hall park. The other performers go to work wherever they can get an audience willing to toss them a few coins.

Will Try Pineapples.

MANILA —(AP)— Acting Governor Gilmore set aside 24,710 acres of the best land in the southern part of the archipelago as a first step toward the development of a pineapple industry. The land will be opened to settlers who will be furnished seeds and financial aid.

WHITE LEGHORNS LEAD IN WEEK AT STORRS

The first pen to pass the 2,000 mark was a pen of White Leghorns owned by George Lowry, West Willington, Conn. His entry this year is three weeks ahead of his record breaking pen last year which passed this mark in the thirty-fifth week.

At the close of the thirty-second week the 1,000 hens in the present contest at Storrs have a grand total of 138,724 eggs. This is an average of almost 139 eggs per bird. The net lay for the week was 4,403 or a yield of almost 63 per cent. This is 3 per cent. less than last week's production and 1.3 per cent. less than the score for the corresponding week last year.

Once again the pen of White Leghorns entered by Toivonen Leghorn farm, Girard, Pa., came through with enough eggs to give it first honors for the week, namely 64 eggs. A pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by F. S. Chapin, of Longmeadow, Mass., and two pens of White Leghorns owned by Wm. L. Gilbert home, Winsted, Conn., and Henry Rapp, Jr., of Farmingdale, N. Y., tied for second place with a production of 62 eggs each. Third honors for the week were divided between two pens of White Leghorns, one owned by Tom Barron, of England, and the other by George Lowry, of West Willington, Conn. Their lay was 61 eggs each. R. C. Cobb's Barred Rocks from Littleton, Mass., shared fourth place with John Z. LaBelle's Rhode Island Reds from Ballouville, Conn. The score was 60 eggs each.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties:

GIVES PATRIOTIC ADDRESS FOR FLAG DAY OBSERVANCE BY NORWICH ELKS

ARTHUR M. BROWN

State Attorney Arthur M. Brown, speaker for the flag day observance by Norwich lodge of Elks, made an eloquent presentation of the blessings of liberty which Americans enjoy and an appeal to preserve the principles for which the flag stands, when he spoke Friday evening before the audience gathered in front of the Elks' home on Main street.

Among the Elks and the representatives of many other patriotic organizations who made up the audience it was generally agreed that the address and the complete programme was on a scale that surpassed any previous observance of the day by Norwich lodge.

For the exercises a platform, which was decorated in the Elks's colors of purple and white, with American flags displayed, had been erected in front of the Elks' home and the audience was seated on the lawn. Mayor Lee Robbins and members of the common council had seats on the porch of the building, while Exalted Ruler Frank Donnelly and other officers of the lodge who participated in the ritual were seated on the platform where the altar was erected.

Selections by the Elks' band, directed by Brother John M. Swahn, and vocal numbers by a quartette consisting of Edward T. Connelly, Nicholas Spelman, Michael Farrell and Roland Webster, supplied the well rendered musical parts of the programme and a detail of 20 uniformed sailors from the submarine base at Groton assisted in the programme.

The history of the flag was impressively recited by James J. Casey, Jr., and as each development in design was described a sailor brought the flag forward on the platform, planted the standard and saluted as the band played an appropriate selection, this part of the programme as the audience rose to sing The Star Spangled Banner.

At the conclusion of Attorney Brown's address, the exercises were brought to a close with the lowering of the flag on the staff on the lawn by the sailors while a sailor bugler blew "taps."

Flag Day Address

In his address State Attorney Brown spoke as follows:

Let me say at the outset that I consider it a distinct honor and privilege to be asked by Norwich Lodge of Elks to address them and you upon this occasion. It is wise, seemly and fitting that this day should be celebrated in some special manner and the great order of Elks are to be congratulated upon the spirit of true Americanism which they show in fostering and making possible such exercises as these.

In this day and age of the world when there is so much of selfishness extant, when men and women are so engrossed in their own private affairs that they seem to have very little time for civic duties and obligations, it is well for us to occasionally pause in our rush for the almighty dollar and seriously consider some of the blessings which we enjoy by reason of living under the folds of Old Glory, and under a Constitution which grants us liberties and rights of inestimable value, but which we are too prone to forget.

What is there about a piece of silk or bunting that stirs men's hearts when they see it fluttering in the sky; why, all down through the ages have men followed their flag into the hell of battle, gladly laying down their lives in its defence? It is because that flag represents their nation and all the ideals and principles for which their nation stands. There is nothing so sad in all the world as the story of the man without a country; the man who could not look upon any flag anywhere and say, "That is the banner of my country."

We love the Stars and Stripes of American because that flag represents and stands for all of the great ideals and principles upon which this government was founded and by reason of adherence to which it has grown and prospered until today it has become the greatest and most powerful nation upon the face of the earth. What are some of these ideals of which I speak? The formal Declaration of Independence written by Thomas Jefferson and first signed by John Hancock marked a new era of political liberty in the world. It meant that henceforth America was to be the home of freedom and liberty. Hear again the essential part of that immortal Declaration which every school child is or should be able to quote from memory:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

The Declaration of Independence, you will note, first declares the doctrine of Equality. Equality means fraternity, brotherhood, fair dealing, exclusion of no one from public benefits because of race or poverty or lowly birth. It means the rejection of titles of nobility; it means the avoidance of distinction tending to put one man above another. It does not mean equality of wealth or equality of inherent ability. The Declaration referred to political equality, which means equal opportunity under the law, and equality in this sense is an essential of the American ideal of government. An Equality so that, as Lincoln expressed it, "Each of us may have through this free government which we have enjoyed an open field and a fair chance for our industry, enterprise and intelligence; that we may all have equal privileges in the race of life with all its desirable human aspirations."

What this may mean is best exemplified in the life of Lincoln himself, born in a log cabin, a poor flatboatman and rail splitter, without educational advantages, money or social position, who, by the sheer force of his character and inherent ability, rose to the highest office within the gift of the American people, and how well he filled it is a matter of history.

Another ideal is the inalienable right to life. In old world times a monarch owned his subject. "Off with his head" was warrant enough to put a king's enemy out of the way. The right to life has been invaded by others than kings. If the greed of profiteers and the ignorance of parents place undeveloped children in factories and mines the American idea of the right of all to life is gone. Against this greed stands this great national purpose to give to all the people a chance to live a rounded, intelligent, complete, American life.

A further important conception of the national ideal is Liberty. It has been from the first a watchword on our lips. "Give me liberty or give me death," said the eloquent Patrick Henry and all true Americans have been saying the same in their hearts ever since.

Liberty in this sense does not mean license. Washington led the fighting for it, but he had no doubt of its meaning when he said, "We must distinguish between licentiousness and liberty; we must recognize the difference between oppression and necessary authority. The Fathers of the Republic thought of liberty of the single man in connection with the benefit of all men. They always coupled liberty with another idea; the thought of Union. Liberty may seem to me to be my personal benefit. If that is all it means it is a cheap and selfish nation.

But as the Declaration told the world of our freedom from the rule of kings and nobles, the Constitution advertised our purpose to unite for a common, not a personal welfare. So are these principles blended, liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable. To assail our union, our government, our brotherhood, in the interest of personal liberty, license and unbounded freedom, is to break our national ideal all to pieces and to rush backward toward the barbarism that existed before man set aside his selfishness to form co-operative government, without which we should still be roaming in the woods and fighting daily for enough to eat.

The remaining vital phrase in the preamble to the Declaration is the one which states that a government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed. The real meaning of this phrase, as applied to our representative form of government, has been the subject of much debate but it is sufficient for us to know and understand that it voices the desire for a government of, by and for the people. It was to be a government from the bottom up and not from the top down. It was the first time in history when the theory was promulgated that all political power rested in the people. Prior to this time every government on the face of the earth recognized all political power as flowing from the state itself. The American principle is that all power ultimately rests in the people as a whole. Let us safe-guard this principle with all the power at our command.

These great ideals and principles of government as enunciated in the Declaration of Independence were afterwards written into the Constitution of the United States and thus became a part of the fundamental law of the land, guaranteeing to every American citizen, high or low, absolute freedom in thought and conduct, so long as he does nothing which interferes with the rights or liberties of a fellow citizen.

Can any one estimate the "blessings of liberty" that have been vouchsafed by the provisions imbedded in the Constitution, which protect the rights of private property, guarantee freedom of speech, freedom of the press and religious liberty, insure the right of trial by jury, abolish all forms of nobility or social caste, and give every citizen an equal chance in the race of life? Is it worth anything to be allowed to worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience?

There are those in this land of ours today who preach a different doctrine, who would rather set race against race and creed against creed. They are not friends of this Republic. Upon no other basis can we expect to advance as a nation than that of a broad toleration exercised by each toward the religious beliefs of the other.

The constitution follows the flag; the flag represents all those ideals of government and rights of the governed of which I have spoken. Let us love the flag and obey the constitution.

Since the adoption of the stars and stripes as our national emblem five wars have been fought under that flag in the interests of freedom, the war of the American revolution for freedom from tyranny of the mother country, Great Britain; the war of 1812, for the freedom of the seas, the Civil war between the states for the freedom of an enslaved race; the war of 1898 for the freedom of the oppressed people of a neighboring isle of the sea and the great World war for the freedom of humanity everywhere from autocratic and despotic rule. Would to God that this starry banner might now lead in the battle for freedom from all further war; that by some means, in some way, America might lead the nations of the earth into the forming of such a compact as would outlaw war for all time. It has been said that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." This is true but it is likewise true that from the beginning of time the shedding of blood has been the price of liberty. It has been worth the price and America has always been ready to pay the price. It would be fitting for a nation which has so cherished and defended its liberties to lead the world out of the maze of misunderstanding into the brightness of a clear understanding and permanent peace.

Only a few short years ago the greatest war in the history of the world was fought. We opposed autocracy with the full strength of our young manhood. That struggle lifted us to heights of spiritual vision such as never before had been experienced. Alas, I fear that vision has become dimmed. During the course of the struggle, a splendid Englishman, on the field of battle penned a poem which will live forever:

"In Flander's Fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders Fields.

Take up the quarrel with the foe
To you, from failing hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who died
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Fields."

And our own boys in khaki answered that call. They said:

"Sleep on ye brave! The shrieking shell
The quaking tract, the startling yell
The fury of the battle Hell
Shall wake you not; for all is well.
Sleep peacefully, for all is well.
Your flaming torch aloft we bear;
With burning heart on oath we swear
To keep the faith, to fight it through
To crush the foe, or sleep with you
In Flanders Fields."

And they kept the faith, they fought it through; they crushed the foe; and alas, many of them sleep in Flanders Fields. Deeply moved by their heroic sacrifice, we too, made a pledge and said:

"Fear not that you have died for naught;
The torch you threw to us we caught;
Ten million hands will hold it high
And Freedom's Light shall never die
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders Fields."

I wonder if it be true. Have we learned the lesson that they taught? Are we bearing aloft Liberty's torch; are we seeing to it in so far as lies within our power that those boys who lie in Flanders Fields did not die in vain?

It has been said "You can't fight for a flag until you know the color of it." What is the color of our flag? It is red, red with the blood of heroes shed in its defence, and to us symbolizes love, the greatest force in the universe; it is white, white as the Easter Lily, which symbolizes purity; it is blue, blue as the starry-decked canopy of heaven which forms a covering for us all and symbolizes truth. Love, purity and truth. Take away the white and the blue, and the red no longer symbolizes love but becomes the red of anger, hatred, and destruction. The founders of this nation placed these colors in combination and it is your duty and my duty to see to it that they remain in combination.

The committee in charge consisted of Jeremiah Fitzgerald, chairman; James Harrington, John Cunningham, Milo R. Waters, John McDougall, Rudolph Henschel, and Frank Donnelly.

INDIANS ADVISE COURT ON OVERSEER CHOICE

Before Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court here Friday, Attorney Charles L. Stewart of this city and Appleton Main of Preston presented their resignations as overseers respectively of the eastern tribe of Pequot Indians and the Ledyard tribe of Pequot Indians. Mr. Stewart has held his position for 20 years and Mr. Main for 24 years.

Chief Atwood Williams of Providence, chief of the two tribes, and Rev. Calvin Williams of the Ledyard tribe were in court to speak to the judge upon their preference in the appointment of a new overseer and both agreed in suggesting the name of George A. Wheeler of Stonington.

Rev. Calvin Williams made an unusual figure in the court room, with his face of pure Indian type, a skin so dark as to be almost black and his long glistening black hair, drawn down and tied in a real queue above the nape of his neck. He used a cane which was a peeled stick he had cut from the woods.

The present members of the Eastern Tribe of Pequot Indians are: Mrs. Irene Jackson Brown, James E. D. Williams, Grace Gardner, Mrs. Fanny Jackson, Mrs. Arline Estelle Berry, William H. Jackson, Mrs. Fanny Jackson, Grace M. Jackson, Edna A. Jackson, Arlene F. Jackson, Oliver F. Jackson, Rachel Jackson, Ernest M. Jackson, Harold C. Jackson, Mary E. Davis, Abigail E. Davis, Herman E. Simons, Elam Baker, Mary Simons, Russell Simons, Mrs. Phebe Jackson Spellman, Mrs. Gertrude M. Spellman Dailey, Reginald Spellman, Lucy Spellman, Mrs. Rachel Silver, Barbara A. Spellman, Paul L. Spellman, Mrs. Ruth G. S. Tallaperro, Texel Spellman, Atwood I. Williams, Frank L. Williams, Atwood I. Williams Jr. and Jennie M. Williams.

The current expenses of the year are the usual ones, with the single exception of expenditures incurred in behalf of Miss Lucy Spellman, a member of thetribe, who is a student in the National Trade school for girls at Washington, D. C.

The members of the tribe have had no unusual illnesses during the year, and nothing has been expended for hospital or medical attention.

During the year I made the following ruling: Franklin C. Williams of Stonington, admittedly a Pequot Indian, who had been duly enrolled as a member of the western branch of Pequot Indians, appealed to me for permission to erect a dwelling upon the reservation of the eastern branch at North Stonington. Williams' right to occupy lands of the eastern branch of Pequot Indians was challenged by the chief of both tribes, Atwood I. Williams of 388 Cranston street, Providence, R. I. The chief of the tribe is known as "Chief Silver Star." I fixed a time for hearing, at which Franklin C. Williams appeared in person and also by his counsel, Attorney Morris Lubchansky of New London. Chief Silver Star appeared in person. At the conclusion of the hearing I sought the advise of the Hon. Allyn L. Brown of the superior court, and thereafter ruled that Section 5167 of the general statutes, revision of 1918, makes no distinction whatever between several branches of the same tribe and that a recognized member of this tribe is not debarred from the occupational right of the reservation simply because either for convenience, or expediency, or other reasons, the tribe may have been divided into separate branches. My conclusion was that the petitioner, Franklin C. Williams, had the right with the approval of the overseer, to erect a dwelling on the lands belonging to the eastern branch of Pequot Indians.

With the completion of the present fiscal year, I have served continuously for the last 20 years as governor of the eastern branch of Pequot Indians. Owing to the increasingly heavy demands made upon time and the time required to attend to the various duties of overseer, I find it necessary to be relieved of this responsibility, therefore herewith tender my resignation as overseer, to take effect at the pleasure and convenience of the court.

FORECLOSURE ON COTTAGES AT RIDGEWOOD-BY-THE-SEA

Four foreclosure judgments, two for $2,432.20, and two for $1,877.20, on cottages at Ridgewood by the Sea, an Ocean Beach park development in the town of Waterford, were given in the superior court here Friday in favor of Dr. Angelo Sissa of Hartford against Ridgewood Construction Co., Clarence L. Brockett and others. The sale date is July 6.

In the case of five houses at Ridgewood by the Sea which had been sold at public auction for $17,150 in foreclosure proceedings brought by Henry Morans of New Britain against Ridgewood Construction company and others, Judge Allyn L. Brown refused to allow the bill for three per cent of Samuel Prince of New London as committee of sale. Mr. Prince was allowed $375 as his commission and $24 each was allowed for the three appraisers.

On the matter of accepting the committee's report of the sale Judge Brown reserved decision, postponed hearing on supplemental judgment and approved the deed.

Decision was reserved by the court on the motion to set aside a non-suit in the $10,000 action brought by Frederick Carlson, as administrator of Waterford against Wood.

In the local case of Catherine Chapman against Frank Chapman, a motion for allowance to prosecute was denied without prejudice while a motion for defaut and hearing in damages went off the list.

Judgement was given in favor of Nathan Harris of Hartford against the Resnick Construction Co. of Hartford and others. Judgment was for $510.32 and property located in the town of Griswold is held as security for the judgment. Sept. 2 was set by the court as the limitation for time in which the defendant company can pay the debt.

TAFTVILLE A. C. OPENS SEASON TODAY AGAINST SOUTH MANCHESTER CLUB

All roads lead to the Providence street grounds, Taftville, this afternoon where the newly organized Taftville A. C. baseball team opens its season with the fast South Manchester team. South Manchester is bringing one of the fastest collection of ball players that has appeared here in a long time. Best known among them is Sammy Massey, the stocky second baseman. Massey has appeared in this section quite a few times both with and against the local team.

The Manchester team is coming to Taftville with a good record and would like nothing better than to defeat the locals in their opener. They will be represented by the following players: Hewitt 3b; Sammy Massey 2b; Mantelli, one of the best outfielders in the state, lf; McLaughlin or Cheney 1b; Plitt rf; Carlson or Boginni, catch; Boyce, former college star, or Varrich, pitch.

Against this aggregation Manager Jarvis has secured one of the best lineups to ever represent Taftville having players who have starred in their resepctive colleges besides having the pick of the village. Eccleston, one of the best receivers in the state, will do the catching while Goldblatt of William and Mary will be ready should anything happen. For the hurling post Manager Jarvis has gone to great expense in securing Meska of the Coast Guard. Meska has just returned from the Pacific coast where he was pronounced one of the best twirlers in the service. He formerly pitched for the championship Sub Base team a few years back. Lamory the leading hitter of the A. A. team last season will play first, Steffy Cimikoski of William and Mary freshman team will cavort around second base with Pheno Tombart, star of the Conn. Aggies the past season at short, making a fast combination. Hal Cummings will be seen at third base, Dee Gaudette, former local boy, will patrol left field, Lloyd Jarvis of Holy Cross freshman team and former Academy star will play center with Buck Lacroix leading hitter of the Wildcats in right field. The substitutes will be the Finn brothers. This completes a snappy team and before many weeks will be in demand all over the state. The management is now booking games with fast clubs in New England.

MOOSUP AND SOCONY CLASH ON SUNDAY

The attraction at the Carpet grounds, Moosup, tomorrow (Sunday) will be, or should be a real baseball game between Moosup, and "Socony," of New London. "Socony" has a real ball club and the fans take no chances of seeing a runaway score when this team plays. Mgr. Foote will bring his best club as he wants to take this game because he lost the first game, 5 to 3. Chappell or Taylor will toe the slab, and neither one needs an introduction, they are both good.

Moosup will have in the lineup five players from the Blackstone Valley league, the fastest semi-pro league in New England. "Lefty" Dugas, Fernald and "Suds" Forsythe play with Millbury and Alpin and Chapman with Whitinsville. Fernald, who will play left field for Moosup, is leading that league in hitting with .422. "Red" Davidson, formerly of Holy Cross, or "Lefty" Dugas will pitch for Moosup. Quirk, of Universal, will also be around as he has been added to the pitching staff.

The lineups:

MCCARTHY AND HAVILAND TO MEET IN FINALS

MONTCLAIR, N. J., June 14—(AP)—The Metropolitan amteur golf championship lies between Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of Georgetown, intercollegiate title-holder, and Paul Haviland, of Brooklawn, who captained Yale's golf team a few years ago. They will meet in the 36-hole final round at the Montclair Golf club tomorrow.

McCarthy, a favorite for the title won last year by Eugene Homans of Englewood, eliminated the long hitting Harvard star, Phillips Finlay, in the semi-finals today, 2 and 1, while Haviland was engaged in defeating Charles F. Sheldon, of Stwanoy, who was graduated from Lehigh this month, one up after 20 holes of thrilling play. The cards:

Finlay won two up from Ellis Knowles, of Apawamis, the intercollegiate champion in 1907. McCarthy disposed of W. H. Taft, Montclair, 3 and 2, and Haviland defeated J. Wolcott Brown, of Spring Lake, 3 and 2.

ABRAMOWITZ LEADS BUNION PACK INTO SAN JUAN

SAN JUAN, Capistrano, Calif., June 14—(AP)—Harry Abramowitz of New York, won the seventy-sixth lap of the trans-continental bunion derby today, galloping into this historic Spanish mission town far in the lead of the remainder of the pack. The day's lap, close to seventy miles in length, was from San Diego.

Abramowitz, ninth in the elapsed time for the coast to coast foot race, was timed in ten hours 18 minutes and 20 seconds, for the day's sprint. It was the first lap he had won during the entire trans-continental jaunt.

Why do some people go looking for trouble when plenty comes your way without invitation?

Some people has got some mighty queer make-ups and the only way they get any joy, if you can call it that, is to create trouble for somebody else.

But let somebody start some trouble for them and they are the first ones to show yellow and put on the cry-baby act. Ain't it the truth.

Remember the big bully in the school yard who used to threaten to hang a shanty on your eye? Remember how one day you got good and mad and took a poke at him? Remember how he cried and told the teacher?

Well that's the make-up of some people right here in the town. Oh this town ain't any worse than any others and don't have any more trouble-makers but just as many.

Seems like some people just delight in poking their noses into other peoples' business and just try to find out something to create a little trouble for them.

And it's a ten to one bet that if you could bring yourself to be as mean as they you'd find plenty of old skeletons hanging up in their closets—and how. And if you should spread the glad tidings they'd be hopping mad.

I remember several years ago of hearing one pious and sanctimonius busybody in town preaching a temperance lecture. And citing her family as shining examples of strict temperance.

It was only a short time after that when I chanced to find among some old books in a certain second hand store a ledger and account book of an old time grocer.

Thumbing over the accounts in the book, many of them apparently never had been paid. I came to a familiar name. I paused and remembered that it was the family name of the person I'd heard giving the lecture on temperance.

Going down the list of articles purchased I found the entry 'One gal. Jamaica rum', the date of the purchase was there. Two days later there was another entry "Two qts. bourbon whiskey". A week later another gallon of rum and so on nearly every other entry being for liquor.

I suppose that liquor was for a lame back and to be applied externally. Yet, I'll bet it was—not. Yet that person who gave the lecture swore up and down that her people had been temperate for generations. Did I tell that person about it? I did not. And what's more nobody'll ever know but I had a quiet laugh all to myself.

As the feller says "Don't look for the grain of dust in the other feller's eye until you have removed the boulder from your own".

DONOHUE NOT TO ALLOW SUBSTITUTE BOXING BOUTS

BRIDGEPORT, June 14—(AP)—The five day clause, one of the most important to keep boxers and promoters in line and prevent trouble, will be strictly enforced from now on, it was announced here today by Tom Donohue, Connecticut's lone boxing commissioner.

Here to iron out various difficulties arising from the fact that there are two fight clubs in the city, Commissioner Donohue also stated that no substitutes will be allowed hereafter and that all promoters, big or small, will be brought right to the line whenever they stray from the straight and narrow.

"Substitute bouts will not be tolerated," Commissioner Donohue stated in reference to the present evil undermining the sport in all cities of the state. "We hear that the list of substitutes all over the state are growing and must put a stop to it before it gets out of our hands. Generally a substitute is never in the best of shape for a fight because of short notice and and it endangers his chances for victory, no matter how good a fighter he is when given time to prepare. It is an evil which I hope will be cleared up as soon as possible and it is up to promoters and managers to help me in the matter."

Speaking of the recent ruling of the attorney-general of the state that he has no jurisdiction over the setting of dates for boxing promoters, Commissioner Donohue was of the opinion that he may still receive a favorable ruling. He pointed out that the attorney general of New York state who was called upon for a like ruling announced that the New York commission was right in regulating the dates and if given more thought here, a like ruling would result.

His first match is scheduled with either Tom Heeney or Jimmy Maloney at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, July 17. Opponents will be chosen later for bouts Aug. 14 and Sept. 13 if Campolo survives the first test.

PITTSBURGH, June 14—(AP)—The New York Nationals today traded Jimmy Welsh, outfielder, to the Boston Braves for Eddie Farrell, infielder. John McGraw of the Giants announced here tonight. Farrell formerly played for New York and Welsh for Boston.

J. B. MARTIN VS. FIRESTONE A. C. SUNDAY

The Velvetmen face one of the strongest teams to be played this season, Sunday afternoon, at the J. B. Martin grounds, Taftville, when the Firestone A. C., of New Bedford clashes with the locals. J. B. Martin has swept through their opposition very well this season and the week-end attraction will be one of the severest tests of the season. The Firestone club is rated as one of the top notch teams of New England and has the reputation of having included on its roster some of the fastest players outside of organized ball. This club, in the past season, finished in second place in one of the fastest circuits operating in Massachusetts and at the present time in the league are holding first position.

Realizing that the Velvetmen are up against a stiff proposition, Manager Erlbeck has put the boys through hard workouts during the week and when both clubs clash it should be one of the best battles of the season.

Manager Kenyon, of the Bay State combination, has quite a collection of stars having secured the services of Blackburn for mound duty who he will send against the Velvetmen with Bourque on the receiving end. This battery has been working together for the past three seasons playing in the fast Blackstone Valley league and also having had a tryout this past season in the Eastern league. Paquin will cover first, with Laurente covering second. Heywood, noted for his fast fielding and heavy hitting, will take care of the shortfield.

Manager Erlbeck, of the Velvetmen, will send Fisher against the aggregation with either Eccleston or Murphy for the backstop duty. E. Murphy will cover first, Normandin second, Liberty will be seen at third with Krauss taking care of short. Morin and Simcox will officiate. Game called 3:15 p. m. (D. S. T.) BENTON PITCHES GIANTS TO WIN OVER PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, June 14—(AP)—Larry Benton stopped the Pirates with seven hits here today, and the Giants won by 7 to 2, their first victory in the three games so far played in the series. Jess Petty, making his second start in as many days, was knocked out in less than an inning when the Giants scored three runs. Kremer and Fussell finished.

Pittsburgh got two runs in the seventh on triples by Traynor and Hemsley and a single. Comorosky had nine put outs in left field.

GEHRIG GETS TWO HOMERS AS YANKS TROUNCE TIGERS

NEW YORK, June 14—(AP)—The Yankees took an easy victory from Detroit here today by a score of 15 to 4. Waite Hoyt won his eighth victory as Lou Gehrig inserted two home runs into the records, running his total to seventeen and taking the major league lead. George Uhle was Gehrig's victim in successive innings, the first and the second. The Yankees totaled seventeen safe hits off Uhle, George Smith and John Prudhomme.

The defeat was three in a row for Uhle who previously had won nine straight. He was batted out in the third with none out.

SENATORS TURN SEVEN HITS INTO 4 TO 1 VICTORY

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP)—The Washington Senators utilized seven hits effectively today and behind the steady pitching of Irving Hadley defeated Chicago in the second game of the series, 4 to 1.

Hadley allowed but 6 scattered hits and got a couple of safe bingles himself.

WESLEYAN PLAYS LOOSE BALL AGAINST AMHERST

MIDDLETOWN, June 14—(AP)—Amherst took advantage of nine errors to easily defeat Wesleyan in the final "little three" championship game, 14 to 5, here today. Although outhit, 10 to 7, Amherst scored six runs in the first inning, four of which were made on a home run by Henly which went through the left fielder's legs. Dean, the next batter, followed with another circuit clout. Nye went the distance for Wesleyan and contributed to his own downfall by his wildness. Score by innings:

Mrs. Hucknall, State Champion

NEW HAVEN, June 14—(AP)—Mrs. Thomas Hucknall, of Woodway, Stamford, today brought the honor of winning the championship of the women's golf association tournament to Connecticut, by her defeat of Mrs. Roderick Pirnie, 1928 champion, of Long Meadow, Springfield, in the final match played at the New Haven Country club 4 and 2.

DAWSON THROWS AWAY HIS CHANCE FOR TITLE

SANDWICH, Eng., June 14—(AP)—Cyril Tolley, one of the great personalities of British golf, and John Nelson Smith, a Scottish carpenter from Fife, will fight out the final of the British amateur golf championship over 36 holes tomorrow.

Until late this afternoon the prince of Wales and every other golf fan in Britain would have wagered a king's ransom that the final would be an Anglo-American affair between Tolley and young John Dawson. The 28 year old Chicago player in three days of championship play had made a great name for himself in the British golfing world by winning his way to the semi-finals.

Dawson with a three hole lead over Smith and only three holes to play seemed as certain to be a finalist as anything ever can be certain in golf, and then to the amazement of the British gallery and dismay of his small but loyal band of American supporters, he literally threw away his lead, lost three holes in succession to have the match squared at the 18th. He then lost the 19th and the match and his championship chances were gone.

Tolley barely got by Rex Hartley in the other semi-final match, winning the 18th hole to take the match, one up, but there was no such debacle as Dawson experienced.

After piling up a big lead against his Scottish opponent, the American proceeded to lose everything but his smile, his twinkling good-natured eyes and his bag of clubs. Two of those four amazing holes, Dawson threw away and two his dour opponent won.

Nothing disturbed Smith today. He was unhurried in the rain and wind. The rush of the crowd left him unmoved and he kept his composure perfectly when Dawson became dormie three after winning the 15th hole with a birdie.

Playing along in his workmanlike manner Smith took the 16th and 17th holes when Dawson handed them to him. He then hammered away with fine skill to win the 18th and 19th.

Until his victory over Dawson, Smith was unknown in England as was Dawson a week ago. Smith never had played golf away from Scotland before this week. He came through his rounds without spectacular victories and without attracting galleries. His game today was fine and steady.

Before he collapsed against Smith, Dawson disposed of A. J. Evans, the only Englishman he met all week, six up and five to play. With a string of five difficult holes played one over threes, Dawson made the most spectacular display of his English visit.

ROBINS NOSE OUT REDS IN 11-INNING BATTLE

CINCINNATI, June 14—(AP)—Brooklyn made it two straight over Cincinnati here today winning in the eleventh inning by a score of 5 to 4. Rhiel walked in the 11th and scored on Frederick's double through Shaner.

The Robins led by 4 to 1 as the Reds came to bat in the ninth but miscues by Moore, Hendricks and Rhiel enabled the home forces to tie the score, this despite a double play which checked the rally. Hendrick hit into the right field bleachers in the third for a homer with one on base. Score:

LABORATORY TO STUDY SUNLIGHT IN KENTUCKY

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(AP)—A laboratory to study the effects of the sun's ultra-violet rays on animals and plants will be established at the University of Kentucky.

Dean F. Paul Anderson of the college of engineering, director of the work, says:

"The sun is the source of all our energies. It comes to human beings in a secondary way through foods, but it is proposed in this research to study the direct effect upon plants and animals.

"Ordinary glass cuts out virtually all the ultra-violet rays. In recent years a number of glass mediums have been made that admit 20 to 40 per cent of these rays. In this laboratory the development of new mediums is contemplated."

There will be rooms with large variations of temperature and humidity in which plant and animal life will be under observation. The laboratory is established by an endowment from Percy H. Johnston, president of the Chemical National bank, New York.

TO STUDY RELIGION'S RELATION TO CONDUCT

EVANSTON, Ill.—(AP)—An effort to determine the place of religion in shaping human conduct and character will be made at a conference at Northwestern university in November.

Such questions as how religion can be interpreted to make it a great influence in shaping conduct and whether a program for character education which omits religion is socially sound and defensible, will be discussed from an unbiased point of view.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

YOUNG TWIGS ARE SOONER BENT THAN OLD TREES

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Before the Flivver Came

Before the Flivver came in style,
We rode in cabs and chaises;
On bicycles and trolley cars,
That we thought ran like blazes;
And we rode in wagons over land,
And row boats on the river.
But that was in the days
Before we had the Flivver.

Before the Flivver came in style,
We had no carburetor;
No stripping gears to give us woe;
No balky commutator;
And if they'd say a nut was loose,
T'would make one all a-shiver.
That meant a lunatic at large,
Before we had the Flivver.

Before the Flivver came in style,
A "blowout" meant a party;
To say "You'd burst an inner tube,"
Would cause a laugh quite hearty.
To say "Your lights were out of fix,"
You meant your lights and liver,
But that—was in the days before
We had the frisky Flivver.

Before the Flivver came in style,
We traveled slow and steady;
No frozen motor to crank up
Old "Pet" was always ready.
We wanted speed, we used the whip,
We had no gas to give her.
But—that was in the days before
We had the speedy Flivver

I Would Be True

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friend of all—the foe, the friendless;
I would be giving, and forget the gift,
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up, and laugh, and love and lift.

INTERESTED IN FLOWERS

Dear Social Corner:

A woodpecker pecks out a great many specks
Of sawdust when building a hut.
He works like a nigger to make the hole bigger.
He's sore if his cutter wor'n't cut.
He won't bother with plans of cheap artisans
But there's one thing can rightly be said:
The whole excavation has this explanation,
He builds it by using his head.

Tafts: Thought I'd see you at some of the meetings and tell you how my bird died.

Elm Tree Bobbie: I can send you geranium cloth of gold if you will write me. I had over 30 kinds of begonias and am wanting more! Years ago I had one like I have never seen since. The leaves were very large, not unlike castor bean leaves, and the stalks were all from a root stock growing like an umbrella plant and the stalk very hairy and all a brassy color.

I always bring slips and cuttings to our club meetings for any who care to have them, thus giving pleasure for the many favors I receive. Just now two white angora kittens furnish us much entertainment. Who knows where there is a Judas tree or Cercis, Also a tulip tree? BEE-TONE

SUGGESTS MEMORIAL SERVICE

Dear Social Corner Folks: I am starting early in the weekto add my bit to the Corner page. Since writing last I have had a real letter of my own from "Dad" Shaw and prize it highly. Wish you could all see it for the penmanship, and every part of it is expressive of a wonderful personality. I wish we might all grow old like that. I have a neighbor who doesn't want to live to be old because old age is often so sad and repulsive. But I do want to live for that rare and ripe old age that is a blessing to others because it has been mellowed by experience.

I would like to have our next gathering a memorial service. We should be glad to live over together our happy associations with those who have passed into the other life before us. As we grow older we naturally think more and more of them and can understand and appreciate them often more than in the old thoughtless days. (I have reached the very advanced age of 40 but life has been full of changes the last twenty years).

"I cannot make it seem a day to dread
When from this earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead
And meet the loved ones so long dreamed about.

I love this earth, yet shall I love to go
And meet the ones who wait for me, I know,
And so for me death has no sting
And so the grave has lost its victory.

It is but passing with abated breath
And set, white face, a little strip of sea
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before."

Could we not meet at Wildwood park, because it is easier to reach for many than some of our homes? I am sorry we are entirely off the bus line service now. We have always had fine, big meetings at the park. Shan't we get in a meeting this month? Here's hoping we do. Yours ever,
THIRTY-TWO.

WORTHWHILE RECIPES

Dear Sisters: These recipes will be found good and worth saving

Ham Muffins: Cream four tablespoons, level measure, of shortening, add one cup of chopped cooked ham, one well-beaten egg and one cup of sweet milk alternately with one cup each of Graham and white flour, mixed and sifted with three teaspoons of baking powder. Beat well and put into hot greased gem-pans. Bake in a hot oven about thirty minutes. These muffins are hearty, and I often serve them with escalloped potatoes or an egg salad. I use a little less shortening, as we like them better.

Squash Muffins: Mix and beat together thoroughly two-thirds cup of cooked and sifted squash, one fourth cup of brown sugar, one tablespoon of melted shortening, one cup of sour milk, one-half teaspoon of soda, a scant teaspoon of salt, a quarter teaspoon of cinnamon and one cup of bread-flour. When thoroughly beaten add another cup of flour, mixed and sifted with three teaspoons of baking powder. Stir quickly and lightly and bake in hot, buttered gem-pans in a hot oven 20 to 30 minutes. If you use sweet milk omit the soda and add another teaspoon of baking powder. I generally use a small quantity of leftover squash in this way.

Salad Dressing: Cook in a double boiler one cup of condensed milk, two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoons of salt and a teaspoon of mustard, mixing well and stirring constantly until thickened; then stir in one cup of vinegar a little at a time, and cool. This is very easy to make and good. If the vinegar is very strong I use a little less, filling the cup with water, and I sometimes add a little more mustard; but most people to whom I have given this rule use it as it is and like it.

MAJESTIC

TAKEN FROM A MAGAZINE

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have a magazine with letters in it. I am going to copy a letter from the state of Washington. This is what she says:

I wonder how you would like to hear from a coal miner's wife on the west. I live not far from a big coal mine—one of the best. My husband is a miner and has mined nearly every kind of ore there is, gold, copper and I don't know how many other kinds. He works two miles from the stope under the ground. There are 25,000 men employed at this mine and they take 1,400 tons per day, that is when the mines are all right and working good. Of course, the mules get injured and may have to be taken out and killed, but most of them stay in the mine until they are too old to work. This is a very safe mine; safer than most. They are very strict about gas, timbering and every bit of their equipment, but there are of course some accidents. The men have a large wash house and hot and cold shower baths, so they do not have to come home black. The grounds around the mine are very pretty. The coal which is mined is of a very good grade, and she says I have a wonderful husband and three lovely children and daddy is so thoughtful.

This seems so much different than letters we have been used to reading I thought it worth copying.

We shall miss Peggy Alder's, and Kentucky Wonder's letters and others.

Not till the loom is silent
And the shuttles cease to fly
Shall God unroll the canvas
And explain the reason why.
The dark threads are as needful in the weavers' skilful hand
As the threads of gold and silver in the pattern He has planned.

CLUB NO. 6 MEETS AT ROAD CHURCH, STONINGTON

Dear Social Corner Members: The weeks roll by and it is again time to announce the next meeting of Club 6, which will be held next Tuesday at the church parlors of the Road church in Stonington. To get there, for those who don't know the way, take the Hinckley hill road from Westerly. It is about 30 minutes' ride. To those coming from New London way, you would turn off at Stonington. Just inquire.

Soma: You won't need any directions. It seems to be a nice place for a meeting at this time of the year.

Nereid is to be hostess and preferred to have it there. We hope to see a large crowd as it will be the last indoor meeting until October. It ought not to be very expensive for the Westerly members if they club together and get jitneys. As usual, bring something good to eat and your dishes.

Olga: Hope someone is home to drive so you can come. Just come to Westerly and inquire.

Lonesome Pine: Thought of you Saturday and wondered where you were eating. I was home—first Saturday in four weeks. This morning I very much enjoyed the Children's day exercises at our church. It certainly showed some are interested in Sunday school work. One pleasing thing to see was whole families of both parents and children taking part in the exercises and other parents sitting with their children who were too small to take part but listening to the older children of the family. It will always be a pleasant memory for those children in years to come, no matter where life takes them, or how much they go astray, and it may mean so much toward helping them to be good men and women.

Connie: Some good visit with the B's, wasn't it? and some 'eats' too! The knots were O. K. Just fitted.

Crimson Rambler: You will hear from me soon.

Hope to see everybody Tuesday, the 18th.

Commutor: Was glad to read your letter. E. L. M.

LEAVING CITY FOR COUNTRY

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I want to tell you a little more about some of my outings here in the city, for I will soon be leaving my new acquaintances for a few months and take up country life again. I don't regret I came to the city and I shall take home with me many pleasant memories that never will be forgotten.

I was deeply interested in the interior of a church I attended Sunday morning, it was so much like my church at home. As you go in, you notice the little doors at each pew, with its number and arm rest for your left arm. The window panes are small, with white blinds. Four large pillars are in front of the pulpit. I was told it was the oldest church in the city. I didn't hear the year it was built.

Worcester is a very pretty city, laid out with beautiful parks, with trees, shrubbery of all kinds, flowers of every kind, especially just now. The rhododendrons, which are in full bloom, are a great variety of color. The newest is a beautiful shade of yellow. The parks that I have visited are Elm, Lincoln Institute, Green Hill park and a great many more I cannot mention. Lincoln park has a great many kinds of amusements; among them are a dance hall, merry-go-round, and the whip. Flying machines go out over the lake. This gives one a thrill. A large swimming pool is another attraction for the young. The structure that these flying machines are on is brilliantly lighted by night and makes a beautiful display which can be seen for miles. It is called the White City.

A party of us rode up to the top of Wachusett mountain a few weeks ago. This is in Princeton, Mass. The Summit house on top of this mountain is 2,018 feet above sea level. The hotel is three stories high, with a lookout above. Here tourists can buy souvenirs. It has camping accommodations for campers. I saw a tennis court near by. A cement road winds up and up till you get to the top. Here one can look and take in the sights of nature. With a field glass you can see Mount Tom, also the Green mountains. I would like to tell you much more about this beautiful city, but time and space won't permit.

Necia and Ann Tenna have beat me to it by arriving home before me. I shall be glad to meet my old neighbors and friends who I've known for years, but I shall miss my friends' smiling faces who have passed on during my absence.

Prairie Chicken: I have often pictured you going about your home doing this and that, and that, and I was pleased to read your letter in Saturday's Bulletin. I will enjoy walking with you when you go to feed your peepers, also a buggy ride with you now and then to the village.

With best wishes to all.

BUSY POTTING PLANTS

Dear Editor and Corner Writers: As I was reading the Corner letters I thought it was about time I did my bit. Am real busy with the garden and potting plants for winter. Perhaps you think it is early to get them started so soon, but the way I do is this: If I have any plants like begonias, ferns or cactus or lilies of any kind that bloom in the winter, I always change the soil in the spring. They have all summer to take new root and get started fresh for winter. But when they are changed in the fall they don't get a start till mid-winter, and you lose all the beautiful foliage and flowers, as it takes them so long to get going again. It saves so much time in the fall when there is canning and harvesting to do. I keep them in a cool place with plenty of light, and always water them from the saucer they set in, as I seldom lose any when watered that way. I never have the little flies that bother plants so much, as I think the damp soil draws them when watered from the top.

White Chrysanthemum: No, I did not get the band of gold geranium. Perhaps no one has it, but would be delighted if I could get one. Shall see you soon. Was visiting Crimson Rambler yesterday. I also went to her home one Sunday with hubby. With best wishes to all.

BENEFITS FROM HOBBIES

Dear Social Corner Editor: We have been reading in our Corner so many interesting letters about hobbies. Hobbies contribute such a big, big share in making the world a joyful place, because they furnish us an outlet for our tastes, a means of self expression, interests for our leisure hours and help perhaps far more than we realize to give us calm and contented minds, making us pleasanter and more agreeable to live with. I cannot picture a person having a number of hobbies as feeling blue and discontented for very long.

"There is no duty we so much underestimate," says Stevenson, "as the duty of being happy. By being happy we sow anonymous benefits upon the world which remain unknown even to ourselves. A happy man or women is a better thing to find than a five-pound note. He or she is a radiating focus of good will."

Certainly hobbies are one of the means that help keep us happy. When our mind and whole being is busy doing something we like, there isn't room for indulgence in self pity and repinings.

I remember reading an article by Commander Richard Byrd in which he spoke of the type of men fitted for polar expeditions. He said one of the best men on his North Pole trip occupied his leisure time in carving little ivory figures. This hobby kept him from getting touchy and irritable ... a situation where it was so easy for everyone to get on everyone else's nerves.

People who live in a whirl of social activities and pleasures often wonder how others with more outward sources of enjoyment can appear so contented with their lot. Often times the secret is hobbies.

Personally we like a variety—some that will take us outdoors, others that will furnish us with recreation for stormy days, for convalescence, for moments that would otherwise be dull and profitless.

Many sisters write about raising flowers as a favorite hobby. And how much real pleasure they furnish others. What flower lover isn't on the watch for the new and beautiful as he goes on rides, visits parks and admires the gardens of his friends.

This spring, while on a ride, I was especially impressed with a beautiful pink dogwood in bloom on somebody's green lawn. Now I, too, must have a dogwood. And so it goes—there's nothing of envy, a flower lover is as pleased as a child when he can exchange slips and cuttings for new varieties. A cousin gave us a bridal daisy slip last fall. It had been years since we had had this old fashioned favorite in our garden, and how carefully we cherished the frail little thing all winter and spring until it should be sturdy enough to set outdoors.

Let's hear about some of the unusual hobbies. Perhaps the oddest of which we have read is that of the man who collects everything he finds pertaining to "rains" of frogs, toads, etc.

It seems to me amateur photography must be fascinating. Do any of our members indulge in this pastime?

Drawing, etching, painting, have a strong appeal, though my talents in this direction are decidedly nil.

Antique collecting—some seem to think these collectors the most indefatigable hobbyists of all. But there again I'm in the dark.

Anyway, here's to our hobbies; long life to them!

Ann Tenna: We enjoy your letters. You sometimes speak of birds. A few days ago while at work in a belated flower garden we paused for about ten minutes to count the number of songs we could hear. In that short interval we noted the calls or songs of a wren, oriole, catbird, song sparrow, robin, brown thrasher, purple finch, scarlet tanager, vireo, chebec and chippy. Chippy, incidentally, is busy gathering food for some little "chips" in their nest in a honeysuckle vine beside the window.

Eveline Burr: Haven't seen any of your interesting letters for a long time. Let's hear from you.

A Weather Plea

Some like the heat and some the cold, and some like rain and wind together! The young like snow not so the old, yet all must bear each type of weather. To Him who hids the winds in check, then us make this simple plea: May storms of passion never wreck the stalwart soul's serenity.

May He unleash the winds of Truth across the fields of Thought to blow. Intolerance must die, forsoth, wherever Truth is free to go. May He who makes the rain to fall, commands the stars, the moon and tide, send floods of gratitude to all, to open up the heart's gate, wide.

And if one season we must weep, then send us tears that heal like rain, and fall upon a seed asleep which blossoms forth as joy again. We will not ask for perfect weather—a gust of laughter for a start, then face the storm and calm together, with merry sunshine in the heart.

LOOKING FOR INFORMATION

Dear Corner Sisters: I haven't written a letter to the Corner page since joining last December, but now that I am going to entertain Club No. 6 on Tuesday, June 18, I want to extend a cordial invitation to all the sisters and their friends.

The meeting will be held in the Road church parlors, the meeting place of Stonington grange, on the old Pequot Trail, as Bears mentioned in her recent letter.

I wish especially that the mothers with small children would come and bring them. We have plenty of room for them to play, both inside and out, and they will enjoy the day the same as the rest of us.

I hope the weatherman is better to us than he has been the past two meetings, so more of the sisters will be able to attend the meeting.

I wonder if any mothers with little tots are bothered with them falling out of the screen doors or running to unhook doors for the rest of the family too often. I bore a small hole an inch above the hook, tie a string eight inches long on to the hook, pass the other end through the hole and tie a spool on it. Put a hook on the outside of the door, opposite inside one, and run a string from this inside and place a spool on this, too. The door can be opened by adults from either inside or out by pulling the spool and baby can't operate it if placed high enough.

Can some sister tell me what to do for the tiny flies that kill my plants and ferns? When I repot them the dirt is full of tiny magot-like worms which I presume hatch into the flies. I can't use a spray in the front rooms and if I move plants the flies disappear until I return them. The flies seem to suck the juice from stems and not eat the leaves.

I think I have written enough for my first leter, so will close, hoping to see a large attendance Tuesday.

NEREID (Club 6).

DECORATE GRAVES

Dear Eitor: Someone suggested that Club 4 decorate the resting places of our members who have passed to the unseen. Perhaps other Social Corner clubs would like to do so, too. I think it would be a very loving thing to do, although I am sure those who have passed on would much rather have us give the lovely roses and flowers to some living person in their memory. Could we not give the flowers to some hospital or to some people who are shut in, or take them to church instead of the cemetery? If flowers are taken to the cemetery I suggest at least one plant be taken, so it can grow and remain all summer.

I have been waiting for others to write their opinion on the suggestion of Nonesopretty. Hope I am not too late with this letter.

What makes life worth living?
Why, it's just giving and forgiving,
Giving tiny bits of kindness
That will leave a joy behind us,
And forgiving bitter trifles
That the right word often stifles
For the little things are bigger
Than we often stop to figure.
What makes life worth the living?
Why, it's giving and forgiving.

I happened to read these lines today, so pass them on to the Corner:

If you meet a fallen "feller" help him up:
If he's tired, sore and hungry, let him sup:
Even if he's good for nothing,
And to you is only bluffing;"
You have something; he has nothing,
Help him up.

HER ONLY FISHING TRIP

Dear Editor and All the Friends: Hello, this fine morning. It is an ideal day. Hope we don't have any thunder showers.

Last Rose of Summer: Well, here goes for that fishing trip. As the page was not full I thought it a good time to give it. It was the spring after I was 6 just began going to school. Lem thought he wanted to go fishing. He was afraid to go alone, so he wanted me to go, and I did not care much about it, but he coaxed and teased me. He said he would get me a big red stick of candy. Candy was a big treat to country children then, but no go! Then he said he would get me, he was going to say, a jewsharp, but he knew better than that, so he said a harmonica.

Well, that had a little more weight, but not enough; so he stood first on one foot, then the other. Oh, I saw down in Ann Herrick's store a nice big doll all dressed in blue. That put the finish to it, so I asked mother if I could go. I thought of that nice new dolly. My girl friends had one. But mother said no, it is too far for a little girl like you. So I told him. Goodness, a big girl like you! It is only two miles and a half to Edwards' pond. He had everything all right, he said. You take your bonnet. But will you get me the dolly and the other things, honest and true? I will. We will go through the lane by the barn, by the pasture and down through Granny's west field and no one will see us. So with the thoughts of all the nice things I was going to have, I went. Did not stop to think what else I would get, so I sang, hopped and danced along.

We got to the pond at dusk. I watched him catch a few fine pout, then I got tired and lay down on the bridge and went to sleep. When he got through fishing he gave me an awful kick in the back. "Hey, get up! I am going home!" It startled me so I jumped up and if he had not caught me I would have gone into the pond. "You gash darn fool, don't you know any better than that?" He took my hand for a little way, then let go. "Now you walk along here." Oh, wasn't I tired, cold and sleepy. I went a little way, then I began to cry. "Now you shut up that howling. You walked down here all right, now you just walk along." But I cried just the same.

He got a nice birch, it seemed with a thousand prongs, and didn't he put it on my poor bare legs. "Now you walk!" Well, I began to lag, then came the birch. When we got near Uncle Harry Sayles' place he gave me a push, sent me ahead of him, and he gave me some extra ones. I jumped and struck my big toe on a rock and lifted the whole top, but I could not stop to nurse the poor bleeding toe. Every other step came the birch. We got into the thick woods and he said: "You shut up that howling or that catamount Uncle Job told you was here will come and carry you off pig-back." It did not scare me and I did not stop. When we got near Granny's he put it on awful. I jumped, struck my other toe, took the whole top off and struck my heel on a rock. Oh. I can feel it now. But I could not stop. We struck in the lane. It was awful rocky. I would fall every other step; down came the birch all the faster.

We reached the barn at last. He said "Shut that howling. If you wake up mother you will get a gol darn good licking, and I hope you do. You sneakedaway from her and went fishing. Would I be glad to see you get a good sound licking, seeing I had not had any for two miles. We got in at last. Daddy was sound asleep, but mother, I guess not!

Well, I got ready for bed. I could not go in with my bleeding toes, so I wrapped some pieces of cloth around them. I did not get to sleep until morning. Then I was so worn out I slept sound. Daddy got up and cleaned the fish and mother built the fire. Then she went to the kindling basket, got a piece of nice soft shingle, and down went the clothes, then the shingle piano began to play and soon I began to sing an accompaniment to it. Mr. Lem said I would get it and he would at me. He wouldn't get any. I would, for I sneaked fishing, but he got his all right, just the same. Oh, I was so tired, sore and lame I did not want to go to school, but mother said "You go!" We got down to Granny's. The boys had gone. Granny tok me in and fixed my feet and when we got into the woods he got another birch and I got it all the way until we got to Mr. Barber's, then he did not dare. But when we got near the schoolhouse I got enough to make up. That night I got still more. He got me in the woods. He trimmed me all the way, but before we got out of the woods he more than gave me a trimming. My poor little legs and back were bleeding now. "You sneak off fishing and get me a licking, will you?" "But you promised me the dolly." "I can't get you anything, so see." "Oh, my, all the punishment and no dolly!" That was not all. I got trimmed every chance he got for two weeks and I was sick in bed for four or five days. That is not all, but enough for this time. That was my first and last fishing trip.

Butterfly: My friend and his friends I think have gone to the beach for the summer. Hope so.

Will someone send in the old song Jim Fiske? I would like very much to get it.

May God be with all in trouble or sickness.

NONESOPRETTY (Club 4).

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE CHILD.

Dear Social Corner: Why should the father of a family be cheated of the pleasure of being friends with his children just because he is away from home all day? So many of the readers seem to feel that all the responsibility for the child rests with the mother, since she is with the child the greater part of the time. Of course, this is true to some extent, but in our family we have a system by which father, too, comes in for his share of advising and helping the youngsters.

We have three children, all of them small, and until recently they scarcely saw their daddy at all except on Sunday. This seemed hardly fair either to the children or their father, so we devised a plan to make it possible to give them a chance to get acquainted with eather other. And it has worked out even better than we hoped.

The children have their supper at 5.30 because they go to bed at 7 o'clock. My husband doesn't get home until 6.15, which makes our own dinner about 6.45, too late for the children when they are in bed so early.

Here is our system: The children are through with their supper by the time their father gets home, so the time before they go to bed belongs to them, and they spend it telling their daddy all about what they have been doing all day and their plans for the next day's fun. He enjoys it as much as the babies do. Sometimes he tells them stories and plays quiet games with them.

This gives me a chance to get our dinner ready and to straighten the kitchen a little before the meal. At 7 o'clock we both put the children to bed and then have our own meal, which is only 15 minutes later than it used to be. But these few minutes are worth much to both the children and their father, as they are becoming close friends and pals.

HELP ALL OTHERS POSSIBLE.

Dear Members: It has been some time since I have written, much longer than I expected, but I often wonder if everyone's time is taken up the same as mine. With trying to clean house, with all the everyday housework besides and not much help it keeps anyone busy. But thank goodness I am nearly through with the regular housecleaning, so perhaps I will get a little more time. Then I'll have a little more time to do as I would like but I like to be busy. Think it is better to have something to do to take up one's mind. But it is pretty hard to have too much of it. I suppose we are all put here to do some good for somebody so let us try to help each other along in all the ways we can.

Well, Nonesopretty, how about that rat? We were troubled with a lot of them until I sent for some Rat Nip. I spread it on some white bread and cut it in little squares and put it where the rats could get it and I haven't seen a rat since. That was four or five months ago so I would advise you to get some and I think you won't see any more for some time. A lot of people are troubled with them so they had better try it too. I thought that I would be able to get to some of the picnics this summer but I am afraid I can't leave home very well. They are putting a state road on the hill where I live and they buy all the gas from our filling station so they are coming here all times of the day for gas and someone has got to be here and book it and keep track of it so you see it ties any one up. But I won't complain for when they get it done we will have one of the pleasantest roads that can be found in this part of the state to drive over, especially over the hill. I think you will agree with me after you have taken a trip over it.

Will send a tested recipe for

Corn Bread: 3-4 cup of white meal, 1 1-3 cup of flour, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 egg, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, small 1-2 cup sugar. Mix all together and bake in a moderate oven for 20 minutes.

Good luck to all.

RURAL AUNTY (Club 4)

AN OLD-TIME REMEDY

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Will now answer the roll call after such a long silence, now that housecleaning is finished and all hands are feeling fine.

Am busy at present making draperies, but have gven up tatting for a while, as my eyes have been bothering me a lot lately.

Here's how I camouflaged a water stain on my nice white ceiling; I had put some plants upstairs in a spare room to get the morning sun and one day after watering them I saw a good sized water stain or yellow mark on the ceiling. I felt bad, as I knew the ceiling wouldn't be cleaned again till fall, so I took some white chalk my little girl has for her blackboard. I used it lengthwise instead of the end and rubbed it on, and such good results! The stain doesn't show and neither does the chalk, unless standing right under it. The chalk can be bought at the 5 and 10 cent stores. This is my own idea and have done it several times with good results.

There have been a number of diphtheria cases near me and two of them died, so am sending the editor an old-time remedy to copy, for I think it is worth knowing. It got first prize from the New York Sun at the time of the diphtheria epidemic in Alaska. The remedy referred to is as follows:

Equal parts of oil of tar and turpentine—say two ounces of each—mixed well and placed on fine pine shavings and burned. A tunnel is placed over it, so that the fumes can be directed into the patient's mouth. Relief should come in five minutes, as the chemical action is to cause the false membrane that causes death to shrivel up and be easily roved.

Here's what I was told the other day by a butcher, so will pass it along as I know there's a number of the Corner members who have pet cats as well as myself. He told me not to feed a cat too much salmon in the summer time, as the oil in it will cause the mange.

Was sorry to hear of so many sisters passing away, as I enjoyed their letters ver ymuch. I hope the sick and shut-ins are improving and can get out soon. LADY SLIPPER.

NARCISSUS AND ECHO

Dear Social Corner Editor: A beautiful youth ,son of Ceobisus and the nymph Liriope, seeing his image reflected in a fountain, and supposing it to be the nymph of the place, he fell in love with it. Every token of his love was reflected in the pool until Narcissus felt sure that his passion was fully reciprocated, but in his eagerness to clasp the bautiful creature in his arms he disturbed the mirror-like surface of the water and she fled from his sight. Hoping she would return, he waited patiently until her fears had subsided, when he again ventured to peer cautiously over the edge of the low bank. Again the nymph returned with caution, but with eyes love-laden, and when Narcissus ventured to address her, he saw her lips part as if to answer, and her soft glances grow more and more tender, but when he again ventured to clasp her in his arms she again disappeared. Time and again this pantomime was enacted, but though she constantly eluded his embrace, the youth could not tear himself away from the spot, and finally died. The gods gazed compassionately upon the beautiful corpse and changed it into the flower narcissus, which has ever since flourished beside quiet pools wherein its pale image is clearly reflected.

Echo, a mountain nymph, servant of Juno, who fell in love with Narcissus, and because he failed to return her love she pined away until her voice was all that was left of her. She then dwelt in the woods and occupied herself in mimicking every sound she heard. Juno for bade her speaking more than to answer questions.—(Bechtel).

PANSIES

Softer than baby's fingers,
Or the queen's velvet gown,
Or thistle's silk that lingers
Through the slow air adown,
Is this five-folded scutcheon with arabesques so rare.
No hand that ever lived on earth could trace design so fair.
A galleon small with golden sail and purple richly wrought,
It floats upon the summer gale, safe-moored to its green port.

Old name so sweet to think on, they used to say "heart's-ease."
Content I drink your loveliness when other joys but tease,
And gazing at your marvels, I seem to hear again,
As in the simpler days of old, the voice of God to me.

ZERO.

A TARDY LETTER

Kind Editor and Social Corner Writers: As I see other tardy members sending in letters, I will do the same, as it has been a long time since I wrote to the Corner page.

I wish to thank Corner members for all the nice letters and cards, also the lovely bouquets of flowers, sent to me when I was so sick; also thank others who sent flowers, fruit and other nice things. A friend in need is a friend indeed, and when sick is the time to find who our friends are.

Nonesopretty: Your nice letter received and I thank you.

Zero: Why don't you write some more?

Joan: Glad you are O. K. again, or able to go out again.

Aries: Hope your arm is better. How is the garden? I just planted pole beans and beets. There were two frosts last week. The oriole has made her nest nearer the house in the same tree as years back. She is so darling. I love to watch her go in her nest. All my plants froze this winter. I will not keep more. Have more hardy outdoor plants.

Aunt Jerushie: I divided your lovely big bouquet with Violet. She was so pleased. Said you sure must have your arms full. They are still nice and fresh. I planted some of the beans. Hope they yield good. I caught a glimpse of the pets with bell on. Think they come after water. I wish they would come out in the open, so I could see them. Hope stray dogs don't kill them.

Violet: Hope you and the boys got home O. K. Did you hear the old-time dance? I made fish salad. Oh, it was delicious. It made me three big meals and last taste of it was as good as the first one.

Pineapple: How are you? Oh, that pie and chowder were just delicious. If I only knew how to cook, would make you something and surprise you.

Regulation Dinner: How are you and yours? Don't see your name in the Corner page. Perhaps now I have told your name you may get courage and write to the Corner page, or to me. How is the telephone? Such sudden changes on it. I will write you some time, and you write me. Did you go up in the airplane? I had an invitation, but have no way to go so far. Suppose you are counting the days until vacation comes and company comes. M. and H. went up in the airplane. Said it was fine, only ride was too short. Would have been better to have gone off over the country more. Take good care of yourself and maybe we will go on a picnic this summer if not too cold. How is the family car? Suppose you fixed the parts long ago.

Susie of the Sports Page: I was so sorry to read of your terrible vaccination. Why didn't you step on the gas and not get it but once? I missed your letters in the paper. Why didn't you send in a complaint to the state humane society for cruelty to live folks? You could have sent it by proxy same as the others did and maybe the agent would not have squealed on you, for when he saw your arm he would have known it was no frame-up on you and false as the other was. I am so glad you are better now. Why don't you join the Social Corner and help fill the page? Then you could have a good time and members are so good to you when you are sick. Did a doctor's wife come to see you? Haven't seen a letter from her in a long time. But "Oh, so busy," I know that is the reason.

J. E. T.: Where are you? and how are you and hubby? I couldn't get you on the phone when near you. I think it would be nice if all the Corner members would keep a wild flower record, kind and date; see who got the most and earliest. Don't you? How is the penny you planted? Has it blossomed yet? Wishing editor and writers all health, happiness and success, I will ring off. L. T. H. (Club 1).

Burgess Bedtime Story

Jenny Wren's Confidence Is Justified
By Thornton W. Burgess

The most provoking words I know
Are simply these: "I told you so."
—Mr. Wren.

The thing that worried Farmer Brown's Boy most regarding the nest of the Wrens in the clothespin bag hanging in the shed was the possibility that Black Pussy the Cat might reach the bag and catch Jenny Wren or the babies when they hatched out. He kept Black Pussy shut up in the house at night and during the day he and Mother Brown kept a watchful eye on Black Pussy. Two or three times she had been discovered beneath the bag, looking up at it longingly, the tip of her tail all the time twitching. Each time she had been punished.

"We can't watch that nest all the time," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "It has got to be protected in some way."

Farmer Brown's Boy went out to the barn

"It ought to be," said Mother Brown. "I don't want anything to happen to that family after having given up my clothespin bag for them."

Farmer Brown's Boy went out to the barn. He got some wire netting. The holes were just about big enough for a Wren to slip through easily. He made a framework and covered it with the netting. Then he took the contrivance out to the shed. There with hammer and nails he went to work.

Jenny Wren was on her eggs in the clothespin bag. The hammering frightened her, but she stuck to her eggs.

"I don't know what he's doing, but I don't believe he's going to harm me at all," she kept saying over and over to herself. "If he had been going to do us any harm, he would have done it before now. Just the same, I wish I knew what he is doing."

It and by the pounding ceased and Farmer Brown's Boy went away. Then Jenny Wren left her eggs and popped out of the clothespin bag to see what had been going on. At first she was frightened. It seemed to her that she was a prisoner. She was inside a cage. But it didn't take her long to discover that she wasn't a prisoner at all. The openings in the wire were just big enough for her to slip in and out nicely. But no one any bigger than she could get inside and, there, inside, hung the clothespin bag with her nest and precious eggs, where no one could reach them.

Black Pussy came sneaking in. Her tail twitched and her eyes glared with longing. She had fully intended, sooner or late, to get to that clothespin bag somehow. Perhaps you can guess her surprise and disappointment when she discovered that wire cage protecting it. It wasn't possible for her to reach that bag now.

It was the very next day that the eggs began to hatch and soon there were six hungry babies in there. Those were busy days for Jenny and Mr. Wren. From dawn of day until the Black Shadows came creeping out from the Purple Hills they worked to fed those hungry babies. But they didn't have to worry. It didn't take them long to discover that they now had the safest home they ever had. No enemy could reach that clothespin bag hanging inside that cage of wire netting. They actually took delight in teasing Black Pussy, as day after day she sat down beneath, looking up hungrily as she listened to the cries of the baby Wrens as they were being fed.

Now, what do you think about this place for a home?" demanded Jenny of Mr. Wren.

"You were right, my dear, you were quite right," Mr. Wren admitted meekly. "You are always right."

The next story: "Jenny Finds a Queer Insect."

WOMAN'S INTUITION NO KEENER THAN MAN'S

LINCOLN, Neb.—(AP)—A belief that women have the ability to read facial expressions better than men appears to be just "gentle fiction."

This is the contention of Dr. J. P. Guilford of the University of Nebraska, who has conducted an experiment with men and women students. The girls did no better than the boys when it came to telling what looks imply.

The 15 young people who took part in the tests improved in ability rapidly during the 10 days of the experiment. They judged a set of scientific pencil sketches taken from the face of a German actor.

Dr. Guilford believes true emotion always can be read by an expert, no matter what the outward facial mask may be.

HAWAIIAN PLANT LIVES ONLY IN VOLCANOES

NEW YORK—(AP)—Wild flowers that have almost disappeared are described by P. L. Ricker of the Bronx botanical garden and president of the Wildflower Preservation society of America.

"The beautiful magnolia-like flower named for Benjamin Franklin," he says "is probably the only species known to be absolutely exterminated in the wild state in this country.

"The snow plant is known only from the Yosemite national park region, where there is a $25 fine for picking. The attractive silver sword is known only from within the craters of a few Hawaiian volcanoes. Until recently it was being rapidly destroyed by goats and native collectors."

Wide use of Indian lizard skin for shoes and other commercial articles is rapidly reducing the number of these reptiles.

HEAVY PROFIT-TAKING IN MARKET MADE CLOSING PRICES IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, June 14.—(AP)— The revived bull campaign on the stock market ran into heavy week end profit taking today, and closing prices were highly irregular, but yesterday's accelerated pace of trading was maintained, total sales exceeding 3,200,000 shares.

Call money was considerably easier holding at 7 per cent all day, with some funds available in the outside market as low as 6 1-2. The effect upon sentiment of these lower rates to carry over the week end, however, was partially offset by bankers forecasts of scarce money beginning about Wednesday of next week, as a result of the mid-month settlements.

The market opened strong on bullish interpretations placed on the federal reserve condition statements, but it was definitely stated in federal reserve circles that there had been no change in the tight money policy. Wall street is looking for improved credit conditions beginning in early July, however, with the passing of heavy new financing requirements. A further trickle of gold into New York was disclosed with takings of $2,000,000 in Canada and $1,000,000 in Buenos Aires.

Prominent in the day's news was the passage of the farm relief measure, without the debenture scheme, which was favorably received in Wall street. Montgomery Ward announced the cutting of a $50,000,000 melon through granting of rights. Gasoline prices were advanced one cent in Pennsylvania, Delaware and Houston. Texas rubber consumption in the United States during May was reported at a new high record just under 50,000 tons.

Copper shares received the best support in some time, reflecting the favorable interpretation placed on the statistics for May, showing but a moderate increase in stocks of the red metal, despite the slump in buying. Although foreign buying has as yet failed to come into the copper market in any volume as result of the reparations settlement, it is believed supplies are now reaching a point where consumers must come into the market for large orders. Anaconda, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting and Greene Cananea sold up from 2 to 4 points.

Utilities turned highly irregular, American Water Works, Public Service of New Jersey, and North American, all of which made new highs yesterday, falling back 2 to 5 points in realizing, while Peoples Gas dropped 2 points. Brooklyn Edison, a rather closely held issue, however, shot up 37 points to 340, duplicating its best price of the year, and Commonwealth Power jumped about 20 points to another peak at 238.

A few of the rails gave a better account of themselves, Atchison and Norfolk and Western mounting about 4 points. Erie shares responded slightly to a report that the executive committee would consider resumption of preferred dividends at their meeting a fortnight from today. Steels were firm, U. S. Steel mounting more than 3 points to 177 1-4, but losing some of its gain later. In the merchandising group, Magy, Safeway, and Sears Roebuck made fair gains, but Montgomery Ward, after climbing about 5 points, reacted in "selling of the good news" of the granting of rights.

General Electric, after reaching a new peak at 301 3-4, fell back to 297, off a point, net. Columbian Carbon jumped 8 points to a new top, and Minneapolis Moline Power Implement and General Railway Signal reach new high territory.

Auburn Auto, after selling up 4 1-2 points to a new top at 297 1-2, tumbled to 275, and closed at 285, off 8. It was announced that President Cord is forming a new holding company. U. S. Industrial Alcohol and National Distillers fell back about 4 and 2 points in realizing, and Allis Chalmers, Air Reduction, and A. M. Byers were among issues losing 2 to 6 points.

International Silver dropped about 5 points to a new low at 11⅞, reflecting the decline in silver metal prices as result of demonitization of the metal by several European countries.

In the commodity markets, wheat and corn closed about 1-2 to 3-4 of a cent higher on bullish weather reports and passage of the farm relief measure. The cotton market appeared previously to have discounted the bullish May consumption figures, and closed 75 to 90 cents a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges were quiet. Sterling Cables rallying slightly to $4.84 13-16, while the Canadian dollar dropped to a discount of 7⅛ of a cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP)— Apparent certainty that the bill establishing a $500,000,000 federal farm board was at last as good as signed gave grain values new upturns today. Wheat traders were also keeping strict watch over developments indicating that the crop situation in Canada may soon become precarious.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 3-8 to 3-4 above yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4c to 3-4c up, oats 1-8c to 1-4 a 3-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 10c.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 3-8 to 7-8c above yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4c to 3-4c up, oats 1-8c to 1-4 a 3-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 10c.

Prospects that farm relief would at once go into effect dominated the wheat market today right from the beginning. Dispatches saying the wonderful weather was adding substantially to the domestic winter wheat yield southwest attracted much notice, but in the face of Washington developments about progress of the farm bill in the final stages toward the white house had little market influence. On the other hand, advices that rain is badly needed over a wide area in Canada were an evident help to buying based on news about farm relief.

Winnipeg messages received here said that unless heavy rains soon fell Canadian wheat crop conditions would bring about a general roar of complaint. Meanwhile, reports were at hand that wheat shipments from elsewhere than Canada, Argentina and Australia are practically at the zero point, and that reserves of wheat in exporting countries other than the United States are diminishing. According to predictions in some quarters, any active buying from Europe, together with crop damage reports from North America, would easily cause an advance in world prices. European takings of wheat today from North America totaled about 800,000 bu., mostly Canadian.

Wet cold weather prevalent throughout much of the corn belt and unfavorable for the growing crop did a good deal to give independent strength to the corn market. Besides, country offerings of corn to arrive were decidedly smaller, and as a rule were at prices above the market. Oats were governed largely by the action of other grain.

Packers' buying rallied the provision market, despite downturns in the value of hogs.

MINING OF LIGNITE GROWS IN DAKOTAS

BISMARCK, N. D.—(AP)—Application of inventive genius to North Dakota's vast deposits of lignite coal may make this prairie state one of the greatest fuel producing regions in North America.

A German system of making little coal bricks out of the lignite has proved successful on a commercial basis and the investment of millions of dollars in briquetting plants is forecast.

Financiers invested $1,000,000 in a plant at Lehigh, N. D., and there was a general shaking of heads. Similar trials had failed. The Lehigh plant however, has been operating at capacity since its inception, and now plans are being made to enlarge the works, open a second plant in North Dakota and a third in South Dakota.

K. A. Loven, Minneapolis engineer, who designed the plant, predicts an output of $250,000 this year, not including revenue from byproducts, such as cresols, phenols, cresylic acids, paraffin and oils.

The briquets are said to have the same heating value as anthracite coal, an expensive fuel in many parts of the northwest. They can be shipped and stored without deterioration. Geologists estimate that North Dakota contains enough lignite to supply the United States with fuel for a thousand years. Geologically, it is young coal.

The process is to reduce the coal, to char, in gigantic ovens. During this process the oils are drawn off and used as binder in making the briquets.

PREDICTS STATIONS WILL HAVE OWN MUSIC

CHICAGO —(AP)— Leading radio studios soon may be producing their own music, believes Howard Neumiller, musical director of WENR.

"Radio has attracted the best music in the world," he asserts, "and there is no reason why it should not attract the best composers and arrangers. A start in this direction is indicated by composition of special numbers for sponsored programs.

"I believe it is only a question of a short time until each season will see studios with exclusive musical presentations, which will later be published and released for general use."

POETRY

By The Lark

By the lark spinning up to the sky
I would guide the delight of my eye.
By the flower in the sun I would be Made aware of the witchery.
World haunted, world painted
With emblems, with starry wings,
Here are the old now in youth reinstated,
And in April love sings.

It is a step from the cellar of doom, and then
I am back to the flowers.
I am made again over with men
In the strength and the power,
And a mastery fills me to go, to achieve—

But it's only, perhaps, the stars,
And rivers that sing at bars
Of the golden passion of love
When spring is a dove,
And we learn again to believe!

So I am looking the sky in the face,
And seeing with vision clear
A moment of heart without fear,
A jubilant moment that lifts
To the peaks where song drifts
In a cloud and glory and sweep
Of the young, green beauty, the deep
Fervor and passion of truth—
By the lark I am made into youth!

—Baltimore Sun.

Grandma's Quilts

My grandma has the nicest quilts;
She made them all herself.
She sprinkles them with lavender
And lays them on a shelf.

These quilts all have such funny names,
Like Monkey Wrench, and Album—yes,
And Old Maid's Puzzle, Sugar Bowl,
And lots of other ones, I guess.

There's Ocean Wave, and Double T,
And Basket, Windmill, Birds in Flight;
They look like flower beds in bloom,
All green and yellow, red and white.

My grandma said she'd teach me how
To make a Nine-Patch, if she could;
And she will give me her best quilt,
Dove in a Window—if I'm good.

—Helen Rhode Hoopes, in Kansas City Star.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"She is positively like a lawyer in the way she convinces people of anything."

"Half-Portian, you might say.'—Boston Transcript.

Claude—See here, I've waited an hour for you!

Celia—But I said I'd be five minutes late.—La Rire.

Mazie—I hear your boy friend wants to settle down and get a home.

Gertie—Well, he's got a good start. I gave him the gate last night.—Norwich Guidon.

Wallflower (meaningly)—My feet are absolutely numbed with cold.

Obtuse Young Man—My, that's too bad! Have you tried wiggling your toes?—The Pathfinder.

"If I were trying to match politeness," snapped the woman, "I'd have a hard time here.

"Let me see your sample," said the clerk calmly.—Louisville Courier Journal.

"I'm sorry, miss," said the clerk, "all we carry is sealing wax."

Salt—Did you ever see a bundle of vapor?

Lubber—Bundle of vapor? No! How could you bundle vapor?

Tar—By machinery.

Lubber—What!

Tar—Sure. You've heard of steam rollers?—Army and Navy Journal.

"My dear," said the good husband as he put down his book, "I've just finished reading this book 'The Wonders of Nature,' and it's amazing how it makes me realize what a puerile, insignificant thing man is."

"Huh!" said his wife. "I never read the book. But I realize it just the same."—Chanwos.

"I suppose it was hard to lose your daughter," said the friend the day after the wedding.

"Well, it did seem hard for a while," said the father, "but she landed the fellow finally."—Montreal Star.

"Tenshun!"

No response from the recruit.

"TenSHUN!"

No response.

"See here, you! I said attention!"

"But I am at attention, major. It's this uniform that's at ease."—Pelican.

Angus had been visiting a friend, and after the chat he rose to go. His host said: "Will you have a bit of a drink before you go?" Angus nodding, the host asked: "How do you have it?"

"Oh, half and half," then, after a pause, "Wi' plenty o' soda."—Sporting and Dramatic.

A magnetic method of detecting flaws in steel castings six inches thick has been developed.

A woman of Columbus, O., won a divorce when she testified that her husband, a trumpet player, refused to kiss her or allow her to kiss him because it would spoil the shape of his lips and ruin his career as a trumpeter.

Far from becoming "black sheep," according to the popular tradition, many ministers' sons become ministers, statistics compiled by the Rev. Henry S. Huntington of Scarsdale, N. Y., and published in Eugenics Magazine, show. Of 104 clergymen questioned, two-fifths reported themselves sons of clergymen, and many more descendants of ministers.

Captain W. C. Putnam, pensioned member of the Brockton fire department, is believed to be the only man in that city who plants and harvests two crops from his gardens. One of the gardens is at Orlando, Fla., and the other at his home in Brockton. The Florida garden is planted in December, and each spring Captain Putnam returns to Brockton and starts another vegetable and flower garden.

A well-known Weymouth druggist invented this particular system of collecting bills. Then his friend, an auto accessory dealer, tried it, sending out a bunch of statements, covering a number of bills which had seemed to be in the non-collectable class, with his signature as a receipt. With the bill went a courteous letter stating that he would appreciate a check, but if the customer did not care to remit that he would make him a present of the amount due and get it off his books. He received 45 per cent. of the amount due and expects more.—Boston Globe.

URBANA, Ill.—(AP)—A new and rapid process has been developed at the experimental plant of the state water survey for the production of valuable gases from waste—sewage sludge undergoing reduction, or other wastes.

The gas is produced in tanks which collect the valuable vapors and promote bacterial action. The University of Illinois is applying for patents to assure the benefits to the public.

Palace Theatre.

Anyone who has ever left his girl friend hastily at three a. m. after strong parental hints from the top of the staircase will appreciate the amusing situation in which Colleen Moore and her leading man, Neil Hamilton, appear in Why Be Good? the Palace theatre's present picture.

Why Be Good? a story of a flirtatious modern girl, revives memories of such occasions, which serve to make this comedy-drama one in which the principal characters are unusually understandable and human.

Miss Moore, as a dance-mad peppy girl of the 1929 model, and Hamilton are seen in a romance that is both humorous and serious. The players are seen in jazzy night clubs, in a bungalow on top of a skyscraper, and in the cheap but homey house of a stellar character. William A. Seiter directed Why Be Good? at the First National Studio, the story having been written by Carey Wilson and synchronized with sound and music. Other sound featurettes on the same program include a 100 per cent talking comedy, Zip Boom Bang, Pathe Sound News, Sound Revue and Pathe Sound Novelty.

The story opens with a woman on trial accused of the murder of her lover. Highly dramatic and tense throughout, it provides several unusual plot developments and is said to create suspense from start to finish.

A splendid supporting cast is seen, including many natives of the distant islands.

Broadway Theatre.

At a private showing of Noah's Ark at the Broadway theatre on Friday morning to about fifty of the city's prominent citizens every one without question said it was the greatest picture they had ever seen. Mr. Max Hanover, who is known in this community said in part: "The presentation of Noah's Ark gave me the greatest thrill in my life. It is a most stupendous production—embodying a combination of the wonderful, spectacular, educational, tremendously thrilling and entertaining. It demonstrates the transition under which we are living with the wonderful productions of today entirely supplanting the accomplishments of yesterday. In my opinion Noah's Ark surpasses any sight seen by human eyes in all past centuries."

Practically every profession was represented at this screening and their valuable criticisms are on file in the Broadway office.

Noah's Ark will open a four days' engagement at the Broadway starting Sunday. Over 140,000 tons of water were used to make the flood scene realistic. Great tanks were built on the hill tops around the studio lots and at a flash from the director's office the water gates were opened letting down hundreds of tons of water a minute, actually sweeping temples and thousands of people before its onrush. This is but one of the very impressive scenes to be witnessed in Noah's Ark. The cast includes Dolores Costello as the star with George O'Brien as the hero, and Noah Beery, Louise Fazenda, Guinn Williams, Paul McAllister, Nigel de Brulier, Anders Randolf, Armand Kaliz, Myrna Loy, William V. Mong, Malcolm Waite, Noble Johnson, Otto Hoffman and Joe Bonomo.

FEDERAL BIRD HAVEN CREATED BY PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A haven for migratory birds, on soil which once echoed with the martial tread of soldiers, has been created by executive order by President Hoover at former Fort Keogh military reservation, Montana.

The sanctuary covers 57,000 acres and will be under the control of the bureau of biological survey. It is one of a vast chain of federal game refuges.

Fish culture operations will be carried on in a 70-acre artificial lake, while a third project on the same soil will be the work of a range livestock experiment station.

COAL DUST RECOVERED FROM GERMAN RIVER

ESSEN, Germany—(AP)—Germany is about to open a great waterborne coal mine by recovering the coal dust that for years has been washing down the river Emscher.

The Emscher runs through the Rhenish-Westphalian industrial area, where water used in washing coal has been flowing into it for years. Recently an experimental plant demonstrated that the river silt was so impregnated with coal dust that commercial recovery is profitable.

Now the Emscher corporation is constructing a plant to recover 100,000 tons of the dust annually.

CENT KEEPS AC SET OPERATING 3 HOURS

NEW YORK —(AP)— Radio receiver operation from the light socket costs on the average of one cent for every three hours used.

This figure will vary in accordance with the local price per kilowatt hour of current, but engineers have accepted one cent as fitting most cases. The cost was arrived at with a six-tube AC receiver, using a heater type detector, four direct filament AC tubes, a 371a and a full wave rectifier tube.

From the test it was shown that "electric reception" drew considerably less current than many common electric appliances.

RADIO BRINGS CHEER TO CONVALESCENTS

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Patients in the new Holmes hospital of the college of medicine, University of Cincinnati, can while away the hours of convalescence listening to the radio.

Each room is equipped with a radio outlet connected with central receivers, so that patients may have a choice of several programs. Earphones are furnished patients on request.

TWO PETITIONERS SECURE DIVORCES IN CASES THAT ARE UNCONTESTED

Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court short calendar session here Friday afternoon granted two divorces on petitions that were uncontested and reserved decision in two other cases.

Divorce for cruelty was granted to Josephine Zelinsky Hardin; of this parts unknown. She was also given custody of a minor child Mrs. Harding testified to her marriage in Norwich on May 28, 1924, but she has worked ever since as a waitress in Norwich and New London because her husband contributed nothing towards her support. She is now working in New London. Her husband she said, habitually stayed out late and came home crazy drunk. Mrs. Harding told of a wild party that was held at her home in her absence at work on July 4, 1926. This was while she and her husband were living in this city. Her husband had two or three women and several men in the party one of the women did a dance in the altogether and one of the men got so drunk that he went to sleep in the bathtub. She said that the last time she saw her husband was in September, 1928, when he came back after an absence since January of that year, beat her, choked her, and wanted to kill her and threw the baby out of bed onto the floor.

Walter Havens, proprietor of a wayside refreshment place at Saybrook, testified to Harding's drinking habits while working for him and said Harding left with a waitress for Hartford. Mrs. Bertha Bray of this city, who lived in the same house as the Hardings, gave testimony in support of what went on at the party on the Fourth of July 1926.

William R. Brooks of Groton was given a divorce from Katherine McDowell Brooks, now of parts unknown. The divorce was granted for desertion since Dec. 17, 1925. At that time Mr. Brooks said he came home from work and found that his wife had gone from their home in Groton, leaving behind her wedding ring and the two children, a daughter and a son. The daughter is now 20 and is married and the son is 18. He said he doesn't know where either of them is now.

His testimony was that his marriage took place in New York on April 8, 1908 and he and his wife have lived in Mystic, Stonington and Groton.

William L. Morgan, landlord for Brooks in Groton and Mrs Sarah Burrows of New London gave testimony to support the desertion charge.

Decisions Reserved.

In the suit of Ida B. Holmes of Occum, seeking divorce from Simon J. Holmes, formerly of Sprague, now of parts unknown, whom she married at Sprague on March 18, 1916. Judge Brown took the papers and reserved dicision after hearing the evidence. Mrs. Holmes alleged desertion about a year after the marriage Between then and now she has seen him only once, which was in 1922, and she doesn't know where he is now, she told the judge.

Albert Gladue and his wife Anna, brother-in-law and sister respectively of the petitioner, supported the testimony as to desertion, Judge John H. Barnes was attorney for Mrs. Holmes.

Mrs. Philemon Root of 61 Colt street, New London, sought divorce from Zury Root, whom she married at New London Sept. 18, 1920 and who deserted her on Aug. 4, 1921, she claims. He was her second husband. She testified that Root was a drinking man, never supported her, but would work for a few days, collect his pay and spend the money for drink. She had been obliged to work to support herself and Root demanded money from her at times. If she didn't give it to him he would steal it. She gave him $25 the day he left and when she heard from him next it was through a letter in 1922 when he wrote for money.

Mrs. Rose E. Sohn of New London, who was Mrs. Root's landlord for six years, testified to her industry and good character as did Mrs. Bella Rubin, now of Ocean avenue, who had also lived at 61 Colt street.

Judge Brown inquired of Mrs. Root if she would marry again to which she replied, after some hesitation, "Yes, if I could get a man to support and take care of me the rest of my life."

"You don't seem to have had much luck so far," remarked the judge. "No," said Mrs. Root, "they'll marry me, but they won't support me."

Judge Brown reserved decision as an amendment is to be filed in the case asking for change of name.

school education and trade training. In addition to the money we give we can help them greatly by sending over the clothes we no longer need. There is clothing in the bottom of trunks and on the high shelves of the closets that would do to send overseas. Will you not do yourselves a favor by getting rid of those things that you do not need?"

Durable clothing, either for men or women, adults or children, under or outer garments, sweaters, caps, blankets and the like are the types of material most useful. Filmy things, evening gowns and satin pumps would be of no value to the orphans or to the adults in the refugee camps. The clothing is reconditioned and given to those in need.

BAT TRIES TO JOIN BROADWAY SCHOOL ORCHESTRA

A bat with an ear for good music flew in from the darkness of the night to join the Broadway school orchestra during its concert Friday evening in the senior room at Broadway school. As the little animal circled on silent wings about the room it made little difference to the young musicians who were absorbed in the rendering of their programme, but it spread consternation among many in the audience, who twisted and ducked in their seats whenever the bat swooped near, until it finally found a convenient place to rest somewhere in the skylight.

Principal Frank W. Clapp announced the numbers in the programme, which was very well rendered as follows, with William Hazard as conductor and Angelo Perrone as concert master:

Over the Waves (Rosas); Homeless (Arthur); Bluebells (Potstock), orchestra; violin solo, Ella Wibberly, Margaret Wibberly, pianist; Falling Leaves (Seredy); Flag of Truce March (Laurendeau); violin solo, Angelo Perrone, Joseph Dembo, William Hazard; Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin (Wagner); violin solo, "Song of India"; Poet and Peasant, overture (F. Von Suppe).

THREE CARLEVALE SUITS SETTLED AND WITHDRAWN

Late Friday afternoon, when the short calendar session of the superior court in this city was about to close for the day, Attorney Charles L. Stewart, one of the counsel for Joseph W. Carlevale appeared before Judge Allyn L. Brown and informed the judge that the three Carlevale cases had been settled and the withdrawal papers had been signed by Carlevale.

Carlevale's three suits against three insurance companies to collect about $15,000 damage from a fire on April 20, 1928 at 56 Boswell avenue, where he had a barber supply business, have been on trial this week. The insurance companies have contended that he was heavily overinsured. It was understood that the settlement figure was $2,250.

SCHOOLS COOPERATING FOR NEAR EAST BUNDLE DAY

The public schools and the Norwich Free Academy are cooperating in the bundle day for Near East relief, which has been announced for June 17. Walter F. Lester, chairman of the school board, and Prof. Edward A. Graham, superintendent, have recently asked the principals to give out printed information to the pupils who take it to their homes and help the parents prepare the bundles, which will be returned to the school building on June 17 or 18.

"Children in Armenia, Syria and some neighboring countries do not have sufficient clothing for school or for ordinary purposes," said Professor Graham. "The wars and disasters of those countries since the World war armistice have kept them in dire poverty and most of them do not have schools in the majority of the rural villages. Even the idea of universal education came to those countries with the Near East Relief which has attempted a thing unprecedented, namely to give all these orphans a common

Reckless Driving Charge Nolled

In the city court Friday morning the reckless driving charge against John Kolwas, 36, of No. 267 Central avenue, was nolled when it was found that he was not criminally responsible. Thursday night his machine was proceeding toward Taftville behind another machine which was following a trolley car. The trolley car stopped and so did the machine ahead of Mr. Kolwas' machine. He pulled to the left and crashed into a third machine headed towards the city and driven by John Blake. Mrs. Blake, who was riding with Mr. Blake, and another woman who was also in the machine, were slightly injured.

ARGUMENTS MADE ON SALE OF THE FAIRGROUNDS

Judge Allyn L. Brown reserved decision in the superior court here Friday after hearing the arguments on a motion made by George H. Gilman to vacate the order approving the sale and deed of the New London county fairgrounds property at East Great Plain. Attorney Gilman, with his brother, Francis Gilman, bid in the property at a public auction conducted by Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver for the New London County Agricultural society. He made a bid of $15,750 above the mortgage and paid down $2,000 at the time of the auction.

As reasons for vacating the order, Attorney Gilman alleges that there has been failure to comply with directions of the court by Receiver Gilbert S. Raymond and also unintentional misrepresentation on the part of the receiver. Attorney E. W. Perkins represented the receiver in opposing Attorney Gilman's motion.

Attorney Gilman seeks to secure the return of the $2,000 deposit and Receiver Raymond has brought a suit to compel the Gilmans to pay up the balance and take the property.

PLANE YELLOW BIRD HAS ARRIVED AT LE BOURGET

In Flight From Comillas, Spain, the Plane Made Landing at Mimizan-Les-Bains, to Take On Gas—The Yellow Bird, Made a Beautiful Landing at Le Bourget—Carried the Stowaway and Aligator Mascot to Its Destination—Stowaway Was Accorded Honors Similar to Those Bestowed Upon the Crew.

LE BOURGET, France, June 16—(AP)—The trans-Atlantic airplane Yellow Bird landed at 8.47 p. m. (2.47 p. m., E. S. T.), completing the flight begun at Old Orchard, Me.

The plane with its crew of three, its stowaway and alligator mascot had left the beach at Comillas, Spain, where it landed on Friday after a non-stop flight from America at 7.45 a. m., French daylight time. The small capacity of its remaining gas tank forced it to take on a fresh supply at Mimizan-les-Bains, which thus became the first French soil touched. They took off again for the French capital, at 5.56 p. m. (11.56 a. m., E. S. T.) on the last lap of about 350 miles.

The big monoplane appeared out of a leaden sky in a drizzle of rain and made a beautiful landing in the very center of the field. In a moment the three French aviators were in the arms of their families who had been tireless in awaiting their coming for three days.

Jean Assolant was at the stick. He had circled over the famous flying field where Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh completed the first flight linking the continental shores and then came down quickly, the wheels brushing the ground at 8.47.

Assolant was the first out of the cabin and his mother, waiting nearby, folded him in her arms and kissed him again and again.

Assolant was crowded away from the door by Rene Le Fevre who saw his mother and father and in front of them his fiancee. He gathered the latter to his breast and flung an arm around his father and mother.

Armeno Lotti, Jr., radio man and backer of the flight, was the third out of the Yellow Bird and became the center of another fond family scene. Cameras clicked furiously in the glaring light of calcium flares.

The crowd, which had been well dampened by the rain, was silent at first and seemed rather lacking in enthusiasm. But a few minutes later it got over its first surprise and there came bursts of cheers that were hearty although delayed.

Arthur Schreiber of Portland, Me., the 22 year old stowaway whose added weight was blamed for the failure to reach the objective of French soil, was almost forgotten in all the excitement. There was no one to welcome him particularly but he clambered out of the plane and walked along with the rest.

The group paused in front of the hangar for a final barrage of photographs and then they entered the shed where champagne was waiting to be drunk to the health of the flying musketeers of France.

The Yellow Bird came a little sooner than had been expected. It seemed to pop out of the mist that overhung Le Bourget. The waiting people gasped at the suddeness of it all after the long hours of waiting.

The plane swiftly circled, barely 100 feet in the air and skimming the tops of the hangars and then banked and gracefully rolled to a stop in the center of the field.

The aviators had taken only a few steps when they were seized and hoisted to the shoulders of welcomers. Schreiber seemed a little dazed when he emerged and more than a little doubtful as to what his reception would be. He stood back for a minute, unable to understand the French that was spoken so rapidly around him. He asked the Associated Press reporter what the attitude of the French people toward his act was.

His fears were abruptly set at rest by two men who grabbed him and put him on their shoulders on which he rode to the hangar in no less style than the three men who had planned the venture for months.

"They are not sore at me?" he had asked. "I haven't gummed things up have I?" Then he heard the cries of "l'Americain" and waved in answer the little American flag he had prepared. He admitted quite frankly he was "out for the money" and in fact he said he didn't want to talk much because "I am in this for what there is in it".

Schreiber denied emphatically the report that he had climbed into the plane with the knowledge of Assolant. His brother-in-law, he said, had nothing to do with arranging the marriage of the pilot and therefore there was no reason why any of the party should have taken an interest in him.

Schreiber found it hard to believe that the French really felt friendly toward him and he clung to Lotti like a child, turning to him for approval before he spoke.

It was Lotti who took control of the situation when the stowaway was discovered a few minutes after the plane left the beach at Old Orchard. Lotti said he promptly made the youth sign an agreement on the plane to share equally any money he got from newspapers with the two aviators, Assolant and Le Fevre. Lotti took nothing for himself because he is wealthy and in fact had financed the expedition.

However Lotti was most kind to Schreiber. During the reception he assured him again that he was his guest and would stay at the hotel of his father. The Frenchman took the stowaway with him when officials sent for him to come from the hangar to the administration building.

Schreiber continued to play the part of an astute young man who has his way to make in the world. He signed only "Art" to the postcards and papers handed him for his autograph. He explained that "he was not going to take any chances on signing a contract" without knowing it

DOUMERGUE REPLIES TO HOOVER'S MESSAGE

PARIS, France, June 16—(AP)—President Gaston Doumergue replying to President Hoover's message of congratulations on the accomplishment of the French monoplane Yellow Bird in crossing the Atlantic, cabled the American executive today as follows:

"Mr. Norman Armour hands me your message and I hasten to thank you for the sentiments you express in it and which will go straight to the hearts of the French people. I will transmit your warm felicitations to the aviators who, following the example of your great Lindbergh have just created one more bond between our two countries."

FRENCHMEN TO ATTEMPT WESTWARD FLIGHT

PARIS, June 16.—(AP)—Armeno Lotti, Jr., with the successful eastward flight of the Yellow Bird hardly over, tonight said "we will try to make it the other way next time. Paris to New York and without stops anywhere."

Lotti added, "perhaps officialdom will permit us to try it now that we have proven we can do it." Whether the return flight would be attempted this summer was left unsaid.

Pilot Jean Assolant when asked whether he was ready to pilot the plane westward said, "I am not ready to decide on that yet. I must look after my little Florida aligator." He was stroking the small ten-inch mascot of the Yellow Bird.

OTHER NATIONS EXPECTED IN THE NAVAL AGREEMENT

LONDON, June 16.—(AP)—A certain measure of surprise, not without of a tinge of disappointment, was expressed in authoritative circles tonight at the terms of the communique issues at Forres today indicating that other powers were expected to cooperate in negotiations for a naval agreement.

All forecasts of the meeting between Prime Minister MacDonald and United States Ambassador Dawes had been based on the idea of a tri-partite conference between the United States, Great Britain and Canada and although the deepest satisfaction was felt at the cordiality of the conversation of the statesmen it was felt that it will be more difficult to secure agreement at another general naval conference than might have been to secure a bilateralment.

The opinion was expressed here that had agreement first been secured between the British empire and the United States it might have been easier to proceed with the larger question.

Naturally there is a disposition to await the promised speeches on Tuesday by the two principals before venturing any decided opinion. The emphasis that the communique laid on the cooperation of other powers seemed to leave little room for doubts as to the actual situation.

BRIDE OF PILOT ASSOLANT IS VERY, VERY HAPPY

NEW YORK, June 16—(AP)—Told by The Associated Press of the safe arrival today at Le Bourget flying field of the French monoplane Yellow Bird, Mrs. Jean Assolant, bride of the pilot of the plane, said she was "very, very happy that it's all over now."

"If they rush my passport through, which I am told they will, I shall join Jean just as soon as the fastest boat can make it," she said.

Told that a Paris newspaper had published a report that the Frenchmen were planning a return flight to America, Mrs. Assolant said it was all news to her.

"Of course you know my limited French and Jean's limited English have made it impossible for me to know all of his plans," she said. "I can't say that I want him to make the return flight, but if he does it will not be without me."

Mrs. Assolant had waited by the telephone all day for news of the final lap of the flight. "But it wasn't because of any anxiety," she explained. "I knew he would make it."

"DON'T BE A SNOB," WAS THEME AT WESLEYAN

MIDDLETOWN, June 16—(AP)—To be or not to be—a snob. That was the theme of the baccalaureate sermon preached by President James L. McConaughy to the graduates of Wesleyan university today.

"Don't be a snob," he said. "Appreciate the man who labors with his hands, the man who differs from us. Be yourself and find time to find God."

He said "the complete life," which was the title of his sermon, could not be obtained by snobbery, and added: "There is plenty of snobbishness in the world already. But I do hope that you will be aristocrats, members of a privileged class, who realize what the opportunities you have had mean to you in obligation.

"As a true aristocrat, I hope your acts will be those befitting nobility, men of rank. You are, I hold, men of a finer class, not necessarily of a higher class than those who have not had college training."

PREMIER POINCARE PRAISES O. D. YOUNG AND J. P. MORGAN

NEW YORK, June 16—(AP)— Raymond Poincare, prime minister of France, in the July issue of the magazine Foreign Affairs, warmly praises Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan for the part they played in the recent reparations conference and calls on all governments concerned "not to delay an hour" in acting upon the expert's report.

"The happy end after such a weary time of waiting," M. Poincare writes, "is due in large measure to the patience, competence, and good temper shown by Mr. Young and Mr. Morgan, the American experts.

"X X X The American experts, who had the highly ungrateful task of serving as arbitrators between debtor and creditors, were able to keep alive the general good will and to inspire everyone with a strong desire not to let the conference fail."

Hoover Is Selecting Farm Board Members

Today the President Will Ask Congress to Provide Funds to Carry Out Relief Program.

WASHINGTON, June 16.— (AP) — With his views on farm relief given a place at last upon the statute books of the nation, President Hoover is devoting his attention to the selection of the eight men who will administer the agricultural program as members of the newly created federal farm board.

For special reasons, the chief executive is anxious that the program be put into operation at the earliest possible date. Indications are that a bumper crop of wheat will be harvested within the next few months which added to the carry over from last year may produce a serious surplus. This situation gives the board a problem of huge proportions to cope with at the outset. But while Mr. Hoover wants the board to apply itself to this situation as quickly as possible, he believes that in a larger sense, the success of his farm program will hinge primarily upon the individual capabilities of the members of the board. For this reason he is exercising the utmost care in making his selections. Two weeks and perhaps three are expected to elapse before its personnel is complete.

Of several hundred names that have been advanced for the president's consideration in selecting the board, two have taken a fairly definite place upon his tentative roster of members. They are James C. Stone of Lexington, Kentucky, president of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative association, and Carl Williams, the publisher of an Oklahoma farm paper and a former member of the federal board of mediation.

In a formal public statement, Mr. Hoover has set up several definite standards by which he will be governed in making his selections. The members of the board must be partially distributed regionally throughout the country and at the same time they must be chosen with a view of giving each major branch of agriculture representation. The board, too, must be composed of men of actual farming experience who have engaged in directing farmers' marketing organizations, since the activities of the new farm agency will deal very largely with these cooperatives. In addition, Mr. Hoover is anxious that one member be equipped with a broad experience in the field of general business and that another shall have had special experience in the field of finance.

Tomorrow, Mr. Hoover expects to send a special message to congress requesting the appropriation of funds for putting the program into operation. Of the $500,000,000 authorized by the bill, the president has announced he will ask for an appropriation of $150,000,000. He feels that since congress will be in session except for short intervals, the board will be able to ask for further appropriations as they are needed.

MAN CAPTURED AFTER THEFTS IN COLCHESTER

COLCHESTER, June 16—(AP)—Several hours after a series of breaks were committed here early today, Amos Anderson, known on the police force as "the Lone Wolf" captured Joseph Marinello, of Newark, N. J., outside of Darien, driving a stolen automobile in which were about 400 dresses. Members of a second automobile escaped. He is believed to be a member of a gang which broke into the Gaiety Manufacturing company and to have made off with the clothing.

Police are of the opinion that Marinello, with his aides, broke into the garage here owned by Joseph London and stole a sedan which he used to haul the stolen goods away. A lot of raw material as well as the dresses were taken from the Gaiety company.

Before escaping the robbers forced an entry into the garage of Arthur H. Chapman and drove off with a coupe machine besides $75 taken from the safe. The Groton police barracks was notified and a warning was sent throughout the state.

Marinello was on his way to New York when apprehended. He was brought back here by state troopers and will be arraigned in the Colchester justice court.

DEATH OF VETERAN OF THE MEXICAN WAR

PARIS, Missouri, June 16—(AP)—William Fitzhugh Thornton Buckner, 101 years old, oldest and believed to have been next to the last surviving veteran of the Mexican war, died at his home here today.

Born in Caroline county, Virginia, January 27, 1828, Mr. Buckner had taken up his residence in the central west when a young man. He was only about 18 years old when the war with Mexico began, and enlisted in Company A, First Missouri mounted volunteers, under Colonel Alexander William Doniphan.

As a member of the expeditionary force that marched to Mexico from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, Mr. Buckner with his regiment participated in several important engagements, including the battle of Taos, N. M.

After the war Mr. Buckner returned to Missouri and the next year joined the Forty-Niners in the rush to California for gold. He counted as one of the epic milestones of his life his task of driving 400 head of cattle from Missouri to California across uncharted lands and through hostile territory. His quest for gold was fruitless, but his venture with the cattle proved profitable.

CHECKING STORY TOLD OF KIDNAPING AND ROBBERY

LAGUNA BEACH, Cal., June 16—(AP)—Police in this Artists' Colony, where the body of Mrs. Myrtle Wood, 40, Long Beach, Calif., widow, was found hidden behind a signboard, today were checking the story told by John A. McClure, 56, Long Beach real estate dealer, that he was shot and kidnaped by robbers while riding with the woman Thursday night.

McClure was found wandering below the Mexican border a few hours after Mrs. Wood's body was discovered here yesterday. He told Tijuana, lower Calif., officers that he was shot by two robbers near Laguna Beach, but could not remember what happened to Mrs. Wood or how his kidnapers took him to Mexico. His hat was riddled with bullets and he had a wound in the head.

Death Of General Bramwell Booth

Had Seen Service For 54 Years in the Salvation Army — Commander 16 Years.

HADLEY WOOD, England, June 16.—(AP)—General Bramwell Booth, former head of the Salvation Army, died at his home here tonight.

The end came to the militant religious leader, who had celebrated his 73rd birthday on March 8th, shortly after nine p. m. tonight. His wife and family with the exception of his daughter Commissioner Mary, who had shared largely in his work with the army and supported him when he fought to maintain control of it, were with him.

After a service of 54 years in the Salvation Army, 16 of which he was commander-in-chief, General William Bramwell Booth, was removed from office in February 1929, by the high council of the army on the ground that he was physically unfit to continue his work.

The nature and extent of his life's work were tersely described by characterizations of General William Bramwell Booth.

He had been called "Father of the World's Poor"; "Patriarch of the Slums," and "Bishop of the Church of the Poor." As commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army he was all of these.

General Booth devoted his life to strengthening and extending the organization founded to promulgate the teaching of religion among persons not reached by the churches and to give to men and women who had failed a new start in life.

He inherited command of the Salvation Army from his father, the late General William Booth, its founder, whose chief lieutenant he had been for many years. As commander-in-chief he became the guiding director and administrator of an organization whose annual revenue has been estimated at $40,000,000.

There came under his control the conduct of 1,500 social institutions, including industrial homes, open-air farms for children, men's hotels, day schools and soldiers' hotels. Additional activities of the Salvation Army under his direction included the conduct of a bank, an insurance company and an immigration company.

The World war offered opportunity for new activities by the Salvation Army and its members did their work so well that in the end the army had been raised from the status of a poor man's charity to a powerful international organization.

General Booth was instrumental in sending the Salvation Army workers into every camp and rest station behind the front and in the countries of the billigerant nations with doughnuts and cigarettes for the soldiers. Because of his organization's heroic work it is said that few persons have been the recipients of as much gratitude as was bestowed on General Booth during and after the war.

Born in Halifax, England, March 8, 1856, he was known generally as Bramwell Booth to distinguish him from his father during the latter's life-time. He received a severe training from his parents for his life work. Appointed chief of staff in 1880, he served in that capacity under his father until the latter's death in 1912. By his father's will he was appointed commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army.

In 1880 General Booth married Miss Eleanor Soper. They had two sons and five daughters. Mrs. Booth became leader of Women's Social work of the Salvation Army and in 1920 was raised to a magistracy by the British government.

DR. J. R. SNOOK STILL MAINTAINS INNOCENCE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 16—(AP)—Dr. James R. Snook, Ohio State university professor held on charges of suspicion in connection with the killing last Thursday night of Miss Theora K. Hix, university medical student today in company with police detectives visited the spot where her body was found and the room which he admits he shared with the girl and then returned to the county jail still adamant in his declarations that he knows nothing of her death.

Police tonight were awaiting the reports from a chemical analysis of stains on several objects found yesterday in a search of Dr. Snook's residence and his automobile. They included a pair of driving gloves, a shirt, a man's felt hat and a jack knife.

The revelation that Dr. Snook had maintained a place for trysts with the dead girl came last night in a meeting at the county jail between the professor and the landlady at the apartment house. The woman, Mrs. M. M. Smalley told detectives that Dr. Snook had engaged a room for himself and "wife" representing himself as a demonstrator for a salt company. Taken to the jail she met Dr. Snook, who told the detectives that he had rented the room last February and that the "wife" was Miss Hix. He said she had been there with him a number of times.

Asked today if his wife knew of the affair with Miss Hix, Dr. Snook said he thought she suspected it.

Miss Hix's body remained at an undertaking establishment tonight with no arrangements made for the funeral.

NEW EFFORT FOR SOLUTION OF NAVAL DISARMAMENTS

Negotiations Will Begin in Speeches Tuesday Night—General Dawes Will Speak at Pilgrims' Dinner in London, Ramsay MacDonald at a Dinner at His Home in Lossiemouth—Dawes and MacDonald Have Had a Conversation on the Subject.

FORRES, Scotland, June 16.—(AP)—After an informal conference between American Ambassador Charles G. Dawes and Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of England, here today, it was announced officially that new negotiations for a solution of the naval disarmaments question would have their beginning in speeches Tuesday night—General Dawes at the Pilgrims dinner in London and Mr. MacDonald at a dinner at his home in Lossiemouth.

Premier MacDonald issued the following communique which had been agreed upon by General Dawes and himself following their conversation at the home of Sir Alexander Grant:

"We have had a conversation regarding the present position of the question of naval disarmament as between the United States and Great Britain. It has been informal and general and most satisfactory.

"His Excellency (Mr. Dawes) proposes to refer to the subject at the Pilgrims dinner in London on Tuesday night and I shall do the same almost at the same time at Lossiemouth and that is intended to be the beginning of the negotiations. We both wish to make it clear that other naval powers are expected to cooperate in these negotiations upon the successful consummation of which the fate of the whole world depends."

The widely heralded meeting between the new American ambassador and the new prime minister of England did not develop anything regarding the projected invitation to Mr. MacDonald to visit America. This subject, both conferees indicated, was not presented.

After reading a statement to the large group of reporters Mr. MacDonald and the ambassador shook hands and posed for photographers. The premier then handed the statement to Mr. Dawes remarking: "It is a very historical document and I have great pleasure in handing it to General Dawes to take back with him."

Mr. Dawes and his party then took leave of their host and Mr. MacDonald's entourage and drove to Aviemore, 40 miles away to catch the six o'clock train for London.

SENATE TO OPEN DEBATE ON BORAH RESOLUTION TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 16—(AP)—A stern contest between senate groups favoring tariff revision for the farmer only and those forces advocating readjustment of the import duty structure on a broader scale will get under way tomorrow with the opening of debate on the resolution of Senator Borah, republican, Idaho.

The Borah proposal would, in effect, instruct the senate finance committee now holding hearings on the house bill carrying increases in rates on hundreds of manufacturing commodities as well as farm products, to ignore that measure and confine its consideration to amendments of the existing law designed to aid agricultural and related products.

Principal arguments are expected to revolve around the interpretation on that part of the resolution concerning "related products." As the tariff law contains many commodities related to agriculture in nearly every one of the 15 rate sections attempts will be made to obtain a more specific definition of this clause.

Although the outcome of the clash was in doubt over the week end it was agreed that the odds favored the Borah plan with perhaps some modifications, which has the support not only of democrats and republican independents in general, but several republican regulars, including senators Allen and Capper of Kansas.

CHARGE AGAINST METHODIST BOARD OF TEMPERANCE

WASHINGTON, June 16—(AP)—A charge that the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals had violated the corrupt practices act of 1925 in failing to file a report of its expenditures in the last presidential campaign was made today by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts.

The allegation was embodied in a letter addressed to Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the organization, the second that Tinkham has addressed to him in a week. In the first, he asked whether such a report had been filed.

Today he declared he had received no answer and asserting that the reason was "apparent," said that Wilson "could not deny" that the board "had violated the corrupt practices act of 1925, a criminal statute which requires that any organization of whatsoever character making expenditures in two or more states in behalf of presidential or congressional or congressional candidates shall make a sworn return to the clerk of the house of representatives of such political expenditures."

In addition, Tinkham said that Wilson had "told a gross falsehood" when he declared on April 30 "'We have no lobby here; we have no lobbyists.'"

"The issue for the American people to settle," Tinkham said, "is whether any church as an organization in the United States is to be allowed to assume political authority and to usurp temperal power."

AMERICAN COUPLE TO BE MARRIED IN VATICAN STATE

VATICAN CITY, June 16—(AP)—The first American wedding to be solemnized within the confines of the newly created Vatican state tomorrow will join Frank D. Comerford, president of the New England Power association, and Miss Mary M. McLoughlin, a graduate of Simmons college and Boston university law school. Both bride and bridegroom were born in Worcester and Monsignor Francis J. Spellman of Whitman, Mass., will be the celebrant in one of the private chapels of Saint Peter, Basilica.

Mr. Comerford is also vice-president and treasurer of the International Paper and Power company and Miss McLoughlin was assistant to the late G. Stanley Hall when he was president of Clark University of Worcester.

STORM WRECKED SHIPS IN NORTH PACIFIC OCEAN

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16—(AP)—A midnight storm from the north Pacific ocean sent two ships ashore broken wrecks, a third was badly crippled attempting to make port, two persons were missing, and the fate of 32 others was in doubt tonight. Shipping men said it was the worst southwester in years on the California and Oregon coast.

The Steamer Laurel, a large lumber carrier, moving out of the Columbia river from San Pedro and New York faced the full sweep of the storm. It was driven ashore tonight, half the ship was drifting out to sea and the remainder, carrying the crew, was just out of the reach of shore life guards and ships at sea as well.

HONG KONG EXPERIENCING SERIOUS WATER FAMINE

HONG KONG, June 16—(AP)—Thousands of thirsty persons lined up at the water stations today in the bright sun and heat awaiting doles of the precious liquid. The rain of yesterday totaled only half an inch, hardly a trickle in the yawning reservoirs.

The government views the situation now as "increasingly serious" and is therefore extending its emergency plans and providing for increased storage and tankage. It is considering converting the naval drydock into a huge reservoir for the water supplies brought by steamships.

Investigation today revealed that five out of the six reservoirs on this island were practically empty. It was estimated that there is now in storage about 200,000,000 gallons, compared with the normal amount of 2,000,000,000 gallons. Kowloon on the mainland is in the same predicament having only 90,000,000 gallons instead of the 500,000,000 needed.

Official circles emphasized that this summer there will be "a certain quantity for all" but explained that the most serious time may be expected in the coming winter unless there are heavy rains prior to October when the winter dry season begins.

The government has telegraphed Singapore and Batcon asking what supplies are available in the Straits Settlements and French Indo China it is making every attempt to increase sources of water imports.

NOMINEES FOR PRESIDENT OF NORTHERN BAPTISTS

DENVER, June 16—(AP)—Three ministers and three laymen tonight composed the possible nominees for president of the northern Baptist convention, meeting here, to succeed Arthur M. Harris of New York, now concluding his term of office. The convention's nominating committee, consisting of a representative from every state division in the northern territory, tomorrow will make its nomination for this office.

The convention customarily accepts the recommendations of this committee.

The ministers mentioned for the post are the Rev. A. W. Beaven, president of the Rochester-Colgate Theological seminary, the Rev. Dr. David Jones Evans, who will join Dr. Beaven at the school as a member of the faculty, and the Rev. Dr. A. Ray Petty, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Newark, N. J. The Rev. Beaven last year was recommended for the presidency, but was unable to accept because of the pressure of religious work elsewhere.

The laymen are J. L. Kraft and John Scott, both of Chicago, and J. W. Baker, Pawtucket, R. I. A layman now holds the office of president, and the practice of the convention is to alternate the post between laymen and clerical candidates.

LINDBERGH'S CRUISER TIED UP AT BLOCK ISLAND

PROVIDENCE, June 16—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, of the cruiser Mouette, best-known skipper on Long Island sound, this season, steered his 38-foot motor craft into New Harbor, Block Island, at 2:30 this afternoon and made fast to the new dock there.

Block Islanders, on the alert for his re-appearance, and wiser in the ways of newspapermen than two weeks ago, when they kept the aviator's honeymoon secret "because he didn't want any fuss," immediately reported the Mouette's arrival.

Lindbergh made fast to the new dock, but did not come ashore for more than an hour.

John Dunn, island oil dealer who spoke to Lindbergh when he came ashore about four o'clock, says the honeymoon navigator is well tanned. Anne remained below decks during the Mouette's stay in port.

The cruiser departed in the direction of Long Island at 5:05 o'clock, having taken on board 130 gallons of gasoline, 75 pounds of ice, one mackerel and a copy of a Sunday newspaper.

CENTRAL FIRE STATION INSPECTED BY OFFICIALS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 16—An inspection of the central fire station on Bank street that rated one hundred per cent. was conducted Saturday afternoon by Mayor Charles A. Gates and the full complement of the board of aldermen. The aldermen are: William E. Webber, Eugene B. Lewis, Oliver L. Willard, Cyril A. Lamoureux, C. E. Macfarlane, Arthur J. Dubreuil and John Reilly. Alderman Webber is chairman of the fire committee. Escorted through the building by Fire Chief Wade U. Webster, the city officials expressed themselves as highly pleased with the fine appearance of the offices, room quarters and apparatus in the station. Note was made of the many important improvements made within the past few years.

The apparatus, which serves the entire city, is made up of five pieces of apparatus, all in excellent condition. The massive Mack 1,000 pumper-engine leads the group. The pumper with its sister piece, a Mack 75-foot aerial ladder truck, are of modern design. The next big pieces in the La France 750 pumper engine which has done noble duty for the past nine years. This engine has been entirely reconditioned and repainted and in all respects is considered today as adequate as any new piece that could be purchased of similar capacity. For small blazes the department is provided with a Reo chemical-hose wagon and a Ruggles chemical-hose wagon. These light and speedy machines are invaluable in giving quick and yet economical service. They are used almost exclusively in response to small fires and assist materially in larger blazes.

A new watch table on which are set the telephones over which alarms are received and two tape registers recording bell alarms has been installed on the main floor. The table equipment also includes the controls for the two street sirens and an interior call system. The pulmotor, which has done much valuable work, is also located on this floor.

A stock room and complete electrical department are new features of the basement. The second floor is partitioned into sleeping quarters, a reading room, showers and toilet facilities and the offices. The sleeping quarters are provided with six cots and are arranged with four exits leading to the sliding pole which leads to the main floor of the station.

The entire structure, which was completely remodeled some time ago, presents a most inviting appearance with efficiency and neatness dominating the atmosphere. The department operates on the two-platoon system and has a record of the highest efficiency.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believes that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 63

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, up fevers and colds.

POETRY

Our Father

Lord, teach us to pray—Luke xi: 1.

Our Father—wondrous depths of hidden meaning,
In words of love revealed to all who see!
God-called, to be the children of the Highest!—
Humanity uplifted, ransomed, free!

Our Father—blest adoption all-embracing!
Children and heirs, in Christ our Saviour one,
Our true relationship, Thy love revealing
Thus, shall Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done!

Our heavenly Father, greater gifts bestowing
Than earthly parents give;—the Gift divine,
Thy Spirit's presence, every temporal blessing,
Yea, every gift of earth and heaven is Thine—

Our Father, granting pardon to the erring—
If we, like Thee, our debtors shall forgive—
Children in truth, conforming to Thy nature,
Learning, in brotherhood, Thy way to live;—

Our Father, still, in loving kindness, leading
All,—when we truly seek to follow Thee—
Not into, but away from our temptation;
From evil keeping, Thou wilt set us free;

Reveal in us Thy purpose, power and glory,
Thy Kingdom, undivided, without end;—
O Master, teach us how to pray, "Our Father"—
On childlike faith all other things depend.

—By Emily Hersey

The Joy of the Hills

I ride on the mountain tops, I ride;
I have found my life and am satisfied.
Onward I ride in the blowing oats,
Checking the field-lark's rippling notes—
Lightly I sweep
From steep to steep:
Over my head through the branches high
Come glimpses of a rushing sky;
The tall oats brush my horse's flanks;
Wild poppies crowd on the sunny banks;
A bee booms out of the scented grass;
A jay laughs with me as I pass.

I ride on the hills, I forgive, I forget
Life's hoard of regret—
All the terror and pain
Of the chafing chain.
Grind on, O cities, grind;
I leave you a blur behind.
I am lifted slate—the skies expand;
Here the world's heaped gold is a pile of sand.
Let them weary and work in their narrow walls;
I ride with the voices of waterfalls!

I swing on as one in a dream—I swing
Down the airy hollows, I shout, I sing!
The world is gone like an empty word:
My body's a bough in the wind, my heart a bird!

"Not wot it used to be, yer honor, not arf."—Humorist.

"Yes," said teacher, "a number of plants have the prefix 'dog.' For instance, the dog-rose, the dog-violet. Can any of you think of another?"

There was a silence, then a happy look illumined the face of one youngster.

"Please, miss," he called out, proud of his knowledge, "collie-flower!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

During the check up of last night two minors—Charles Wilcox of Plainfield and Frank Borduia, Jr., of Norwich—were ordered to appear in court because they were unable to furnish proof of financial responsibility. Minors under 18 years of age operating cars in Connecticut are requiring to file a certificate of such responsibility with the commissioner of motor vehicles.

Later in the evening refreshments were served and there was a period for dancing. Chapters in Putnam, Woodstock, Willimantic, Jewett City, Moosup, Norwich, and Milford were represented at the reception.

The third biennial textile show and style exhibit of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association closed Saturday evening after having been visited by many hundreds of people during the three days it was held, and rates very much of a success. Removal of the exhibits and booths will have been completed early in the week. Adding interest to the show and attracting attention to it Saturday afternoon was the appearance here of the Ashland club boys' band of Jewett City, a very capable organization and attractively uniformed.

Mrs. Susan A. Armington's 10th report on the Christmas seal and tuberculosis fund, covering the year to the first of the present month, shows that the cash received from the sale of seals amounted to $516.36. This with cash on hand and interest received made a total for the year of $714.12. From this fund the salary of the visiting nurse was paid for two months, $200; expense of Christmas seal sale, $23.13; 15 per cent of amount received from sale of seals sent to tuberculosis commission at Hartford, $77.45; paid for nurse's telephone, $33.30; paid for 1454 quarts of milk, $171.24. This leaves a balance on hand of $208.50.

PUTNAM

REV. E. S. LYONS DELIVERS BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 16—The first step to graduation on the commencement programme of the class of 1929 of Putnam High school took place this evening with baccalaureate service at the Congregational church. The processional in which nearly all the under graduates took part as well as the senior class was to the strains of "The Easter March" played by Kenneth C. Sharpe, church organist. The programme as carried out was as follows: Prelude "Grand Aria," (Demarest), Kenneth C. Sharp, organ. Mrs. Nelson Lown, piano; high school processional "Easter March"; the processional hymn "Nicea"; invocation, Rev. James F. English; hymn, Our God, Our Help; responsive reading, Rev. George B. Hawkes, Abington; Anthem, "Send Out Thy Light"; scripture reading, Rev. George A. Barker, Pomfret; prayer, Rev. Walter Lanphear, Eastford; response, "For He Shall Give His Angels Charge Over Thee"; address, "God is With the Fliers", given by Rev. E. S. Lyons of East Thompson; benediction pronounced by Rev. E. P. Wright of St. Phillip's church, Putnam. The service was brought to a close with the recessional march "Easter March" played by Mr. Sharpe at the organ.

The services were largely attended. Both the side aisles of the edifice and seats in the center aisle not occupied by the student body of the school seated one of the largest congregations ever present at baccalaureate.

At a special session of naturalization held Saturday morning in the offices of Curtis Dean, clerk of the superior court of Windham county eight aliens of appeared and took out their first citizenship papers. Miss Marjorie C. Bradford, assistant clerk of courts officiated at the hearing and issued the documents. On Saturday afternoon Miss Bradford was in Willimantic where she issued several first papers at a special session of naturalization.

A family row was argued out and settled in police court Saturday morning, when a husband had been arrested and haled into court on charges preferred against him by his wife. The nature of the allegation against the "head of the family" were that his conduct in the past few months was rocking and slowly crumbling the foundation of his home. A verbal battle between the defendant and the complainant ensued and the conflict of tongues was brought to a stop only by the incessant rapping for order by Judge M. H. Geissler. When the evidence had been presented Judge Geissler brought the stranged husband and wife to a compromise, placing the parties in the care of a probation officer for a period of six months.

Probation Officer Peter A. Gardner of police court was elected vice president of the State Probation association at a meeting of the organization held in New Haven last week. Officer Gardner attended the association convention returning to Putnam Friday morning. Mrs. Cortland D. Arnold, lady probation officer of city court was also present at the sessions.

A sizzling hot day that sent the mercury on a mad rampage to sky high marks Saturday drove hundreds to seek relief at the bathing resorts in this vicinity. Hundreds flocked to Roseland lake and enjoyed the cool refreshing lake breezes and the substantially lower degree of temperature there. A great many "kids" and many elders who were without the means of transportation to reach Roseland escaped the sweltering city heat and found comfort in the "Old Swimmin' Hole" at Harrisville, just over the city line. Magazine beach at Little River on the west side of the city proved to be a popular refuge for those who suffered from Saturday's tropical weather. Again today crowds swarmed to the bathing resorts when Old Sol poured his blazing hot rays down upon the city.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Donovan and family of Lyons street spent Sunday in Worcester.

Crashing head-on with any of the police department's silent traffic officers is no longer a pastime with thrill seeking drivers, but in reality is a misfortune, or at least it was to one who attempted to dismount the "dummy" at the intersection of South Main and Grove streets this morning. The driver in disregarding traffic regulations at this intersection attempted to topple the stately silent arm of the law by shaving the camouflaged base, which appears to be of wood but in reality is concrete and its weight over all exceeds 400 pounds. He was vanquished by the immovable arm of the law and excessive damages were caused to the vehicle. Several persons saw the act and as the car was able to proceed under its own power the driver disappeared in the direction of Danielson, failing to report the incident to the police. Capt. of Police William J. Jarvis dispatched a police alarm to the state police barracks at Danielson shortly after the clash between the car and the silent policeman and a checkup of the various garages in quest of the driver was made by the state police.

The health report submitted to the state health department Saturday by Health Officer Peter A. Gardner contained mention of but one case of chicken pox. No other cases of communicable diseases have been reported to Officer Gardner during the past two weeks.

The Brooklyn-Pomfret state highway now under construction is going through at a rapid pace. The road bed for the new thoroughfare has been cut out to the intersection of the Pomfret Landing and Willimantic highways. Gravel and crushed stone will constitute a foundation and the laying of an asphalt surface will complete the work. The contractors have been unusually fortunate that they have encountered no ledges in the path of construction such as were experienced in the Brooklyn-Danielson stretch of road last year. Favorable weather conditions of the past month have aided highly in speeding up construction.

An excursion train out of Worcester over the Norwich branch to New York departed at an early hour this morning for the metropolis carrying a number of local people who anticipated an all day sightseeing trip in New York.

Bert Bugbee of Walnut street returned Saturday from a two weeks' visit in Holyoke, Mass.

Guy Zito of Mechanics street plans to sail from New York next Monday for Naples, Italy, on an extended visit to his native land. Mr. Zito has been a resident of Putnam for about 25 years and has not been to his home land since his arrival in this country nearly thirty years ago.

The Boy Scout carnival held during the past week on the playgrounds of St. Mary's school and run under the auspices of St. Mary's Boy Scout organization came to a successful climax Saturday evening. The expected amount of money for the support of the organization was realized by the scout authorities.

COLUMBIA

Great excitement prevailed for a while early the other morning, when a Ford truck, with a gasoline tank mounted on it, which was used by the Arrigoni Co. to convey gasoline to their trucks at work, caught fire and burned. The truck had just been filled at the supply tanks located at the northern end of the state road on the Green, and caught fire from the back-fire of the engine when it was started. The truck is a total loss, as is also a large and beautiful tree under which it stood. The paint on the tanks was blistered with the heat, as was the side of the shanty standing near. The dense clouds of black smoke which poured up gave rise to the belief that a big fire was in progress, and men with buckets came from all directions, as is the custom in the case of fire in the country.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Going away for the summer? Going to close up the house and spend the next few months at the shore, or on a trip to Europe?

If you do this it will be only what a great many others are planning to do. It it the time of year when this is the common practice during short or long vacations, and every one needs some kind of vacation and change of environment.

But when you leave on a vacation, whether you go to the shore, to Europe, to the Pacific coast, to Canada or Kalamazoo and close up the house don't forget to bear in mind the timely advice of the humane society and other friends of animals and make provision for the animals that are left behind.

The cat or the dog that is left to shift for itself during the summer months faces a serious situation. Unless some provision for it is made it is grossly unfair to burden the neighbors with their care and it is the rankest kind of cruelty to suppose they are going to be able to get their living otherwise. Out of sympathy for the animals many a neighbor takes the responsibility of keeping them from starving, but it is a deplorable situation when cats and dogs make a neighborhood miserable by their cries of distress after being abandoned by those who have gone away for the summer, or in some cases when families have moved out of town.

Persons that are willing to enjoy the presence of a cat or dog when they want t, but are ready to turn the animals out without provision for their care when they want to go away ought never to have pets. Possibly some of the trouble can be charged up to thoughtlessness but in more instances it must be regarded as their attitude toward dumb animals and to their neighbors.

If animals cannot be taken there are always those who can be found who will be glad, for the sake of the animals if nothing else, to take care of them during the summer if the request is made. That with the provision of the expense is the least which animal owners can do at such a time.

FIRM ON RUSSIA.

It is inevitable that there should be speculation as to what President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald should talk about when the latter finds time to make a trip to this country. There are many things which might with propriety be discussed both with the idea of obtaining cooperation and with the view to getting a more intimate undertaking of what the other believes. And yet there is no assurance that either list of questions will be included in the programme. Thus there is bound to be speculation as to what will transpire.

When, however, it comes to creating the impression that the United States and Great Britain are going to join hands in the recognition of the soviet government of Russia there is slight foundation for it. Whether it will even be discussed is a question. The prime minister can hardly expect that this country is going to change its long standing attitude in regard to recognition. There is an opportunity for Russia to so change its position relative to the demands which were so finely set forth when Charles E. Hughes was secretary of state that this government can be encouraged to take a new view, but there is no possibility of it otherwise.

If it is expected that the United States and Great Britain will go hand in hand relative to the Russian policy, it will mean that the British will adopt the same policy that has been established by this country. The changing interest toward Russia, the trade relations and the stimulation of business have all come about through Russia's departure from the policies of other days. Russia hasn't gone the whole distance, however, and until it does there can be no receding from the stand which this government wisely took. This is believed regardless of what Premier MacDonald may say.

PENALTIES.

Indiana has a case of a man who was given a sentence of ten years in the penitentiary after he had been convicted of robbery, though the total amount of money he secured was only $2.

Here we find the highwayman working for small stakes. It is not to be presumed that he knew what he was going to get, or that he was aware that the man held up had only one of those unpopular bills, but that was all he got.

Was he overpunished? Some will say so and in support of their view will point to the cases of those who got away with much more and escaped with a smaller penalty. But the robber in Indiana had set his trap for bigger game. He was not an accidental highwayman. He was a man of 35 years, one who had apparently made a study of crime and who carried out all the details to perfection. He played the game to get all that was in it and he did, only it happened that there all wasn't much. It would have been just the same if the victim's pockets had been bulging with money. The fact that it happened to be a small instead of a large sum didn't change the crime.

In many states there has been an epidemic of holdups until it became apparent to the authorities and the courts that the time was ripe for making an example of more of such criminals. Laws have even been stiffened for that purpose. The need of making it unhealthy, penalty-wise, for highwaymen was properly recognized and the court in putting the robber away for ten years was doing its part. It was time. The man had been convicted of crime before. He had failed to learn his lesson. He was preying upon the public for whatever he could get, and whether he got little or much the offense was the same.

Getting what the law calls for in such cases is not always assured. That is perhaps why many of the criminally inclined think it is possible to get away with their acts and why they see such a future in crime. If they keep at it long enough they figure on reaching Easy street. For the protection of the public they deserve to be promptly and effectively discouraged. Those who persist in a career of crime are entitled to little sympathy when they get caught.

GOVERNMENT FINANCING.

In the government's recent offering of certificates of indebtedness to run for nine months at the rate of 5 1-8 per cent, there was a huge oversubscription. It was the highest rate that the government has paid for years, fixed in accord with money conditions, and therefore highly desirable considering the security.

These certificates were issued in accord with the plan that has been in operation for a considerable time in connection with the government's financing. It has been the government's practice to fix the rate for the borrowing, but the belief has developed that this might well be left to the money market and it has made such a strong impression that legislation has been sought and obtained to put it into use. Thus when the next financing is done it can be expected that bids will be asked for the certificates on a discount basis. This will mean that instead of a fixed interest rate those who want the certificates will make their offerings, indicating at what price they will take them at a discount and those who make the best offer from the government's standpoint will get the securities. This will open the way for competition for all government securities which mature in one year or less.

What has been sought and obtained by the treasury department is only what has been in use for some time by other governments. It can be appreciated that there are institutions always desirous of obtaining these securities. The new plan will cater to investment rivalry in this respect and in a way which should react to the advantage of the government. The new law does not make it obligatory on the part of the treasury department to use this method to the exclusion of the other, but permits it to do so when it is considered the advisable thing to do. Had it been employed in the last issue of certificates the government might have made a considerable saving.

RHINELAND OCCUPATION.

Although that was not the problem of the reparation conference, it was nevertheless made manifest that Germany is still chafing under the occupation of the Rhineland, and this in spite of the fact that the complete withdrawal of troops is not required under the Versailles treaty until 1935.

Troops are maintained in that region by allied nations as one of the means of keeping Germany mindful of its obligations in regard to the treaty terms. There are about 70,000 of these troops. Many of them have been called home. It has been a long time since the American troops in the army of occupation were recalled. Some of the soldiers now stationed at Mainz, Wiesbaden and Aschen will be relieved next year as a second zone is evacuated, and it would please Germany if they were all removed.

The Young plan hasn't as yet been ratified by the respective nations, but there is a feeling that it will be. It represents the present day attitude in regard to the World war adjustments and while it may in time be subjected to changes even as the Dawes plan has been, it displays a sentiment between the nations which makes it possible for Germany to urge the advisability of an earlier retirement of the allied soldiers than called for by the treaty.

Germany takes the view that as long as the financial question has been determined there is no longer any reason for holding off the complete evacuation of German territory. It is a question which at least gets sufficient recognition from the respective nations to cause the leaders to study the situation. Germany is pressing every opportunity to remove what it considers serious handicaps of the war, and it can be appreciated that it will be a happy day when the last of the allied soldiers take their departure and foreign forces no longer occupy German territory.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Steam vegetables, instead of boiling, whenever possible.

A little turpentine will soften the hardened shoe polish for further use.

For each cup of syrup used in making cookies, reduce the amount of liquid one-fourth.

Rub creaking hinges with a piece of soap to eliminate the noise. Oil might spoil the paint.

The outside of saucepans may be effectively scoured with a cloth dipped in fine wood ashes.

To effectively clean an iron sink, rub it well with a cloth wet with kerosene oil. Rinse with boiling water.

Avoid a high temperature when cooking eggs or egg dishes. Intense heat toughens egg whites.

When weather does not permit outside play, dress the child warmly and let him play in a room with all the windows open.

If you add some cloves or a few drops of carbolic acid to paste when it is opened, it will keep it from souring.

Roll sausages in flour before cooking and they will not turn themselves inside out in the manner of the contortionist.

Sliced beets, re-heated in vinegar sauce, are delicious served as garnishing and sauce to fried fish, such as halibut and salmon.

When baking powder is used for pastry, bake as quickly as possible after adding the moisture, as the powder soon loses its virtue.

Allow orange marmalade to cool slightly after cooking and stir before putting it in glasses. The peel will then remain evenly distributed instead of rising to the top.

After baking a squash or pumpkin pie never put it on a flat surface. Set it on a cake cooler. The bottom crust will the naiways be dry.

If boiled noodles are left, fry them slightly in hot drippings, or butter, then cover with croutons or fried crumbs and serve with liver and bacon or rabbit or as a main luncheon dish.

GOOD GRATE FUEL

When filling the sitting-room coal scuttle, prepare one or two sugar bags, filling them with dampened coal dust or very small coal. A few potato parings and tea leaves will help to bind it. Close the bags securely and they will provide good fuel for an open grate, burning brightly and making no mess.

CRISP ROLLS

When reheating rolls or biscuits, they will be crisp and nicely browned if you dip them quickly under the water faucet and pop the pan holding them into a very hot oven for a short time.

STEAK

When broiling steak in a gas oven, frequently the fat will catch fire. To prevent this, cover the bottom of the broiling pan with water. This will catch the fat from the steak and prevent its catching fire.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A witch hazel compress is very helpful in overcoming enlarged pores. If possible, take the treatment for a whole hour. When this is not practicable you may get good results from using the compresses for 15 minutes every day. Be sure the skin is clean before applying the witch hazel, however.

Any woman who neglects her personal appearance is displaying a symptom of something more seriously wrong. Just as does the driver of a dirty car, bedraggled hair, an unwashed neck, black-bordered fingernails, and spotted clothes do not necessarily mean ill health, but they indicate that something may be wrong in a person's mind or body.

The biggest obstacle in the path of the girl who longs for personal beauty is usually self-consciousness bred from the criticisms and unkind comments of thoughtless relatives and friends. Psychologists call this self-deprecatory state of mind an "inferiority complex." It makes a girl awkward in her movements, dowdy and generally uncomfortable, it paralyzes spontaneity, it warps personality. Those who are responsible for its development in another human being are guilty of one of the cruelist of crimes.

NEW FLOORINGS CLEANER

Composition floorings are particularly practical in the dining room for their smooth surfaces simplify the problem of sanitation.

Decorative value does not need to be sacrificed to secure this new aid to cleanliness for composition floorings have been developed to a point where they offer an attractive alternative to hard woods. Linoleums, cork composition and rubber tiles, are made in beautiful designs plain colors and marbleized effects, some of them scarcely distinguishable from tile or marble, all most pleasant under foot.

FOR STRAWBERRIES

There is a new way of serving strawberries in individual dishes. These are of pale green or rose cloudy glass with a gold rim. There is a small saucer and a tiny little cup which holds the sugar. The strawberries are arranged on the saucer surrounding the cup.

SAND VASES

If you have a hard time arranging pansies, violets, garden primroses and other short stemmed flowers, try filling a shallow bowl with sand, dampening it and sticking the flower stems into it. They will keep longer, if anything, than in water by itself. Add fresh water to sand daily.

KEEP BREAD CRUMBS

Place all leftover bread and cracker crumbs in a sack and keep near the oven. When the crumbs are dried they can be crushed with the fingers and be quickly used for escalloped mixtures or croquettes.

STOCKINGS

Stockings short in the feet cause almost as much trouble as that caused by short shoes. Get stockings half an inch longer than the feet to be sure of enough room for the toes.

DICTATES OF FASHION

A red kasha ensemble suit has a tuck-in blouse or red and white gingham with organdy collar and cuffs. The skirt's yoke is lined with the gingham.

The square neck, finished with overstitching in points in front and tying in the back, is good right now. One-sided necklines hold their own place in style.

Crocheted bands trim many smart new sports frocks, particularly when color is used on one of the near white or sunburnt or pastel shades so popular for resort wear.

A very clever hat is made of black and white felt with the material so arranged as to form large leaves whose tips meet at the top. The felt is perforated in a leaf design.

A new gray kasha tweed coat has a pointed back yoke from which a circular back hangs in pleats. This trend towards fullness in the back is growing.

The modernistic theme is pursued in a Parisian bag of black and white kid which is joined to form a triangular shaped purse. The clasp is of ivory.

Frocks for small girls are very much of the type worn by young women garbed for active sports, only the little skirts are worn quite above the dimpled knees.

The favorite tape bordered handkerchiefs are now reproduced in crepe de chine, and come in all the bright colors to harmonize or contrast with sport frocks.

Unusual little pieces of carved composition, which resembles jade, are used to slip through the ends of the new neckerchiefs and hold them in place upon the shoulder.

The sleeveless vogue is rather dominating the realm of sleeping garments where pajamas reign. Novelty cottons in small prints of florals and conics, as well as strips, make alluring little summer garments.

In Paris, say the latest reports, smart women are choosing white wool coats trimmed with brown fur for resort wear. The most attractive are of homespun or basket weave, with collars of beaver or nutria.

SNAKESKIN BAGS

There is a quality of smartness about snakeskin that makes it the choice of chic women for shoes and for bags. Several of the newest bags are very large and in shapes that give them a different and extremely interesting effect. Each is completely fitted with the necessary accessories.

BRAIDED BELTS

The belts that are worn with sweaters and tennis frocks are so varied that one can easily have a dozen without duplication. The smartest are very narrow, and are made of braided cord fastened with a metal buckle. And they come in every conceivable color and color combination.

FOR THE BEACH

This summer, small boys will wear over their one-piece bathing suits matching cardigan jacket. This makes an ensemble that may be worn straight through the entire day, whether playing on the beach or in the motor.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Don't put lingerie or fine linen through the wringer.

Fine steel wool will remove starch or rust from the iron.

To whiten clothes which have grown yellow add a tablespoon of turpentine and one of household ammonia to the boiling water, rinse thoroughly and dry in the open air.

Try to remove stains from clothes with clear cold water before washing with soap. Soap sets many stains.

Rayon, as well as other washable materials, will give better service if it is allowed to become embedded in its surface.

CLEANING THE WALLS.

Do you know there is a wrong and a right way to wash painted walls? If you want something to show for your labor of housecleaning, do this the right way and your walls will look like new.

The first important thing is to use as little water as possible. You will require three cloths, one wrung as dry as possible out of light soapsuds, another wrung out of clear water and the third should be a dry cloth.

Clean only a small portion at a time. With the first cloth rub up and down, and never in a circular motion. Rinse at once with second cloth and wipe thoroughly dry with the third. Badly soiled and stained spots may require a scouring powder. Use a fine scourer such as whiting and sprinkle this on the first cloth used. If your wall has been painted with a good oil paint this method of cleaning will leave no streaks.

Do not try to clean a kalsomined wall or ceiling, not even with a dry cloth, for you will only get a streaky finish.

CLOTHES LINE.

The best way to clean a wash line is to wrap it around the washboard and scrub it thoroughly with hot water and soap. Rinse it well before rehanging. If a new wash line is boiled for a few minutes in soapy water before being used, it will become softer and more durable.

Some housekeepers prefer a galvanized iron wash line for the heavier pieces of laundry. They are serviceable and easy to keep clean with a soap moistened cloth, but they must be supplemented by a rope line for thin materials. Care must also be taken to keep them free of rust spots.

CASTERS.

If you have casters on heavy furniture and linoleum on the floor take the precaution to place a piece of old carpet under the furniture when moving it, to prevent the casters from cutting into the linoleum. Glass or metal shoes are preferable to casters on linoleum floors, but even with these it is wise to use the underlay of carpet.

GLUE.

A glue that will effectually hold paper or cloth on metal, wood or glass is made by dissolving one tablespoon of gelatine in two tablespoons boiling water and after boiling a few seconds add a little sugar while it is still hot.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

The new president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, of Cincinnati, O., was the first president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Miss Eve Austin, an 18-year-old stenographer of Okmulgee, Okla., has quit her desk to become an airplane salesman. She has more than 50 hours of flying time to her credit.

Mlle. Fernande Coupin, noted French scientist, is conducting a series of experiments to determine the relation between the brains of monkeys and the brains of humans.

PRETTY TEA.

Russian tea looks very pretty when served in glasses if you use slices of lemon and a spoonful of either preserved strawberries or raspberries.

SPICED LIME.

Hot tea is good served with slices of lime instead of lemon, with each slice speared with a clove bud. Add a candied cherry as well.

RECIPES.

Strawberry Cream: Wash one quart of fresh berries, leaving out 12 or more for decoration. Sugar the rest of the fruit with about half a cup of sugar and let stand for several hours, then crush. Dissolve two tablespoons of granulated gelatin in two tablespoons of cold water for a few minutes, add three tablespoons of boiling water, stir over hot water until thoroughly dissolved, then cool, add the crushed fruit and juice, and when it begins to jell, fold in one pint of heavy cream, whipped stiff. Place in a glass bowl, decorate the top with whole berries and let stand in the refrigerator for two or more hours.

Stuffed Cherry Salad: Use very large canned red or white cherries. Chill them thoroughly, drain from the juice and remove the pits by cutting a small slit in each and squeezing gently. Stuff each cherry with salted filbert nut or a small piece of celery stuffed with peanut butter. Arrange about eight cherries for each serving on small crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with small balls of cream cheese that have been rolled in minced parsley, finely-chopped mint leaves or that have been sprinkled liberally with paprika and garnished with a small slice of stuffed olive. Serve with a cream dressing flavored with grated orange rind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Use of Taxpayers' Money.

Mr. Editor: I notice by the evening paper that the gas and electric department has taken the taxpayers' money to pay the dues of the general manager, his son and others in the chamber of commerce. If the chamber of commerce is to be supported by the taxpayers' money why have a drive for funds every year and why not have the chamber of commerce appropriation put in the budget and have things free and above board rather than covered up?

I would like to know if the employes of the gas and electric department all have their dues paid in the Taxpayers' association with the taxpayers' money as apparently this organization was packed at the meeting which was held recently for discussion of the gas and electric situation before any by-laws or any organization was made.

Monday night in the town hall the owners of the gas and electric plant will have some real truth as the operation and management.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

For instance, how are you to explain the fact that there were more than a score of men named Casey on the muster rolls of Massachusetts troops in the Revolutionary war, yet the 1790 census, the first census, spotted only six Caseys in that state?

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, specialist on the national origins idea of restricting immigration, told the senate that such confusing matters as this made the determination of the national origins of the American population as a whole extremely difficult.

"In those days men's names were spelled strangely," he said. "There were lots of people named Cassidy in the army. People of that name seem to get into armies. But Mr. Cassidy's name was spelled in 24 different ways.

The Cassidy Clan

"If it is argued that every one of those Cassidys was a different human being, we would get the preposterous result that as one Cassidy got out of Company A of such and such a regiment, another Cassidy was there on the same date to take his place. It must have been the same man."

That was interesting in connection with the immigration debate; but it caught the attention of Senator Overman of North Carolina for entirely different reasons. It is to be assumed that he has been bothered by constituents seeking to trace their family trees to Revolutionary warriors.

"Is that document (the Revolutionary muster roll) available for distribution?" Overman asked.

"I should advise the senator to take a truck if he is going to attempt to distribute it," Reed said. "It is an enormous compilation."

1,200 Years for Turks

Still another bit of information contributed by Reed was that Turkey has pending enough applications to enter the United States to exhaust her quota for 1,200 years. The quota is 100 and applications total 120,000.

Great Britain had 111,346 applicants waiting March 15, enough to exhaust even her increased national origins quota for nearly two years.

Germany's waiting list numbered 100,826, which would exhaust her quota under the 1890 census for two years or under the national origins quota for four years.

The demand in Greece for visas was 140 times as large as the quota, in Italy 78 times the quota, in Bulgaria 150 times the quota, in Austria 38 times the quota.

So it's easy to see why revision downward of any of these quotas is a highly controversial matter.

YOUR HEALTH

PERIODIC HEALTH EXAMINATIONS NECESSARY

By W. Calhoun Sterling, M. D., Washington, D. C.

Focal infections, i. e., diseased tonsils, abscessed teeth, inflammations of the nasal sinuses, and prostatitis constitute some of the most serious hazards with which the body has to contend. As a result of the research wokr done by men in this field, it has been definitely shown that poisons may be systematically introduced into the blood stream from these areas of focal infection. This poisoning of the blood stream, when extended over a considerable period of time, often results in manifestation of disease from the primary infection. Lymphatic tissue in the intestinal tract may also serve as a focus of infection. This was demonstrated very clearly in the case of a medical colleague, who contracted typhoid fever, and after a score of years had a diseased gall-bladder removed. Typhoid germs were found in the gall-bladder, having remained in the system over a large number of years. The kidneys, appendix, gall-bladder, joints, etc., are often found to be diseased as a result of infections that are primarily located in the teeth and tonsils. The heart may also become diseased as a result of toxins liberated from some distant point.

Systematic and periodic health examinations are very necessary if we wish to eradicate focal infections before irreparable damage occurs in the body. Patients frequently say that they have never had tonsilitis or any infections about the tonsils, yet virulent organisms can be recovered from the tonsil after removal, showing that it is impossible to say that the tonsil is healthy by a cursory examination.

Likewise, the X-ray may fail to detect enough bony destruction in a tooth to warrant a diagnosis of infection from this source, yet it has been clearly demonstrated that it is in the early stages of tooth destruction that we frequently get focal manifestation.

Not only is a periodic health examination advocated in the adolescent period, but also when one reaches middle age. It is at this time that we frequently find beginning evidence of some systematic disease. The heart, including blood pressure examination, the lungs, kidneys and other vital organs should be examined at least twice a year in order to detect any incipient disorder. This examination can best be made by the family physician, as he understands the patient's peculiarities and other personal habits, thus making him better able to advise the patient. Following this examination, if the family physician finds any serious ailments, co-operation with a specialist can be sought.

Sticker

Harry was spelling his way through the comic page when he suddenly looked up and inquired: "Daddy, what does 's-u-b-p-e-n-a' spell?

His father carefully analyzed the word and was explaining its derivation and meaning at some length when the lad interrupted with an understanding lift of the eyebrows and, "Oh, you mean a sticker!"

A Very Bad Cough

The quirks of modern language appeal to small children although the meaning sometimes is obscure in their little minds. Not long ago a friend, meeting a little girl and knowing her brother was complaining, asked:

"How is your brother?"

"He is not so well," responded the little miss. "He has the 'whoopee' cough."

ARCHITECTS NEEDED TO AID CITY PLANS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—More than 500 American cities have city planning commissions, says Charles H. Cheney, yet on only a few of the commissions are there any architects.

Mr. Cheney is chairman of the committee on city, community and regional planning of the American Institute of Architects.

He says that architects must act to stop "enormous economic losses resulting from lack of constructive city planning."

OBITUARY

Mrs. P. C. Wright

The death of Alice Eugenia McIntyre, beloved wife of Rev. Dr. P. C. Wright of Yonkers, N. Y., a former pastor of the Central Baptist church of this city, occurred Sunday evening a little before 9 o'clock at the Backus hospital where she had been a patient for about a week, having suffered a cerebral hemorrhage ten days ago, while visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard at Gales Ferry.

Immediately following the attack, which was severe from the first, Rev. Dr. Wright and three sons, Birchard, Stuart M., and Harmon M., came here and have been in constant attendance at the hospital during Mrs. Wright's illness. Another son, Charles Eugene, will arrive here this (Monday) morning from Milwaukee.

Mrs. Wright was born, Dec. 15, 1873, at Waldo, Wisconsin, and was united in marriage there with Mr. Wright on June 25, 1895. Dr. and Mrs. Wright became residents of this city in 1902, when he accepted the call to the pastorate of the Central Baptist church, his first service in the ministry. This pastorate continued till 1913, with the congregation holding the pastor and his wife in deepest love and esteem. Gracious in manner and unselfish in disposition, Mrs. Wright had a great capacity for friendship and for leadership which brought her into a peculiarly affectionate relation with the congregations of the churches where her husband was pastor, which included Gethsemane Baptist church in Philadelphia and Asylum avenue Baptist church in Hartford, after leaving Norwich. Outside of her participation in church work her devotion was given to her home where her influence was an abiding inspiration towards the finest things in life.

Besides her husband, who is associated with the ministers and missionaries benefit board of the Northern Baptist convention, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Eugene McIntyre of Plymouth, Wis., by four sons, Charles Eugene of Milwaukee, Wis., Birchard M., of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., Stuart M. of New York city, and Harmon M., of Yonkers; by a sister, Mrs. Charles A. Wright of Delavan, Wis., and by three brothers, Harmon L. McIntyre of Seattle, Wash., Eugene L. McIntyre and Frank D. McIntyre of Milwaukee.

77 BOYS AND GIRLS GRADUATE FROM TWO PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

Graduation exercises for the senior classes at St. Patrick's and St. Mary's parochial schools were held Sunday morning at the two churches, with 77 boys and girls receiving their diplomas.

At St. Patrick's Church

Commencement exercises for St. Patrick's school began with the 7:30 mass Sunday, when the members of the graduating class received holy communion in a body from the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Henry May, S. T. B., and his assistant, Rev. Myles Paul Galvin. Monsignor May delivered the sermon, choosing his text from the gospel for the fourth Sunday after Pentecost which he had read, Luke 5, 1-11, narrating the miracle of the great draught of fishes.

The formal graduating exercises followed the mass at 10:30, a large congregation assembling. Low mass was read by Rev. Father Galvin. In deference to the rector, the Altar society had adorned the three marble altars and the shrines with roses and peonies in monsignor red and white. The class, numbering 37, moved to reserved pews as the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine played the processional march. The seventh and eighth grade pupils sang a hymn, "To Our Lady of Good Counsel."

"Veni Creator" was beautifully sung by Roderick F. Sullivan, before Rev. John Joseph Reilly, the junior assistant pastor, entered the pulpit. Father Reilly, whose eloquence never fails to impress his hearers, took his text from the book of Kings, "Give her the living child, She is the mother thereof."

Lightly but effectively he refuted the complaint of the present era that the Roman Catholic church is at best but a meddler, disturbing complacency by her teaching, her doctrines, her insistence on obedience to authority. The church, he declared, first showed herself a meddler when her Founder, Christ, refusing to remain content, happy and at ease with his ninety and nine sheep, went out into the desert to bring back one.

Conscious of her responsibility, she bids you graduates come today into the presence of Christ Himself, to draw the veil upon your parochial school life and to look from her out into the years that are yet unborn. It is altogether fitting that she should do this; here she welcomed you a tender age in baptism, here she gave you the Bread of Life, and here she will receive you in years to come, stiff and old and rigid, when she will sing your requiem. So now at a crisis in your lives she bids you come to taste again of spiritual things, to imbibe again of the supernatural strength which she ears you may well have need of. At this commencement she urges that you keep before you the habits and the virtues and the practices which the Sisters' school has burned into your hearts. The next few years will not be spent in surroundings so favorable to your spiritual growth. There will be agencies at work to undermine the stout foundation that has been given you, to tear up the roots of virtue, purity and self-restraint that have been imbedded in your soul.

The greatest problem facing the world today is the revolt of modern youth, brought about by the vanity and selfishness of children, the leniency and foolishness of parents. The church impresses daily on the child in the parochial school the necessity of sacrifice, self-restraint, and humility, to bring contentment and satisfaction in this world and eternal happiness in the next.

Father Reilly's impressive charge was "Love your God and crush out selfishness. See in all authority the voice and gesture of your God. Keep close to Christ by frequent communion. In all things remember your last end. Give yourself to Christ today—and never take back the gift. May God then, with this intention in your hearts, take you to Himself on this, your graduation day."

The seventh and eighth grade pupils sang "Sweet Saviour, Bless Us Ere We Go," after which Monsignor May conferred the diplomas and addressed the graduates who had assembled within the sanctuary, to listen with deepest attention to his sage and earnest words of advice. He bestowed the gold prize for excellence in United States history on Kathryn Mary Coleman; this prize is offered annually by Mercier Assembly, Ladies of Columbus, of Norwich. Special prizes offered by the united branches of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Norwich for essays on "Amercia's Debt to the Nursing Sisters," were awarded in the eighth grade to Alice Mary McGarry and in the seventh to Malcolm McKeag.

Following an act of consecration by the graduates, Monsignor May gave Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, during which "O Salutaris Hostia" was sung most impressively by Horace F. Corning. In "Divine Praises," given by the senior choir, the phrase extolling Saint Joseph, foster-father of Christ, was a magnificent bit of unaccompanied singing by Henry J. LaFontaine.

At the end of the mass the class marched to the steps of the main entrance to the church, where they were photographed, with their school superintendent, Monsignor May.

The girls were dressed with pleasing uniformity in white frocks and close white hats, and the boys had black suits.

The roll of honor included: Kathryn Mary Coleman, Alice Mary McGarry, Geraldine Julia O'Neil, John G. Fanning, Jeremiah Joseph Mahoney, Gabriella Ruth Dion, John Joseph Galande, Adeline Janet Gernhard, Madeline Esther Kearney, Anna Marie Hinchey.

The class officers are: Mildred Rose Blanchette, William Benjamin Dynon, Mary Catherine Ruelilo. Chosen as the class patroness was Saint Therese, the Little Flower. The class colors were Monsignor red and white and the class motto is "Build for Character, not for Fame."

The graduation exercises of St. Mary's school were held at the 10.30 mass at St. Mary's Memorial church, the mass being celebrated by Rev. F. M. Coholan, principal of the school. The graduates numbering 40, of whom 23 were boys and 17 girls, met in the assembly hall and marched into the church to their seats as the organist, Mrs. M. J. Farrell, played a march. The class colors of red and white were worn and the altar decorations were of red roses.

The sermon to the graduates was by the rector, Rev. W. A. Keefe, who congratulated the class members upon their success in their studies in the grammar grades and urged them to seek further education, of conditions permitted, but never to lose sight of the fact that matters of the soul were of more consequence to them than matters of the mind. He assured them of success in life if soul and mind worked in harmony.

The graduates received their diplomas at the altar rail from Rev. Fr. Coholan. A feature of the program numbers was the singing of the hymns, indicating the special study in music in the school work. The class patron was the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and the class motto, "He hath done all things well."

Alumni of the school who acted as ushers were Daniel Driscoll, '25, Cornelius Leary '26, John Barry '26, John Cotter '27, while Raymond Downes '28 and John Lyons '28 distributed programs.

LOADED STOLEN COLCHESTER AUTOMOBILES WITH LOOT

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, June 16. — Sometime between one and four o'clock this morning, thieves broke into the Arthur H. Chapman and the Hyman London garages in the center of the village and after securing an expensive automobile at each place broke into Cohen Bros. dress factory on Norwich avenue, where the stolen cars were filled with about 1,000 dresses and nearly 3,000 yards of piece goods.

The burglary was first discovered by Charles Levy, local summer hotel proprietor who was driving past the London garage about 4 a. m. headed toward New London to meet some boarders arriving on the New York boat. He notified Mr. London and it was found that a 1926 Hudson brougham, belonging to London had been stolen. Several tires and other accessories were thought to have been taken. The state police at the Groton barracks were immediately notified and a state-wide net was set for the thieves.

It subsequently developed that the Arthur H. Chapman garage at the corner of Norwich avenue and Main street had also been entered. A brand new 1929 Dodge sport coupe was stolen from the show room and about $75 was taken from the cash register. The new Dodge car had been driven only five hundred miles. Entrance to the garage was made by removing the steel hasps from the front door.

A short while after the state police were notified, word was received here that Policeman Anderson, familiarly known as "the lone wolf" had stopped a Hudson brougham on the outskirts of Darien, which matched the description of one of the stolen cars. Five hundred of the thousand stolen dresses were found in the car, and the driver is reported to be in the custody of state police from Groton barracks. At a late hour, this afternoon, no trace had been reported here concerning Chapman's new Dodge coupe. It is thought that the two cars were travelling together toward New York state.

CHARGED WITH DRIVING UNDER LIQUOR INFLUENCE

H. Forand of No. 26 Sixth street will appear in Lisbon town court before Justice of the Peace Walter Drew on the charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, as the result of an accident late Saturday afternoon on the Jewett City river highway. A Studebaker machine, driven by him, struck and badly damaged a Chrysler sport runabout operated by "Bud" Jodoin of Jewett City near the Chenette's ice house. It is said that Mr. Jodoin endeavored to stear clear of Forand's machine, but was unable to and as a result a running board and two fenders of his machine were damaged. Forand was arrested by State Police Officer Strand of the Danielson barracks.

TROLLEY AND AUTO CRASH AT PARK CHURCH CORNER

After a collision late Sunday afternoon at Park church corner between a trolley car and an automobile, a reckless driving charge was made against the driver of the machine, William Otis Sparks, 17 Summer street, Westfield, Mass., and he is to appear in the city court here on Wednesday morning. He gave a cash bond for his appearance in court.

Sparks was on his way home from a fishing trip at Westerly. He had three other young men with him in the machine, and as the automobile reached the corner a trolley operated by Charles Anderson approached from the direction of Washington street. In an attempt to avoid hitting the trolley, Sparks swung his machine sharply to the right and the trolley car struck the sedan body, putting a dent in it near the top on the left rear corner and denting the left rear mudguard.

Officer William Ryan, who was in sight of the accident, accompanied the automobile party to police headquarters, where Sparks gave bonds.

FISH CHANGES COLOR WITH TINY TASSELS

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y. (AP)—There is a hint for futurist modistes in the simple, easy method whereby some fish change their colors.

These color ampendages, belonging to the red grouper, are shown at the exhibition here of the Carnegie institution in celebration of its first 25 years of research. Over sandy ocean bottom the grouper is yellow, but over other bottoms it shows red patches of camouflage.

The colors are made by tiny threads which spread to form a fairly round patch, like a groun of roots. When gathered into a small knot they scarcely show, and the grouper has the power of extending or knotting them at will.

Blind groupers do not change colors with the bottom, indicating that the fish uses the protective color changes by choice.

SUGGESTS HIGHWAYS OVER CITY RAILWAYS

CHICAGO (AP)—A plan to build motor highways above railways radiating from downtown Chicago has been proposed to relieve traffic congestion on outbound streets.

The project calls for roadways over the tracks of the Illinois Central, Chicago and North Western and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy companies.

Legislation in Chicago and Illinois has provided for "air rights" leases, a procedure that would be necessary before the overhead roadways could be built. Both the Chicago and North Western and Illinois Central have negotiated leases of "air rights."

FRANCE RE-ESTABLISHES PRIORITY OF MAIN ROADS

PARIS (AP) — Priority of main highways over small roads is to be reestablished.

Endless criticism followed the government's adoption of the rule that the driver coming from the right always had the right of way. Many additional accidents were charged against the rule.

Priority on the larger road, however, will be effective only gradually, as each road is marked. The first high speed lane to return to the old order of things will be the Paris-Deauville road, much of which is like a city boulevard. There is more speeding on it in the summer than on any other long stretch in France.

SCIENCE BEARS OUT TALMUD DOCTRINES

NEW YORK (AP)—Some commandments of the ancient Jewish Talmud in line with modern eugenic principles are reported by William Grossman, Hebraic scholar of Passaic, N. J., to the American Eugenics society.

One says that two very tall or very short persons should not marry, lest their children be abnormally tall or short. For a similar reason marriage was discouraged between blonds or between dark persons. Marriage was forbidden into an epileptic family. Marriage for persons of families manifesting continuous antagonism to each other was advised against.

ARTIST CONVERTS SILO INTO MODERN STUDIO

CRANSTON, R. I. —(AP)— From ensilage to art is the transition of an old Rhode Island silo under the hands of Eric Mangussen, Danish artist and silversmith.

The silo, a 50-foot circular affairy has a battlement effect around the top to distinguish it from other farm buildings, and is connected with the artist's house by a passageway. Within the tower, a circular floor has been laid half into the roof. A winding staircase connects the two floors.

Mr. Mangussen has decorated the wall in a series of panels of modern life. Traffic officers, hurrying people, tall buildings and nodding trees brighten the interior of this novel studio. It was conceived in the manner of the famous tower of Copenhagen.

NORWICH FIREMEN WITH INHALATOR SAVE GIRL FROM DROWNING DEATH

Artificial respiration applied efficiently and quickly by members of the Norwich fire department and others saved the life of Shonis Mitchell, a 14-year-old gypsy girl, who had fallen into the Quinebaug river about 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon and was overcome. The girl, is a member of the "Dick" Mitchell band of gypsies, numbering between 25 and 30 and hailing from Maine, who were camping out on property of the Eastern Connecticut Power company near the Shetucket sliding, just above Remick's gasoline station, on the Jewett City river highway. Their tents were set up on land between the highway and river.

The girl had gone to the river in company with a number of other gypsy children, it is said, and was paddling in the water, which was not more than two feet in depth along the shore. How the accident really happened could not be learned, but it is believed that she was thrown off balance by stepping on a slippery rock and was pitched into the river. She was fully dressed but was barefooted. Taking the child from the river Maxime Brokowski of this city and a number of other men immediately set to work and applied artificial respiration. In the meantime a call was sent into the Norwich fire department for the inhalator, which was rushed to the scene by Squad A and Deputy Chief Dennis J. Brennan. The call was received at 3:12 o'clock.

Patrick Coleman, a member of Engine No. 3 of the Norwich fire department, who was off duty and out riding, was attracted by loud shouting and investigating found the men engaged in an effort to revive the girl. He being more experienced in this line of work laid to and on the arrival of his fellow workers the girl was showing signs of coming to and was breathing more naturally. With the additional efforts of Forrest Lewis, Thomas Kearney and the deputy chief the girl was revived, but only after a tough tussle, as the workers were handicapped, in that she was continuously struggling.

In an effort to suppress this struggling the inhalator was used for a time and this did the trick. After an hour's work by the department members the girl fully recovered, was covered with blankets in order that she might not become chilled and Dr. George H. Jennings, of Jewett City, who was also called, examined her and gave her restoratives.

While the men were working over the girl the entire band kept up a continuous chant, a prayer offered for her recovery. They were especially profuse with their thanks for the expert work of the department members, and especially to Mr. Coleman, who received the heartfelt thanks of one of the aged women, who was said to be 105 years of age.

DUSTY LEAGUE CUT TO SIX TEAMS AS FINISHING CO. CLUB WITHDRAWS

Because the U. S. Finishing company is working overtime and the employes do not get out of work until seven o'clock at night, it was found necessary to withdraw the baseball team representing that club from the Norwich Industrial league which opens next Wednesday night. With the withdrawal of the finishing company from the league it was decided that it would be better to reduce the league to six teams rather than try to run along with seven clubs. The board of governors of the league held a meeting and decided that as the Sachems was the last club to come into the league they would be the logical ones to drop out of the loop.

It is with regret that the governors take this step but endeavor will be made to place the Sachem players with other clubs in the league as openings occur. A six team league is much easier to handle than the more cumbersome eight team circuit. The schedule will be revised to fit the six team loop.

With the dropping out of the two clubs it has been decided to play all games at the Academy campus this season and not use the Hollyhock Island diamond as first planned. So there will be only one Dusty league game a night instead of two. The teams now in the league are the Y. M. C. A., Richmond Radiator Co., International Silver, Polish Citizens, Smoke Shop, and the Thermos Bottle Co.

The league opens Wednesday evening, June 19, at the Academy campus with the Y. M. C. A. clashing with the Richmonds in the opening encounter. On Thursday evening the Polish Citizens clash with the Smoke Shop. The schedule for the following week is as follows:

Monday—Thermos vs. Int. Silver.

Tuesday—Y. M. C. A. vs Polish Citizens.

Wednesday—Richmond vs. Smoke Shop.

Thursday—Y. M. C. A. vs. Thermos.

A complete schedule will be published at a later date.

BRAVES GIVE CARDS SETBACK, TAKING TWO GAMES

ST. LOUIS, June 16—(AP)—The lowly Boston Braves took both games of a double header from St. Louis today, 9 to 8 and 6 to 5, but failed to drop the Cardinals out of first place as Chicago lost and Pittsburgh split a double header.

In each game the Braves won by stopping a Cardinal rally in the ninth inning, when one run would have tied the count. Although the Cards collected 17 hits in the first game, they were stopped at critical moments while Boston bunched hits to win. The Braves outbatted and outplayed the National league champions in the nightcap, driving Jess Haines from the box in the seventh. Score:

JUNIOR LEAGUE GAME AT MARTIN DIAMOND TONIGHT

The Junior League swings into its second week of play tonight at the J. B. Martin grounds, Taftville. As a courtesy to the Taftville Legion team, champs of 1928, the officials of the circuit decided at the last minute to shift the scheduled Legion-Y. M. C. A. game to the village diamond, so as to give the former an opportunity to work before a home crowd. This will be the first league appearance of the champs at Taftville since the circuit was organized last year.

During the week the teams of the league will make a sort of circuit of the diamonds of the city and vicinity. Tuesday night the scheduled Rotary-Baltic game will be played at either the Academy campus or at Hollyhock Island and on Wednesday the league will finally land back in its home field, the Duwell field. The latter place is being fixed up and is expected to be in playing condition for Wednesday.

The Y. M. C. A. and Elks team will open at the Duwell field Wednesday and on Thursday the first real big game of the year between the Elks and Taftville Legionnaires, favorites to win this year's chase will take place.

Tonight's game will be played by two undefeated teams. It will be remembered that last week the Legion opened its season by swamping the Duwells and the Y upset the proverbial dope by spilling the fast Baltic team. Both clubs were very strong in their debut and should put on a real close game this evening. The lineups for tonight's game are: Taftville, Navick ss, Murphy 1b, Breen 3b, Fontaine c, Martin 2b, Sydio lf, Carter cf, Abugle p, Chicken or Dugan rf. Y. M. C. A.: Hastings 3b, Stephens c, Johnson 1b, Butkewicz ss, Hartnett 2b, Lyons cf, Coles lf, Golembewski rf, Russillo p.

NEW YORK, June 16—(AP)—Charles Leonard, secretary and treasurer of the Pittsburgh Hockey club and brother of Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight chamion, died of Bright's Disease today at his West End avenue home.

He was born in New York city and had been Benny's manager in various theatrical activities and was his business partner in several enterprises.

Besides the boxer and his mother, Leonard is survived by his father, George Leonard, and three other brothers, Willie, Murray and Joe.

MEYER DECLARED WINNER OF ALTOONA RACE

ALTOONA, Pa., June 16.—(AP)—Lou Meyer today was officially declared winner of yesterday's automobile race at Tipton bowl here by officials of the American Automobile association. Ray Keech, who was killed in a smash-up in the 121st lap had been designated the winner previously.

The ruling is subject to the approval of the national contest board of the A. A. A. The drivers in the race were given 24 hours to file a protest. It was reported that a protest will be filed.

In announcing winners yesterday, it was pointed out, officials failed to consult rules under which the race was run. The original announcement gave Keech first place; Meyer, second, and Cliff Woodbury, who was injured, third. This was the order in which the men stood at the time of the accident.

A. A. A. officials, however, ruled the race did not end until the drivers not involved in the crack up were flagged down in the 121st lap when the outer guard rail along the track began collapsing.

The accident in which Keech was killed and Woodbury injured occurred as Robinson's red racer, traveling 119 miles an hour, struck a hole in the boards, shot to the top of the saucer, hit the guard rail, poised momentarily and then slid backwards into the infield. Robinson escaped injury.

Keech, traveling at terrific speed, veered slightly to avoid hitting Robinson's car. One of the tires struck an uneven spot in the track and the machine was deflected further by the wreckage of a guard rail. The car overturned, rolled down the bowl and crushed Keech beneath it. The machine burst into flames and burning gasoline spread over the track. Triplett's racer ploughed into the mass of broken wood, careened to the top of the track and slid back into the infield. Triplett was not hurt. Woodbury's mount buckled against the wrecked rail and toppled to the infield. He was taken to a hospital.

Keech was the third racer to end his career on the Altoona speedway, "Howdy" Wilcox and Joe Boyer preceding him.

J. B. MARTIN CLUB TAKES SLOW GAME FROM FIRESTONE

The J. B. Martin team took a slow and uninteresting game from the Firestone team of New Bedford 12 to 3 Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin diamond. The Firestone team was unable to solve the pitching of Russ Fisher who kept the hits well scattered. On the other hand the J. B. Martin club found no difficulty in touching up Blackburn for 13 hits which together with loose fielding on the part of the Firestone team gave the Velvetmen a large lead. The Velvetmen scored heavily in the seventh and right then and there sewed up the game. The Martin attack was led by Jimmy Murphy with a home run and a triple. The score:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 16—(AP)—A sensational diving catch by Charley Jamieson, Cleveland outfielder, of Bishop's liner with the bases full and two out in the ninth inning, enabled the Indians to nose out the Athletics in a slugger's battle here today, 10 to 9.

Didja have a pleasant week end?

Well, I'm glad of that, so did I. My but wasn't it terribly warm and very difficult to keep cool.

Don't you just adore picnics? Aren't they the grandest things ever? Whoever invented this form of pleasure must have had a mental upheaval or was dropped when an infant.

Can you imagine anybody, in this age of comfort, sweltering in a kitchen for several hours preparing a lunch and then packing it in old shoeboxes and carting it several miles into the woods, when they could serve it on the dining room table?

You decide your going to have a picnic. One wants to go one place and someone else another. Finally you come to an agreement with other members of the family and you start out.

If you drive too fast the food gets all shaken up and if you drive too slow the darned stuff gets stale. No matter how you drive the food ain't going to taste like it does at home.

Of course if you drive far enough you will be so hungry that you don't care what it looks like or how it tastes just so long as it fills you up. Then you arrive at the place.

You unpack the feast. You find you have left the spoons and forks at home and you either use a couple sticks or your fingers. The salt and pepper has been forgotten and the coffee and milk is sour.

If you are at the beach the food's all full of sand and if you go to the woods it's full of ants and insects. Either place has its drawbacks.

Then you proceed to stuff yourself and with things you'd never dream of eating except at a picnic and the result is a nice attack of indigestion and you've forgotten the soda mints along with the knives and forks.

After everybody has had their fill you find that you've got enough left over for another picnic. It's ten to one you finish what's left at home before you go to bed.

You cuss and vow that it is your last picnic but you'll be out again the next Sunday. And why? Nobody knows.

Say folks, didja know that aspirin was good for vaccination? I didn't, but Gov. Sullivan of the Smoke Shop gang recommends it and is using it.

POLISH CITS DOWN FITCHVILLE FOR 2ND TIME

The Polish Citizens continued on their winning ways, bagging their fifth straight win of the year Sunday afternoon at Fitchville by a 4 to 3 score. The Fitchville club gave them probably their sternest tussle of the season but a three-run rally in the ninth pulled the game from the fire for the Cits.

It was a hurling duel between Stankowicz and Hall with the former having slightly the better of the argument. Leo Hamil led the winners at bat with a double and two singles in four trips to the plate while Franasky had three singles in five trips. Kozersky had a double and a single for Fitchville.

Hall, Fitchville pitcher, had 12 assists. Score:

Jenny Finds a Queer Insect

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Every day brings something new;
If not to me, perhaps to you.
—Jenny Wren.

Hungry babies require a great deal of food, and this is especially true of hungry bird babies. You see, bird babies have to grow very fast. They sometimes eat more than their own weight in food in a day. So that means that while they are tiny and helpless Mother and Father must work very hard to get food enough for them.

Did you ever stop to think how simple the matter of getting food is for us humans? We just go out and buy it. We know just where to go for it. But it is very different with the bird people and the animal people. They not only have got to go get it and bring it home for their babies, but they have got to hunt for it before they can get it. Now, in Jenny Wren's nest in the clothespin bag hanging in the shed back of Farmer Brown's house were six hungry mouths. So there were three apiece for Jenny and Mr. Wren.

It is well that the Wrens have sharp eyes. If they didn't have, I am afraid it would be impossible for them to find food enough to feed the big families they raise every year. Jenny Wren long ago learned that bugs and worms and insects are found in all sorts of places. This is how it happened that she was searching inside the shed where her nest was. She had discovered that there were spiders in there, and spiders are very good eating for those who like them. So every day she made a thorough search of the woodshed, hopping about over the neatly piled stovewood, peering and poking into every corner and crevice.

So it was that one morning she happened to discover a queer insect. At least, he was queer to Jenny. His body was made up of many little parts joined together, called segments. He had long legs and there were fifteen pairs of them! Jenny hadn't the slightest idea who this queer fellow was, or what family he belonged to. Actually, he was a Centipede, one known as the House Centipede, because he is often found in houses. But Jenny's only interest in him was as a supply of food for hungry babies. So she darted at him just as he was disappearing in a crack.

Much to Jenny's disgust, she was just a trifle too late. All she got was one of the Centipede's legs—one of those long legs. Of course, a leg was of no use to her, so she dropped it. She peered into the crack where the Centipede had disappeared. She hoped she might be able to get her bill in there and pull him out. But the Centipede had disappeared and Jenny knew that it was a waste of time for her to wait around for him to come out again.

"I'll probably have a chance to catch him some other day," said she. "I'll just keep an eye on this crack over here. I'll get more than a leg next time or my name isn't Jenny Wren! Hello, what's that? It sounds to me as if there is an insect of some sort chirping around here."

She cocked her head on one side to listen. She could hear a faint squeak, like the sound o fsome small insect. There was no question about it. Her bright eyes ran over everything about her. They studied the place where the squeak seemed to come from. Not a living thing was to be seen anywhere, not even a little red ant. Nothing moved excepting that leg from the Centipede. That lay just where she had thrown it and it kept twitching. Jenny had seen too many legs twitch to be interested in that. All she was interested in was getting something quickly to feed those hungry babies over in the nest. But though she quickly hunted all around she couldn't find that chirping insect.

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY UNUSUALLY ACTIVE FOR THIS TIME OF THE YEAR

NEW YORK, June 16—(AP)—Business and industry approached the end of the second quarter of the year last week, with such extraordinary vitality for this time of year that a more active third quarter than last year's was generally regarded as assured.

Some seasonal slackening is expected, but the moderate decline in unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, during May, as reported last week, indicates that this basic industry will continue operations at a high level for several weeks, at least. U. S. Steel's unfilled orders declined only about 123,000 tons, in contrast to early estimates of a decr of 150,000 to 200,000 tons. This moderate decline was despite record May shipments.

Steel mills felt another slight falling off in demand from the automobile industry during the week, but demands from other quarters held up well, and mills continued to produce at practical capacity. It was reported that automobile stocks in dealers hands were growing slightly, and a substantial decline in production appeared in the offing, although here too, a more active third quarter than during 1928, is generally looked for.

The widely forecast money pinch during June has failed to develop, and commercial paper has held at six per cent. Money was but slightly tighter at New York last week, call loans rising to 8 per cent. for a time, but returning to 7 late in the week. Some stringency is expected during the remainder of June, but bankers generally are looking for marked improvement early in July. The decline in stock market activity during the past week to around the low levels of last August, was regarded as a favorable development.

The federal reserve board in its monthly bulletin said that high money rates had had a restraining influence on the volume of bank credit, but that there had been no general slowing of business activity. Building operations, however, continued to lag behind 1928. F. W. Dodge corporation reported that total building contracts let during May in the states east of the Rockies, dropped 9 per cent. below April, and 12 per cent. below May, 1928. Some slowing down was noted last week in lumber and cement businesses. Total amount of building permits issued during May, however, was somewhat above May, 1928.

Retail sales were helped last week by warm weather, and distribution generally was maintained at a high level. Loadings of revenue freight for the week ended June 1, was reported as slightly below the 1,000,000 car mark for the first time in two months.

The copper industry was cheered by the increase of only about 17,000 tons in stocks during May, despite the slump in buying, and while foreign buying has failed to appear in any volume as yet as result of the reparations settlement, prices held firm at 18 cents domestic and 18.30 cents foreign delivery to the end of August, and consumers stocks were said to be running low.

The petroleum industry remained optimistic over the prospect of controlling production although the governors' conference at Colorado Springs failed to achieve tangible results.

Grain prices flutuated irregularly, as result of the much course taken by the farm relief measure through congress. Estimates of large yields were rather disappointing and were regarded as precluding any marked improvement in grain prices this year. With good prices for livestock, however, it was estimated that agricultural income this year would approximate that of last. Hide prices improved further.

A surprising development was the showing of May foreign trade figures, with an unfavorable trade balance of $14,000,000, the first unfavorable balance reported in three years. In a large measure, however, this appeared to have resulted from an earlier than usual export movement of cotton and a rush to import sugar before a higher tariff becomes effective.

The insolvency record for the week showed little change, R. G. Dun and company reporting 426 failures, compared to 423 last week and 441 in the like week last year.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

Tule Jewels

Like rubies flaming in the morning sun,
Lightly, dew-pearled, in my pale palm they rest—
Rich trophies plucked from fields but recent won
From wastes where wandering wild fowl used to nest.

They grew mid music of a glorious choir—
The meadow-lark's sweet harmony of song,
Summer's antiphonal of wind and fire,
And chants that labor's lusty lungs prolong.

Rhine's terraced vineyards or Spain's finest grove
No choicer riches than these ever hold;
More useful they than India's treasure trove,
Golconda's gems or Klondyke's gleaming gold.

Aye, truly may man rear his dream-wrought towers,
Regild with poet'sfancy fair demesnes,
When he has vigor gained for toil-filled hours
From magic stored within these jeweled beans.

—Oscar H. Roesner.

The Return

He is coming—
K'an-men-ti, open the gate;

Even I am a gateway
Into a chiming garden.

Even I am a garden
In the shadow of a pagoda.

Even I am a pagoda,
Hung with swinging bells.

Even I am a bell
Rung by the joyous wind.

Even I am the wind
Stilled at his coming—

K'an-men-ti, open the gate.

—Jeannette Searight, in Christian Science Monitor.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES

It is about middle spring that the rose-breasted grosbeak returns to us from the south, to remain throughout the summer months. The male is black and white and has rose colored spots on his breast and under each wing. He attains this full bright color by the second week in May. The beak is white. The male is a sweet singer, his song having been called a warble, but it is too enthusiastic and staccato for such description. The voice resembles somewhat that of the robin but it is more musical and is of the very highest type.

There is no mistaking the bright colors of the male but one may mistake the female for a sparrow, since she resembles that bird except that she is larger than the sparrow. There surely is no resemblance between the male and female grosbeak. A white stripe over the eye, which is quite prominent, may help to identify the female. The beak is a heavy brown.

In winter the grosbeak takes up its residence in the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America, but as spring approaches it longs to return to the northern home. Migration takes place during the night with the birds flying great distances at one time. Its summer home is usually north of central Ohio but may be in many other places from east to west. It is one of the late arrivals.

The nest of the grosbeak is a frail, bulky affair constructed of weeds, twigs and rootlets, and is placed in bushes or trees from five to twenty feet from the ground. Often the grosbeak builds in swampy places and in thickets. Usually there are four eggs which are pale green, profusely specked with brown. Both birds incubate, the male taking his turn on the nest with the mate.

Like nearly all other birds, the grosbeak is very useful to man, especially to the gardener and farmer. It is decidedly insectivorous and destroys great numbers of injurious insects, especially those harmful to fruit and shade trees. It is also fond of the weevil, which is a most persistent and pernicious enemy of garden plants and farm crops. Inspection of the stomachs of these birds revealed that the food was about equally divided between vegetable and animal. A quantity of grain and garden peas was found which was very small compared with the number of insects destroyed. The grosbeak eats wild fruit but for some reason does not bother cultivated fruit. The fact that it is so fond of the Colorado potato beetle and destroys so many of the larvae should be sufficient justification for loss of the little garden supplies and grain. This bird has been known completely to rid potato patches of this great pest. To the fruit grower it is of great value because it destroys the caterpillars and borers so injurious to fruit and shade trees, and because it feeds extensively on scale-insects and plant-lice. The grosbeak, or any other bird which destroys so many pests, should be encouraged to live near one's home and should be offered every protection.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

Hanging a May Basket

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about hanging a May basket. May 4th we planned to hang a May basket to our teacher. We had Mary Lewis, one of the neighbors, make the basket. It was made of purple and red crepe paper. Inside were apples, bananas, oranges, candy, grapefruit, nabiscoes and a tablecloth.

In the afternoon a thunder shower came up and we were afraid we could not hang it, but it had cleared off by the time school closed, so we were happy.

After school was dismissed one of my schoolmates took the May basket from its hiding place and put it on the steps and knocked on the door. We all ran and hid. Four of my schoolmates and I got up on a big boulder near the schoolhouse. When my teacher came up to the rock she could not reach us. Before we went home all but three had been caught.

A Visit to the Capitol

Dear Uncle Jed: From Norwich we left in autos. Then, oh, whoopee! to the capitol. When I went in I felt so funny for a minute. I got used to it after a while. If the dome wasn't closed we were going into it.

VIRGINIA MEECH, Age 11.

Silk Culture

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first letter I have written to the Wide-Awakes. I want to tell you a few facts about silk culture. King Francis the First, king of France, asked the silk weavers of Italy to come into France and offered them special privileges, such as wearing a sword and having their rent free. Silk culture began because the climate was suitable for the growth of the mulberry tree. The silkworm feeds on the leaves of this tree.

ALICE ROBERTS, Age 10.

Our Picnic

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a picnic which some of my schoolmates and I went to. One day my schoolmates and I decided to go on a picnic. We wanted someone older than we were, so we asked the teacher to come as our leader. She accepted the invitation.

We decided to go to some lake. The lake we were going to was four miles away. We walked half of the way and the other half of the way we rode in the teacher's car. When we came to the lake we gathered wood for a fire. When all the wood was gathered we ate our lunch. After our lunch we built the fire and roasted hot dogs and marshmallows, which tasted very good. Then we played ball and "Seven Piles," a delightful game. Then we rested a while. Then we gathered flowers and presented them to our mothers for Mother's day. I enjoyed myself. When I came home I was tired but happy.

The Dirigible

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you and the Wide-Awake circle enjoy reading my story. The name of my story is "The Dirigible." One day I was fencing our flowers in the yard so the children shouldn't step on them. A boy passed by. He told me that a man told him that the Los Angeles was going to pass Colchester.

About five minutes later my cousin Alex told me he saw something pretty. I ran and I soon saw it was the dirigible. It came from New Jersey. It passed through New London, Norwich, Colchester and Hartford. It was very big. It went by very slowly. We thought it was going to land but didn't.

The Storm

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you and the Wide-Awake circle enjoy reading my story. The name of my story is "The Storm."

One day while I was in school a fierce storm arose. The rain fell in torrents. During the storm we were having a nice time. We played the phonograph and played some games. Before we knew it the afternoon was over and it stopped raining.

The Story of Crepe Paper

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you the story of crepe paper. I was first a dirty rag lying in a gutter. One day a boy came along and picked me up. When he reached home he put me into a bag and sold me to a ragman.

The next day the ragman brought me into a large mill, where my friends and I were put into a huge cauldron. We were boiled in this cauldron until we were very clean. When we were taken out we were dried and went through many kinds of machines. Soon we were made into soft, white crepe paper.

Later we were taken into a large dyeing room, where my friends and I were dyed into very pretty colors. We were then put into boxes and sent away to a large city.

When we arrived there some men took us out of theboxes and then they brought us to a large store, where we were put neatly in the window.

One day a little girl came into the store and bought me and some of my friends. She took us home and made a cute little basket for her mother. When she gave it to her mother, the mother admired it very much.

From that time I was very happy.

The Los Angeles Dirigible

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the Los Angeles dirigible that flew over Colchester. On June 4 it passed over Colchester from New London to Hartford. On the tail it saw red, white and blue. We also saw the man and the curtain. We were able to see these sights because we looked through very powerful field glasses. It was very long and moved very slowly. We snapped a picture of it.

It went down toward the horizon and then it came up again. At about 8 o'clock it was invisible here.

My brother said he thought it was going to land in the flying field in New Jersey.

The next day when I read the papers I learned that it went to Lakehurst, New Jersey.

I wonder if you and the Wide-Awakes saw it? If you did not, I wish you did because it was a very nice sight.

At the Carnival

Dear Uncle Jed: Saturday afternoon I went with my father to take some wood to the city. We sold the wood and threw it off the truck. Then my father left the truck near the sidewalk while we went to the carnival. This was the first I ever saw. I saw the big tents, the merry-go-round with black and white horses on it. First I rode on a white horse, then the next time I paid another nickel and I rode on the black one. A Fordson tractor turned the merry-go-round. There were four tractors in all. One turned the merry-go-round, the second turned the whip, the third turned the swings and the fourth a large ferris wheel. It was growing dark and I went to look for my father. He was looking for me. When I found my father we went home.

Our 4-H Club

Dear Uncle Jed: This time I will write about our 4-H club. We have a sewing club which we call "Happy-Go-Lucky Sewing club." It is not very large but large enough to make a little club and enjoy ourselves. We have five members. The first meeting was March 1st. We then organized the club and elected officers. They elected me as president; Mary Lewis, vice president, and Marion Brand, secretary and treasurer.

Our local leader is Mrs. Harold Muttart. Our county club agent is Mr. Randolph Whapies. We have made a sewing bag, pin wheel, scissors case, and are making the thimble and thread case. I think 4-H clubs is one thing that helps boys and girls to learn to do things. It helps girls to learn to cook and sew.

It helps boys to care for animals and farm works.

ELLEN ABRAHAMSON, Age 13.

Wheat

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you in a long time. I hope you and the Wide-Awake circle will enjoy my story.

Wheat grows in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Kansas, Illinois. It grows farther north than corn because it can stand the cold better.

Some wheat is planted in the autumn. This is called winter wheat. They plant some in the warm spring. It is called spring wheat.

When wheat is ripe it is a golden color. It looks like grass that has gone to seed, but it is much larger.

When it goes to the mill it is washed and hulls are pulled off. The tiny heart of the kernel is used to make flour. The hulls are used to make feed for the cattle.

A Museum

Dear Uncle Jed: I am glad to write to you and the Wide-Awakes again. I am going to tell you about an interesting thing in Old Mystic. It is a museum. It has more than 2,000 items. It is owned by a local resident. He is a very nice man and is very pleasant. In his museum he has a few things I can remember, a turtle 200 years old, a real Mexican diamond. He has water from the river Jordan and the stone David filled his sling with. He has a statue made of candy, a vase with glass flowers. He has a statue of Hiawatha and many other things. I wish that you and all the Wide-Awakes who have not seen it would come and see it.

COLCHESTER

MAD DOG FOUND ROAMING IN BOZRAH

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, June 16—Colchester people seem destined to enjoy several more months of dog quarantine restrictions in view of the fact that a dog owned by P. Dicky of the Chestnut Hill section of town was taken in charge Saturday morning by Dog Warden Farnum of Bozrah after the animal was found roaming through Bozrah in an apparently rabid condition.

The dog was killed and the head sent to the office of the commissioner of domestic animals, J. M. Whittlesey in Hartford, who soon informed the local dog warden, H. F. Brown, that the dog had a confirmed case of the rabies. Warden Brown was also advised that a deputy from the commissioner's office will come to Colchester on Monday to look into the situation. It is possible that the Dicky dog might have bitten some other dogs during the time that it was roaming about in a crazed condition and Warden Brown with the deputy expect to round up these bitten dogs and dispose of them. Warden Brown predicts that the quarantine will be extended for another indefinite period in view of this new development.

Alden T. Bunyan and Walter B. Lombard of Hartford visited over Sunday with local relatives.

Miss Clara Park, domestic science instructor in Danbury schools, spent the week end at her home here.

Morgan H. Stedman, student at Harvard university, left last week for several months' study in Europe.

Amos Case of East Berlin and Frank A. Case of Norwich were visitors, Sunday, at the J. S. Case home.

Francis Chesver and George Gleason, both of Hartford were taken to Hartford hospital, early Saturday morning after an automobile driven by George Stergin of Amity street, Hartford, struck them where they had stopped with their motorcycles on the Charles Clark hill on the Colchester-Marlborough road. The automobile ran into a gully 40 feet below the roadway but the four occupants of the car escaped serious injury. Chesver is reported to have a broken leg while Gleason is thought to have sustained internal injuries. The automobile and motorcycles were all considerably damaged.

Miss Rachel Freedman, teacher in Torrington schools, has returned to her home here or the summer vacation.

Miss Carol A. Bock, student at Russell Sage college, Troy, N. Y., returned home last week for the vacation season.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace.

Screen actors are used to sudden transitions. And Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill, co-featured in "His Captive Woman," now at the Palace theatre, had to make a considerable jump from their recent roles in "The Barker," where Sills was a side show spieler with a carnival and Miss Mackaill played a girl of the show. In "His Captive Woman" a First National picture directed by George Fitzmaurice with sound effects, they appear as a New York policeman and a girl of the Primrose way, respectively.

Lupino Lane makes his debut in talking comedies in "Ship Mates," first of a new series of all-dialogue comedies which Educational is releasing. It will be at the Palace theatre today and tomorrow as a special added attraction on the program. The comedy star is seen as a dumb sailor who manages to evade most of the punishment meted out to him as a result of his goofy tactics.

Other sound features on the same program is a Pathe News which gives in scenes and sound the latest events of the world, the latest Grantland Rice Sportlight the vim and pep of our youth and a Pathe Sound Revenue, the wonder reel of filmland.

One of the greatest poets America has produced, who also came near to being one of America's greatest musicians, must remain nameless, as great a mystery as The Unknown Soldier.

This poet and musician was the man who wrote "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Deep River" and "Roll, Jordan, Roll."

That trio of spirituals, as well as two score or so others, will be heard from the speaking screen for the first time when "Hearts in Dixie," Fox Movietone 100 per cent singing, dancing and talking feature, is shown here Wednesday and Thursday at the Palace theatre.

Broadway Theatre

"Noah's Ark," the Warner Bros. spectacular film version of the world's greatest calamity, as chronicled in the book of Genesis, in which Dolores Costello has the stellar role, was shown last night at the Broadway theatre. It lived up to all the extravagant claims that have been made as to its bigness, magnificence and awe-inspiring grandeur, and more than lived up to it. It is a screen spectacle carried to its ultimate degree of perfection and it is Vitaphone that has made this ultimate degree possible. It adds immeasurably to the realism and impressiveness of the destruction wrought by the fury of the unleashed waters in the flood sequences. "Noah's Ark" is a film that makes screen history.

The talking sequences are splendidly done. The voices of Miss Costello, of Noah Beery George O'Brien and the other principals are distinct and emotional scenes and enliven the comedy. The symphonic accompaniment and the sound effects are in keeping with the majestic pace of the flood sequences.

The story is in two parts—a modern war story which culminates in the destruction of a French village and the imprisoning of the principal characters under the buildings destroyed by the war, a flood of steel and blood which is the device used for carrying the same set of characters back into the days of Noah and the Biblical flood of water Miss Costello, the Mary of the modern story beloved of Travis is a young American, is the Miriam of the flood sequences, while Travis, acted by George O'Brien, becomes Japheth, son of Noah, in love with Miriam. Noah Beery, the lustful Russian officer in the war sequences, becomes King Nephilim who commands the sacrifice of the virgin Miriam to the idol Jashub. Other players appearing in both the modern and the flood sections of the spectacle are Guinn Williams, who gives a notably excellent performance Paul McAllister, Nigel de Brulier, Anders Randolf, Armand Kaliz, Myrna Ley, William V. Mong and Malcolm Waite. Director Michael Curtiz has marshalled the elements masterfully.

JAW-BREAKING NAMES IN NEW MATHEMATICS

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Newcomers in electrical engineering, Guddermannians and Lambertians, both refined mathematical terms, are described for the American Philosophical society by Dr. Arthur E. Kennelly, professor of electrical engineering at Harvard.

Dr. Kennelly is one of the scientists who discovered the layer in upper air that reflects radio waves back earthward. The two names describe relations of angles and curves.

"Already there are indications that they are used in electrical engineering, and other applications may be expected," Dr. Kennelly says.

ODD NAMES DESCRIBE LANDSLIDES OVER WORLD

PHILADELPHIA, (AP) — The New England name of "slide" for a landslip of loose rock has cousins all over the world.

"Scree," "clitters," "clatters," "schutt" and "talus" all describe the same condition. Talus is the scientific name.

The words are defined in a report to the American Philosophical society by John W. Harshberger, professor of botany, University of Pennsylvania. He tells what kind of vegetation grows in talus slopes.

SUMMER COURSES DEAL WITH MODERN PROBLEMS

PHILADELPHIA, (AP) — Keeping abreast of modern practical problems, courses in "Contemporary Economic Thought" and in "The Family" are among 33 new courses added to the curriculum for the University of Pennsylvania's annual summer school.

The new courses, nearly all of which are in the field of graduate study, were announced by Prof. John Dolman, Jr., director of the school. The course in "The Family" will include a discussion of the family's biological causes, its various forms and functions and present day problems and trends. It will be conducted by the department of sociology.

MICHIGAN MAPLE SYRUP CROP SMALL BUT GOOD

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., (AP)—Absence of freezing and thawing weather prematurely shortened what promised to be one of the most prosperous seasons in the history of Michigan's maple syrup and sugar industry.

There was not enough low temperature to retard bud growth and prolong the flow of sap. Less than half a crop of syrup has been produced. The quality, however, was exceptionally good because there were few rains to discolor the sap.

Normally, Michigan produces about 150,000 gallons of syrup.

Record of Egg Shipment.

PETALUMA, Cal. —(AP)— A shipment of 36,000 pedigreed hatching eggs valued at $3,000 has been obtained from the poultry breeders' association of British Columbia by Petaluma hatchery. They will be used to supply California poultry farms with White Leghorn cockerels

If you want a man to praise your judgment all you have to do is agree with him.

Reminder !

The undersigned citizens and taxpayers of the City of Norwich take this method of calling the attention of the citizens of Norwich to the hearing before the Court of Common Council in the Town Hall this evening upon the question of the adoption of an ordinance concerning the Gas and Electric Department. The citizens, in meeting assembled, have already requested the Court of Common Council to adopt ordinances regulating the Department. We hope that all those citizens who believe in the justice and fairness of our position will attend this hearing and thus express themselves as being in favor of the adoption of the ordinance in question.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre.

For one hundred per cent amusement, and after all that's the most important mission the motion pictures have, we can recommend "Children of the Ritz," without evasions or qualifications. It opened last night at the Breed theatre before a capacity audience that enjoyed the Dorothy Mackaill-Jack Mulhall combination in the new First National story very openly and evidently.

A flashy, breezy picture it proved to be, with an absorbing story of New York society life and a cast of handsome young things who are good to see and also capable players. Given a story that begins where many picture plots leave off, they work surely and consistently to a fine climax and satisfactory conclusion. Mr. Mulhall and Miss Mackaill make the most of an excellent opportunity and John Francis Dillon, who directed, lost no chance to make a pleasing and impressive showing.

The story is of Angela, daughter of the fabulously rich Penningtons and Dewey Haines, the family chauffeur, whom she marries when her father is ruined and Dewey has come suddenly into a modest fortune. They move to the Ritz and the modest fortune starts melting away. How fast it melts, and what results is the picture—a picture that you must see to know the story for we'll not tell it here.

NORWICH TOWN

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICE AT METHODIST CHURCH

The largest morning congregation of the conference year 150, attended the service at the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church Sunday. The church was most beautifully decorated with 20 baskets and vases of roses and lilies. The decorating was done by Muriel Rose, Virginia Ward and Florence Gembel. The junior choir under the direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich sang as an anthem "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old."

The pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, baptized two babies and 14 young people from the church school. The babies were Ernestine Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rose and Marjorie Miner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Miner. The young people were Norma Wilkinson, Richard Snow, Clarence Smith, Arlene Wilkinson, May Ivar Smith, Margaret Phillips, Mary Scovel, Donald Olsen, Fred Miller, Ruth Scovel, Marion Miller, Florence Gembel, Willard Wilbur and Ruth Miller.

Following the baptismal service in which the pastor was assisted by Mrs. Helen Haviland Potter who is an ordained deaconess of the Methodist Episcopal church, a class of 21 was received into preparatory membership. Those received into preparatory membership were, Doris Rose, Margaret Phillips, Ruth Miller, Donald Olsen, Muriel Rose, Robert Brown, Fred Miller, Norma Rose, Edward Gallagher, Norma Wilkinson, Clayton Rose, Mary Waters, Leon Ladd, Virginia Ward, Frederick Ross, Betty Yetke, Clarence Smith, Walter Kelley, John Yetke, Mildred Carter and Marion Miller. Mrs. Frank Wilbur was received into full membership of the church with a letter of transfer from the Central Baptist church.

Kelley Advanced in Wolf Cubs

Friday afternoon the Wolf Cub Pack of Scouts connected with the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church held a meeting at the parsonage. There was an attendance of 17. Cubmaster George Warren Potter told the cubs that a hike and hot dog roast will be a part of the program at a meeting held in the near future. The time and date of the hike will be voted at the meeting this week. Walter Kelley passed the Morse code test and was advanced to the two star rank.

Troop 2, Boy Scouts connected with the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church met at the parsonage Friday evening where the inspection of the troop was taken by the scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter. The scouts, 13 in number, boarded the trolley to attend the Flag day exercises held at the Elks' home.

FUNERAL

Walter Casey

The funeral of Walter Casey, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Casey, took place from his home, 46 West Town street, Saturday morning at 8:30. In the Sacred Heart church at 9 o'clock, the pastor Rev. Edward J. Quinn, celebrated a requiem high mass, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. Mrs. William A. Murphy, church organist was in charge of the musical part of the mass, assisted by the choir, etc. For the processional Chopin's funeral march was played. At the offertory, Miss Mary Buckley sang De Profundis. For a waiting hymn, Michael Farrell sang When Evening Comes. At the recessional, Miss Buckley and Mr. Farrell sang Lead Kindly Light.

There was a profusion of beautiful floral remembrances. The bearers were six young men, Walter Murphy, Harold Cummings, John Mackey, John Aubrey, Leonard Cormier and Henry Mackey.

Buriel took place in St. Joseph's cemetery, where Rev. Father Quinn conducted the committal service at the grave.

Included in the attendance were relatives and friends from New York, Hartford and other cities. Cummings and Ring were in charge of the funeral arrangements. Much sympathy has been expressed for the parents in the loss of their son, whose life was cut down suddenly when practically only in its youth. The young man who has not enjoyed good health for some time, has been highly spoken of by a number of neighbors and friends.

WEDDING

Lucy-Sterry

In the presence of about 60 relatives and friends, Miss Ruth Elizabeth Sterry, of Norwich Town was united in marriage with Howard Lucy, of Hanover, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the bride's home on Scotland road.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, of which the bride is a member.

The maid of honor was Miss Louise Sterry, sister of the bride, while the groom was attended by his cousin, Raymond Grady as best man. The two brides-maids were Misses Grace Wheeler and Esther Durr. Robert Stott and James Gray acted as ushers. As the bridal party entered the parlor, the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, was softly played by the bride's cousin, Theodore Sterry, violinist, and Miss Rose Durr, pianist. During the ceremony O Promise Me, was played by Mr. Sterry and Miss Durr.

An informal reception followed during which a buffet luncheon was served. The bride's gown was white satin trimmed with lace and she wore a coronet veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and carnations. The maid of honor wore tan silk and she carried pink snap-dragons. Miss Wheeler was gowned in pink chiffon and carried pink carnations, while Miss Durr's gown was robins-egg blue satin-back silk and her bouquet was yellow carnations. The house was attractively decorated with roses, snowballs, peonies and others of the season's flowers. Guests were present from Rhode Island, Meriden, Willimantic, Hanover, Hallville and Norwich. The bride who is the eldest daughter of Jabez and Bertha Wagner Sterry received beautiful wedding gifts including cut-glass, silver, china, linen, pictures and several pieces of gold.

She is a graduate of Norwich Free Academy, 1924 class. For the past five years she has been a stenographer in the office of the New London County Mutual Fire Insurance company. As a member of the Christian Endeavor society, also at present in the choir, she has been actively associated with the First Congregational church, also is a teacher in the Sunday school.

The groom is the son of Arthur and Elizabeth Griffith Lucy, of Hanover, and is employed at the Airlie mills in Hanover.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Lucy left for a wedding trip through the New England states. Upon their return they are to reside on Scotland road. The bride's traveling costume was a light blue ensemble with hat to match.

OLD INDIAN CAPITAL MARKED BY MONUMENT

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—(AP)—A native stone monument with a bronze tablet has been unveiled at the site of Tukabahchi early capital of the upper Creek nation.

Tukabahchi, most prominent city of aboriginal times in this country because of its location in the center of population, was marked by the Alabama Anthropological society.

The society was organized to make a study of man in every age and in every country. The site of the old Indian capital is on the Walter E. Bistrunk estate near here and the tablet was presented the society by Mrs. B. J. Baldwin of Montgomery, Ala., a daughter of Mr. Bistrunk.

U. S. MEAT CONSUMPTION 138 POUNDS PER CAPITA

WASHINGTON (AP) —Americans eat an average of six ounces of meat a day, says the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Slightly more than half of the amount, 3 1-4 ounces, is pork. The rest consists of 2 1-2 ounces of beef; 1-8 ounce of veal, and 1-4 ounce of lamb.

Notwithstanding the apparent smallness of the amounts, the annual consumption of meat last year averaged 138 pounds per capita, or a total of more than 16,500,000,000 pounds for the entire population.

MAINE CROPS INCREASE AS FARMLANDS SHRINK

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP)—While farm acreage has been decreasing in Maine during the last half century, the value of crops grown has steadily increased.

A survey by the Maine development commission reveals that steady reduction in farming lands has taken place during a 50-year period. Accompanying the reduction, however, was an equally regular growth in production until the value of products per farm, computed on a comparable dollar basis, has become four times the total when the state's farm area was at its peak.

NEW LONDON MAN AND WIFE HELD FOR LIQUOR LAW VIOLATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 16—Marty Russell, 8 Cross street, will be presented in the police court tomorrow on the reputation clause and his wife, Anna, will be charged with conducting a disorderly house and violation of the liquor law. The arrest of the man and woman was made this morning and last night as a result of the efforts of the police to put the resort out of business. For many months the police have kept a close watch of the house, which is frequented principally by sailors and fishermen, but not until Saturday night were the officers successful in obtaining evidence of a nature that warranted the house being raided. About 10 o'clock Sergeant John Courtney, Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Arthur Feeley and William Graham went to the house as several men had been seen to enter a short time before. Russell was not there, but his wife was, as were Edward Wick, an actor of Philadelphia; Thomas Fowler, Frank Knowr and Delter Cunge, fishermen and Durnard Faison, United States Coast Guard. They were arrested on a charge of frequenting. At 2:30 o'clock this morning Russell was arrested by Patrolman Frank Linehan. Russell and his wife furnished bonds of $250 for presentation in court and the frequenters were released upon obtaining a surety on their respective bonds of $50.

When the officers gained admission to the house, Mrs. Russell is alleged to have called to occupants on the second floor to "break that stuff" and instantly the smashing of bottles could be heard, it is said.

STOLEN MACHINE FOUND BY OFFICER VEIGARD

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 16—Local Officer Henry Veigard was notified Sunday morning by Sergeant Delaney of the Norwich police that a Ford coupe belonging to David P. Walker, 353 Washington street, Norwich, had been stolen in New London Saturday evening. The Norwich office gave information that the car had been seen in Jewett City, parked on a side street. Officer Veigard located the deserted car, out of gas. It was turned over to the Norwich owner.

At 3.30 this morning the local officer received a call from Mrs. Lewis Gill, who lives on the Plainfield road, a mile above the town. She stated that two strange men had been seen in the shack in the lot near her home. Officer Veigard went to the shack and found two young men inside, covered with a pile of hay in the corner. Both men were arrested and locked up in the local police station. They gave their names as John Collins, 54 Kenmore road, Lowell, Mass., aged 18 and William Griffin, 83 Evans street, Lowell, Mass. Griffin gave his age as 18.

In the car were found a camera and two new suits of union underwear. The prisoners claim that they found the underwear in a package beside the road and that they bought the camera. A girl, who came here from Norwich with Mr. Walker when he came to get the car, identified the camera as hers. Local police believe tonight that both lads are suspicious characters.

They will be given a hearing in the Griswold town court this (Monday) morning with several local charges after which they will be turned over to the New London police.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ALLOWED FOR FIGHTER

Albert Koziol, 18, of 283 Laurel Hill avenue, well known Norwich pugilist, is awarded compensation at the rate of $8.50 a week as the result of an injury sustained on April 24 last. Koziol, when not appearing in the ring, is employed by William S. Spencer, where he is learning the plastering and bricklayers trade.

On April 24 last he sustained an injury, resulting in an infected second finger on the righ hand, when he was plastering. The infection resulted from a burn received from lime.

FURTHER CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION DISALLOWED

A claim for further compensation made by Joseph Masters of Bozrahvill, an employe of the Palmer Bros Co., is disallowed by Compensation Commissioner Albert J. Bailey in a finding filed with Clerk John H. Walker in superior court. Masters on Dec. 10, 1916, claims that he sustained an injury resulting in the loss of use of the hand. He received compensation for a time at the rate of $7-.56. The insurance company contended that Masters sustained only a partial loss of use of the hand and that he has been fully compensated. The commissioner finds for the insurance company.

ACCEPTS CALL TO PASTORATE OF PARK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D. D., of Scarsdale, N. Y. has accepted the call to become the minister of Park Congregational church in the following letter, which was read by Deacon Henry A. Tirrell, chairman of the pulpit committee, at the close of the church service on Sunday morning:

Scarsdale, N. Y.,
June 14, 1929.

Park Congregational Church,
Norwich, Conn.
My dear friends:

Through the kindness of your pulpit committee there has been transmitted to me the call of Park church to undertake the high task of its ministry.

The minister of any church undertakes a sobering task, and no man considers such work lightly. In your case I am aware of the splendid succession of men who have been your leaders in the past. Moreover you know, as do I, that these are days of peculiar testing to our American civilization. By our fruits of heart and mind and character the church must prove now what good gifts she has for people.

With these and other facts much on my heart I am resolved to answer "yes" to your gracious call. I meet your expectations with the assurance that I shall find your hearty helpfulness always at hand and that together we shall work for people and their healing in Norwich, the U. S. and round the world, with the guidance of God and in the spirit of the Master.

Faithfully and affectionately yours,
THEODORE MERRELL SHIPHERD.

Dr. Shipherd, who has conducted the services at Park church on two Sundays, has an excellent voice and a very pleasing personality. On Thursday he was in town to meet the committee and look over the field and plans to begin his new ministry in September. He will succeed Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., who has been the active pastor for 45 years and is now pastor-emeritus.

ROSE SUNDAY SERMON AT LUTHERAN CHURCH

A sermon for Rose Sunday was delivered by Rev. Carl Storek at the morning service at the First Evangelical Lutheran church, from the text Isaiah 35:1, And the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.

He made special reference to the roses on the altar and said that Isaiah used the rose as a symbol of the kingdom of God. It is an ancient flower, beloved especially among the Arabians. Christ used a lily to illustrate God's fatherly care over his children. As there are many kinds of roses, so there are many denominations among Christians, but all should glorify God in their own way. Each has a place to fill in the garden of God's kingdom. Where the banner of Christ is planted even a desert place will rejoice and blossom as the rose. This is what our missionaries are doing in the waste places of the earth, especially in the dark continent of Africa. They establish mission stations, build chapels and schools and teach and preach the gospel. If our town is to retain the coveted fame of being the "Rose of New England" the church people will have to get busy and be right on their job, encouraging every noble effort and enterprise, and discouraging every evil that would bring reproach upon this community or its churches.

"The souls of our children have to be cultivated and guarded like the roses in our gardens. A soul is easily ruined just like a flower is easily broken. It takes patience to grow a flower, but how easily it may be broken by the reckless".

TRUST POWERS GRANTED UNCAS-MERCHANTS BANK

The Uncas-Merchants National bank has received advice from the federal reserve bank of Boston, that the federal reserve board in Washington had approved their application for trust powers recently submitted, and that they are now authorized to act as trustee, executor, administrator, registrar of stocks and bonds, guardian of estates, assignee, receiver, committee of estates of lunatics, or any other fiduciary capacity when not in contravention to state or local law.

This phase of the banking business has grown very rapidly of late years, and will doubtless continue, as there is a growing realization on the part of the general public that the naming of an institution instead of an individual to act in these matters, possesses many advantages. The institution so named does not die, has the advantage of skilled officers, and connections with the leading banks and security houses, which enables them to exercise the highest degree of care in the investment of trust funds. Another advantage which is no small consideration to the person making a will is the fact that it removes all chance of personal feeling between the heirs, which often leads to dissatisfaction and strife, as well as avoiding the transfer of funds from proper investments into worthless or doubtful securities, through the efforts of high-powered and often unscrupulous stock and bond salesmen.

Trust funds handled by banks are strictly safeguarded, and are kept at all time asaparate from the bank's own holdings. They are handled by one of the bank's officers and invested by a committee of its officers and directors, so that their disposition does not depend wholly on the judgment of one person. This in itself is no small consideration as opposed to the naming of an individual as executor or trustee which together with the other advantages makes for safety, and the feeling on the part of the person making a will that their affairs will be impartially administered and every precaution taken against loss.

By invitation, a most friendly and interested audience gathered in Slater hall Saturday afternoon at 4:30 for a piano recital by the advanced students from New Haven and Norwich of Frank Farrell, Norwich and New Haven, concert pianist. Eight students provided a program varied and well balanced, playing from memory, so that there was not so much as the turning of a leaf to mar the complete enjoyment of nearly two hours of marvellous melody.

Introducing the program was a gifted small boy of twelve, John Cavallaro, of New Haven, whose playing was so assured in its character and so remarkable in its mastery of the instrument that audience and musicians alike gave him a real salvo of applause. The program included: Italian Concerto, Bach; Grand Scherzo, Gottschalk, John Cavallaro, New Haven; Hexentanz, MacDowell, Miss Florence Paul, New Haven; Maiden's Wash, Chopin-Liszt, Miss Stella Glowacki, Norwich; Troika op. 37, No. 11, Tschaikowsky, Miss Camille Morin, Norwich; Rhapsodie No. 5, Liszt, Mrs. William Godson, Norwich; Scherzo, B minor, Chopin; Rigoletto Paraphrase Liszt, Mrs. Carl Scholvein, New Haven; St. Francis of Paola Walking on the Waves, Liszt-Silotti, James Olson, Norwich; Waltz Ballet Naila, Delibes-Dohnanyi; prelude, op. 28, No. 22, nocturne, op. 37, No. 1, Mazurka, op. 63, No. 1, Etude, op. 10, No. 12, Chopin; Tarentella, Liszt, Miss Alma Boutilier, Norwich.

Each player showed such understanding of the compositions given, interpreting them with delicacy yet surety of touch, finish and smoothness of execution and an absolute certainty of familiarity with the moods and spirit of the composer, that to listen was to gauge the rare intelligence of the instruction, as well as the faithful devotion of the students which had brought to such a culmination weeks and months of assiduous study.

When James Olsen, of Norwich, gave the majestic "St. Francis of Paola Walking on the Waves" the impression left with the audience was markedly profound. Miss Alma Boutilier, of Norwich, in her six numbers won spontaneous applause the most flattering, for her skill, prodigious feat of memory, and the musical soul revealed by a mere slip of a girl in interpreting works of a scope and gravity associated with the concert stage.

Miss Paul of New Haven, Miss Glowacki, Miss Morin and Mrs. Godson, of Norwich and Mrs. Carl Scholvein, of New Haven contributed toward two very delightful hours by the grace, ability and charm of their playing.

The ushers were Elizabeth Lyman, Mary Stewart and Vivian Moreau.

TO ENFORGE NEW LAWS ON MOTOR VEHICLES

A new inspection section is now being set up within the state motor vehicle department to assist in the administration of laws created by the 1929 general assembly and enforcement of old statutes. For the present it will consist of not more than eight inspectors, not uniformed, and will not be maintained to make arrests or especially enforce highway regulations but to take charge of definite activities, according to an announcement by the department. The section will begin operations about July 1st.

The chief duties of the section, as now planned, will be to cooperate with the traffic authorities in administration of the new uniform traffic act; the creation of a real brake test and uniform enforcement of equipment laws in the state, especially as applied to heavy commercial vehicles; the licensing of junk yards, including the inspection of locations, and investigation of financial records of courts and gasoline distributors to check state revenues.

It is planned to establish a uniform system of accounting in connection with the check on revenues. This will be devoted particularly to insuring prompt payment of taxes and fees due the state to eliminate delays existing under the present system.

In a general way the new section will be available also for re-examination of operators. It is expected that the state police department will soon establish a uniform examination which will be more severe and particular than in the past. Such an examination has not been imposed heretofore, according to department officials because of the lack of men and the time it has been necessary to spend occasionally with individuals in order to be sure that no injustice was done.

To take care of these and similar situations it is planned to adopt a rule that the state police refer all doubtful cases to the inspection section of the motor vehicle department. One man or more will be allotted from the section to consider the case fully. All the records will be at hand, and the inspector in charge will also have power and be ordered to investigate to whatever extent is necessary before authorizing the issuance of a license after the state police have refused it.

Much study is being given to the subject of re-examination by the department. It is pointed out that because of the great number of operators, approximately 850,000, no general sweeping rule by which any large number of them are to be re-examined can be made. The department, however, will cause the re-examination of everyone brought before it in connection with any offense or accident whenever such action seems to be justified. Offenders who have unfavorable records, officials say must expect serious attention from this particular section with the probability that additional guaranty as to financial responsibility will be required before they are allowed to continue operating on the highway.

The department policy in regard to re-examination, for the present at least, will be to use the principle as an additional safeguard to be exercised in cases where there is doubt as to the desirability of continuing an operator's license. Also, that there should not be an attempt to go into new fields until such action seems warranted and is actually authorized by the general assembly with a sufficient appropriation made for the purpose.

At the close of the program the teachers of Ledyard presented a gold piece to Miss Frances Kingberger who is to be married soon, in appreciation of her hearty cooperation in all school hygiene work.

SENATE VOTES TO RECESS; BORAH RESOLUTION LOST

By Vote of 57 to 23 the Senate Voted to Recess From Wednesday Night Until August 19—Borah Resolution to Restrict Revision of the Tariff to Farm and Related Projects Was Rejected by a 39 to 38 Vote—Party Lines Were Disregarded.

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—The senate today voted to recess from next Wednesday night until August 19 on motion of Senator Watson, Indiana, the republican leader.

The recess must have the concurrence of the house, whose leaders have threatened to block the recess because the senate has not fixed a time to vote on the tariff. However, house approval is believed likely and the house itself is expected to ask a recess until September or October.

The senate recess was approved by a vote of 57 to 23.

BORAH RESOLUTION DEFEATED IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—By one vote the senate today defeated attempts to confine tariff revision at the special session to agriculture and related products.

After six hours of debate, the proposal of Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, designed to limit the proposed readjustment solely in behalf of the farm was turned down by 39 to 38.

By a similar vote the senate rejected an amendment to the Borah proposal, which would have embraced within the revision other lines of industry besides agriculture which have shown a falling off in recent years due to insurmountable foreign competition.

The language contained in the amendment, which offered by Senator Jones of Washington, the assistant republican leader, was the same as that used by President Hoover in his message to the special session.

Party lines were shattered on both roll calls, the only difference between them being the vote of Senator Johnson, republican, California, who opposed both proposals and thereby brought about the defeat of the Borah plan.

Thirteen republicans, mostly independents, voted for the Borah resolution along with 25 democrats, while 32 republicans were joined by 7 democrats in opposition. The same line-up against Borah voted for Jones' amendment, with the exception of Johnson—who joined the 13 republicans and 25 democrats who approved the Borah plan in opposition to the Washington senator's amendment.

Senator Johnson, prior to the roll call on the Jones amendment, which was taken first, declared he did not wish to see the Borah proposal defeated by "indirection" and therefore would vote against the amendment.

Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, declared his vote for the Jones amendment was not to be interpreted as a vote for the house bill, against which sharp criticism was directed during the debate. Chairman Smoot of the finance committee was among those who found fault with some provisions of the house measure. Borah declared he would not have offered his plan if the house had not exceeded the platform promises of the party.

Senator Herbert, republican, Rhode Island, also opposed the Borah plan, declaring the outcome of the election was a mandate to the party to aid in industry as well as agriculture.

As a result of the vote, the finance group now holding hearings on the house measure will go ahead with its work unrestricted. The hearings are scheduled to end by July 10. This will give the committee five and a half weeks in which to revise the house measure and report the bill to the senate by August 19.

CHARGES THAT AUSTRIA IS ARMING SECRETLY

GENEVA, June 17.—(AP) — Strong charges that Austria is arming secretly in defiance of the terms of the peace treaty were contained today in the final report of the liquidation board in connection with the removal of military control from that country. The report was annexed to an intimation from the president of the ambassador's conference to the council of the league of nations that the board should now be dissolved.

The three delegates, English, French and Italian, who formed the board expressed conviction that Austria had kept war material hidden during the investigations of the board and that this could be used to arm the many associations existing in that country.

They called attention to the danger that the now reduced army may be converted into a cadre or skeleton army which by enrollment of young men trained in these associations could if desired, create an army of from 200,000 to 300,000 men. They asserted that the cadre character of the army is continually developing and that associations have been developed to an alarming extent during the last few months.

MISS EVANGELINE BOOTH TAKES TURN FOR WORSE

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP)—Salvation Army headquarters here tonight issued a statement indicating that news of the death in England of her brother, General Bramwell Booth, had caused a turn for the worse in the condition of Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States who had been recuperating from injuries received in an automobile accident.

The statement said the news came "as a great shock, causing a recurrence of acute suffering in the head."

The commander was so shaken, the statement continued, that "her physician considered it necessary for her to return to her bed and forbade her even being asked for a statement." Miss Booth has been confined to her home at Scarsdale, N. Y., since the accident.

The statement disclosed that on receiving information yesterday by cable that the general's condition was serious, Miss Booth had sent him a cablegram expressing her love.

DRY COMMISSIONER NOT SATISFIED WITH CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Prohibition Commissioner Doran announced tonight that he was not satisfied with conditions in the prohibition district of Palmer Canfield, administrator of the northern New York district, but that no change is to be decided upon until an investigation has been completed.

The commissioner said that sale of illegal beer in the district had increased in recent months and that special agents put into the field to investigate breweries and sale of beer had seized breweries at Troy and Albany on charges of selling beverages of higher alcoholic content than permitted under the Volstead act.

Canfield has been administrator at Albany since January and had served before in the prohibition service. Doran said he would ask the administrator for a complete report to be studied along with a survey made by the special agents before determining his course of action. "It will be fair," was his only comment upon his ultimate decision.

OCCUPANTS OF BOTH CARS INJURED IN COLLISION

KENT, Conn., June 17—(AP)—A head-on collision between two automobiles today, resulted in the occupants of both cars being taken to Milford hospital, where it is believed one of them is suffering from internal injuries. Mr. and Mrs. Mattys Angelowich and their daughter, Katherine, were in one car and are suffering from bad cuts and bruises. The other car contained Dr. S. Schwager, of Pittsfield, Mass., who is thought to have sustained internal injuries. The accident occurred about a mile from here on the Schaghticoke trail. Bad judgment on the part of both drivers, according to police, was the cause of the collision.

ALL BRITAIN MOURNS FOR GENERAL BRAMWELL BOOTH

HADLEY WOOD, England, June 17—(AP)—Regardless of creed or religious convictions all Britain tonight mourned the passing of General Bramwell Booth, former leader of the Salvation Army who died Sunday, at the age of 73.

In his death the Salvation Army, which was so nearly rent asunder during the last year of his life, was again cemented in the bonds of union by sorrow for the common loss.

The full honors of the army to which he devoted his long life will be accorded him at a funeral next Monday, which will be attended by notable representatives, of churches, welfare organizations and public bodies. The king and the government probably will be represented.

Apart from public acknowledgments of the religious leader's work, in the form of telegrams of condolence, personal calls and magnificent floral offerings, General Booth's widow and children withdrew to spend the last hours with his earthly remains alone.

The body of General Booth will be buried in Abney Park cemetery, London.

HEADS OF MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN CRUSHED

DETROIT, June 17—(AP)—A mother and her two children were found dead at their River Rouge home today, their heads crushed by a hammer. A third child, similarly attacked, was near death tonight.

The body of the mother, Mrs. Anna Chebinski, was discovered near her home about noon by a neighbor boy. The bodies of the three children, Pauline, 2; Margaret, 5, and Josephine, 10, were found inside the house. Josephine was the only one alive.

Police said they believed the slaying occurred about 4 a. m. today. Mike Mazor, a milk wagon driver, told police he heard an unusual noise from the house at about that time but did not investigate. The hammer used by the slayer was found at the rear of the house. Nearby, on a dirt path, was a pool of blood indicating the mother had been struck down there and dragged into the weeds where her body was found.

Miller of Boston, 39, a layman, today was recommended for that post by the convention's nominating committee to succeed another layman, A. M. Harris, New York philanthropist. Nomination is considered tentamount to election.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of Harvard university, where he received a doctor of philosophy degree in mathematics. Before he went into the candy manufacturing business he was instructor at both Harvard and the University of Michigan.

The Rev. Dr. David Jones Evans of Kansas City, Mo., was nominated for the vice-president. Both names together with those of numerous others now serving on the mission and administrative boards will be presented to the convention Tuesday for final action.

It's ash barrel rolling. Lisse has been employed as an ash collector for two years and in the last six months has been under special training by Arthur Lacroix until he now averages less than 30 seconds in removing a full ash barrel from a cellar and rolling it 200 feet to the curb. Lisse tonight issued a challenge to all comers in the state for a meet to be held here in a month. He is 34 and weighs 119.

$151,500,000 For Federal Farm Board

Appropriation Passed by Congress Yesterday — Legislation Now Goes to President Hoover.

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—Both the executive and legislative branches of the government fixed their attention today on carrying out the new law intended as a boon to the farmer.

President Hoover busied himself on determination of the eight men he will choose to compose the federal farm board, and congress at the same time was appropriating $151,500,000 for that board to use in its initial efforts toward making agriculture uniformly profitable.

The president recommended the appropriation early in the day, the house approved it with little debate and the senate adopted the house resolution with no debate. Mr. Hoover doubtless will sign it soon, thus creating the first $150,000,000 portion of the $500,000,000 revolving fund authorized by the farm relief law. The remaining $1,500,000 of the money appropriated is for expenses of the farm board.

The list of potential nominees to the board grows daily, one addition made today being Sherman Houston, of Malta Bend, Missouri. Senator Patterson and Representative Palmer, of that state, described him to President Hoover as "a real dirt farmer". They said Mr. Hoover gave no indication of his intentions concerning the board's makeup.

Developments saw no lessening of the speculation on James C. Stone of Kentucky and Carl Williams of Oklahoma as board members. They are being backed by various farm organizations.

There was not a dissenting voice in the house after Chairman Wood, of the appropriations committee, asked that the rules be suspended to make the appropriation. Several democrats, including Representative Garner of Texas, the leader, said they favored giving the board the full $500,000,000.

Wood called attention to the letter of the president in which he said that "the additional amounts which will be needed by the board cannot be determined except by the board itself, but as congress might shortly recess I have though it desirable that a preliminary sum should be provided."

"If the board finds it necessary to have further funds it should be possible to make provision for them in ample time as congress will no doubt be in session by the time they are required," the letted added.

Under the farm relief act, the money would be used by the board in making loans to cooperative marketing associations and for setting up stabilization corporations to take from the market price-depressing surpluses.

Several of the middle western house members have suggested that among the first actions of the board probably would be a move toward the stabilization of the wheat market.

87 YEAR OLD MAN FOUND GUILTY DRUNKEN DRIVING

STONINGTON, June 17—(AP)—A liquor fine in part for the oldest man ever before the town court, was remitted today because of the accompanying conditions under which T. A. Barrett, 87, of Briar Cliffe, N. Y., was arrested. He was driving to Boston with two show ponies "the only friends he had in the world," he told Officer C. Wilson Brown. The van had collided with another vehicle.

Barrett felt so badly over being separated from his "babies" that Prosecutor H. P. Hammacher asked the court to impose the lowest fine possible on the charge of driving a car while under the influence of liquor. It was made $100 with half of it remitted. Barrett was put in the lockup and the ponies turned out to pasture back of the old courthouse in Liberty street.

EARTHQUAKE TOOK AT LEAST SEVEN LIVES

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, June 17.—(AP)—Almost the whole Archipelago rocked today for a full minute with a strong earthquake that took at least seven lives. Officials tonight were not confident that the full loss of life was yet known for several isolated communities had not reported.

More severe shocks have been felt here in recent years but they were of much shorter duration. This city was entirely undamaged and in Christ church there were only a few cracked chimneys.

PARKS FOUND GUILTY OF SLAYING HIS ROOM MATE

MACON, Ga., June 17—(AP)—Earl Manchester, 21 year old slayer of James Parks, his room mate, in an "insurance murder plot," was found guilty tonight of murder and the jury made no recommendation, which automatically fixes the penalty at death in the electric chair. The trial lasted one day.

Seven Plane Deaths In English Channel

FOLKESTONE, England, June 17.—(AP)—Seven passengers on the giant Imperial Airways liner, City of Ottawa, plunged to their deaths in the English channel three miles off Dungeness, today. Only partial identification had been made tonight and it was feared that one American was among them. Another American, Homer W. Tatham, of Minneapolis, Minn., escaped, and told a graphic story of the plunge of the huge aircraft.

There were 13 aboard the ship including Pilot Captain Brailli and Mechanic W. S. Barnett. They had left Croydon for Paris this morning. A short way from shore it was seen to waver and turn back and then it struck the surface of the water. The pilot had exerted every resource to bring his plane as near as possible to a Belgian trawler, the crew of which was able to rescue four passengers, the pilot and mechanic. The body of a woman and those of two men were removed and the remaining four were believed to be in the submerged fuselage to which the trawler still clung.

One of the most tragic figures was Pilot Captain R. J. Brailli who had remained on board the tiny Belgian trawler Gaby which did such heroic work in rescuing the passengers and carrying out the salvage. The pilot was unable to tear himself away from his plane as it tossed about half submerged in the green waters of the channel with its human freight. When he stepped ashore late tonight his nerves were at the breaking point and he refused to make any statement.

Crowds had assembled during the evening on the beach to watch the trawler crew complete their difficult task. A sudden further sensation was provided when a dark blue airplane came swooping over the coast and crashed on the beach. The pilot was uninjured, although the machine was wrecked, and after putting his plane in charge of two soldiers went to aid in the task of bringing the air liner to the beach.

Charles Albrecht, a member of the crew of the trawler, described the disaster as he had witnessed it.

"We were steaming along when we saw the airplane coming toward us. Suddenly she started to come down. She was quite near when the plane dived towards the sea. It seemed to us as if the pilot tried to right her at the last moment but could not.

"She dived with a great crash into the water only a little distance from us. The plane went right into the water and then the tail and wings reappeared above.

"As quickly as we could we got to her and found about five people had scrambled onto the wings. Two of them were women, another was the pilot, and all were hurt. We took them on to our boat and then started to do what we could to rescue people inside.

"The saloon was full of water. We hacked and made every effort to get in there. It was very difficult. Then we lashed the wrecked machine to our starboard side. A packet came alongside and took off the injured. Still we tried to get out those who were inside the plane. She was terribly damaged and we could not imagine that any one inside could be alive.

"She had come down like a shooting star as you'd call it. The pilot was heroic and would not leave the plane. 'I will stay with my machine,' he said. He stuck there on top, with the plane lashed to our side we drifted westward. Eventually we managed to get into Dungeness and three more bodies were removed from the wreckage."

DAWES AND MACDONALD ARE NOT DISTURBED

LONDON, June 17—(AP)—Neither United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes nor Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today appeared disturbed by the situation which finds concentrated on them the attention of two nations and only slightly less so the interest of the whole world.

They quite strictly adhered to their statement that the real negotiations on the question of disarmament would be launched by dual speeches tomorrow night. Neither could be drawn into saying anything more to throw light on the future proceedings.

HOOVER PERSONALLY INSTRUCTED DAWES

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—President Hoover personally instructed Ambassador Dawes regarding the conversations which he had upon his arrival in England with Prime Minister MacDonald and concerning any continuation of these conferences in the future.

Secretary Stimson has been fully advised of the nature of the conversations the president had with Mr. Dawes before he sailed. He is now absent from the capital.

Other state department officials today said they were ignorant of Ambassador Dawes' instructions. The statement by Mr. MacDonald describing reports of his contemplated visit to the United States as "mostly newspaper talk" were considered by both official and diplomatic circles to be a "diplomatic answer."

LIMIT BORDER PATROLMEN TO THE SERVICE PISTOL

Heretofore the Customs Border Patrols Have in Some Cases Been Armed With Rifles and Shotguns—Order Curtailing Arms Issued by the Treasury Department—Prohibition Commissioner Doran Reports a Noticeable Slackening in Rum Running Across the Detroit River—Free Firing by Border Patrolmen Was Topic of Debate in the House.

WASHINGTON, June 17.— (AP) — Shots fired along the Canadian border by prohibition officers resounded today in the house and in quarters concerned with enforcement, several developments adding momentum to the discussions of the dry law engaging the capital of late.

Representative Clancy, republican, Michigan, stirred the house into debate with charges that the drive against rum runners in the Detroit area has been accompanied by "reckless firing" on automobiles and river boats. This was followed by a plea from Representative Hudson, another Michigan republican, for the members to give prohibition enforcement the same approval a few of them were "giving to bootleggers." He added that bootleggers were armed to fight authorities.

Meanwhile Assistant Secretary Lowman ordered armaments of border customs patrolmen to be confined to the service pistol. Some of them heretofore have been armed with rifles and shotguns.

The assistant treasury secretary at the same time declared the recent shooting of Arthur Gordon by a border patrolman near Mooers, N. Y., was accidental. In a statement he said Inspector Cheatham and F. L. Coveny were chasing Gordon after colliding with an ale-loaded car they had intercepted, and from which Gordon had escaped. Cheatham tripped and his gun discharged accidentally, Lowman continued, after which the inspector found the fugitive lying wounded.

Prohibition administrator Doran simultaneously announced the campaign along the Detroit river had resulted in a noticeable slackening of rum-running activities. For several days past the combined prohibition, coast guard and customs forces along the river have been increased. Doran would not venture an opinion whether the decreased smuggling activities was permanent.

The board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church in its clip sheet listed recent killings by prohibition officers and said "wet journalistic champions" had run the "gamut of abuse and sobs" about the "outrages" of the officials attempting to suppress criminal bootleggers. Deets Pickett research secretary of the board, in a statement declared published reports of the organization officially approving the killing were "utterly erroneous."

The board also replied to charges made yesterday by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts, saying it had made no expenditures in the last presidential campaign which should have been reported under the corrupt practices act. The organization characterized Pinkham's statement as "anti-prohibition propaganda."

KILLING BY BORDER PATROLMAN ACCIDENTAL

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—The killing by a customs patrolman of Arthur Gordon above Plattsburgh, N. Y., was declared by Assistant Secretary Lowman today to have been accidental.

The assistant treasury secretary said Inspector Weldon J. Cheatham and F. L. Coveny had intercepted an automobile loaded with ale while patrolling near Mooers, N. Y. A collision occurred, he continued after which "the rum runner immediately jumped from his car, crossed a fence along the road and started running across a field toward a nearby wood."

Lowman said both inspectors gave chase, and that Cheatham had tripped, "discharging his gun accidentally as he fell."

Gordon was said to have been found wounded shortly afterward.

LESS RUM RUNNING ACROSS DETROIT RIVER

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Prohibition Commissioner Borah announced late today that Prohibition Administrator Stone at Detroit reported there had been a noticeable slackening in rum running across the Detroit river in the last week.

The treasury's drive to stop smuggling of liquor across the Detroit river started a week ago.

REFUSED TO ABANDON WRECKAGE OF SHIP

ASTORIA, Oregon, June 17—(AP)—Refusing to abandon the wreckage of his ship, Captain Louis Johnson of the lumber freighter Laurel which foundered off the mouth of the Columbia river yesterday, remained behind today when coast guardsmen removed the last group of the Laurel's crew awaiting rescue.

Although gambling with death in his lone vigil aboard the broken ship, the skipper was believed to be in no immediate danger of perishing. Whether he stuck by his vessel for sentimental reasons or in the hope of salvaging something for the owners was not disclosed.

The coast guard cutter Red Wing today took off the eight members of the crew remaining on the stern half of the ship, which broke in two.

Life saving boats rescued 24 of the crew yesterday. Russell Smith, 19, of Worcester, Mass., a seaman, was drowned in the first rescue operations. Norman Dabous, 29, San Pedro, Calif., another member of the crew was critically injured. No passengers were aboard.

GENERAL MACARTHUR DIVORCED BY HIS WIFE

RENO, Nevada, June 17—(AP)—Major General Douglas MacArthur was divorced here today by his wife, Henrietta Louise MacArthur, on grounds of failure to provide.

Although the complaint charged failure to provide, and Mrs. MacArthur's testimony had only to do with the allegation, after she left the court room said:

"General MacArthur and I divorced because we were wholly incompatible to each other. I have the greatest respect and admiration for him and we part as friends."

The complaint shows that they were married at Palm Beach, Fla., February 14, 1922. General MacArthur is now in the Philippines, it is understood, his power of attorney coming from Manila. He is a son of Lieutenant General Arthur MacArthur, and wears the D. S. M. and D. S. C. and many foreign decorations.

Villages for miles around were showered with ashes.

The heavy lava flow has ignited the mountainside forests.

ROUNDS OF RECEPTIONS FOR FRENCH AVIATORS

PARIS, June 17—(AP)—The three musketeers of French aviation, Jean Assolant, Rene Lefevre and Armene Lotti, Jr., got fairly started today on their rounds of receptions, welcomes and hero worshipping, which is likely to prove more trying than their actual flight from Old Orchard, Me., to Comillas, Spain.

Pierre Etienne Flandin, former minister of aviation, was master of ceremonies at a reception to the aviators late this afternoon in the Aero club of France. Norman Armour, American charge d'affaires, later greeted them at the American embassy.

Both receptions were enlivened with champagne, wine and speeches. The American stowaway, Arthur Schreiber of Portland, Me., who was present at both functions, was ignored by the official welcomers.

The three aviators will be officially received at the Paris hotel, De Ville, on June 20, by Georges Le Marchand, president of the Paris municipal council, and the entire city government.

QUESTIONING PERSONS ABOUT HAMMER SLAYING

COLUMBUS, June 17—(AP)—Questioning of persons believed to have knowledge of circumstances surrounding the hammer slaying of Theora Hix, 14, Ohio State co-ed, continued tonight as County Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., endeavored to co-ordinate evidence against Dr. James N. Snook, university professor one of the two men held for investigation.

Prosecutor Chester declared during a recess in the questioning that he would have enough evidence to bring charges against Snook, "if things keep going the way they had been". He said that he did not believe that Marion T. Meyers, graduate student at the university and state agricultural research worker, had a hand in the crime.

Both Snook and Meyers have been in jail since their arrests Saturday, less than 12 hours after Miss Hix's mutilated body was found on a rifle range on the western outskirts of the city.

JEWETT CITY

LOCAL FISHERMEN LAND 112 POUNDS OF COD

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 17—The bottom has fallen out, locally, as far as the price of codfish is concerned. Not in recent years has such a remarkable draft of fish been taken from the near by Atlantic ocean, as the Jewett City fishermen's catch of Sunday.

A grand party of nine, all hailing from the borough, signed articles as follows:

Skipper Mello, with his 35-foot auxiliary schooner, lay anchored off the Point Judith breakwater when the early birds arrived. So early indeed, that the lamps were still burning in the Beaver Tail light house, just across the bay.

The skipper's good wife prepared for the men a remarkable breakfast which was intended to serve the two fold purpose of board and ballast. Six miles straight out off Block Island light. Many there are who know all about the steady long ground swell that comes in from the southeast, off Point Judith. In the language of one of the anglers, "Oh! boy, 'twas a mean one." After the hook was down in 15 fathoms of rolling brine, with the slack cable yanking up taut at every roll, the mornings ballast seemed to hint internal indications of shifting. By reason of a fortunate occurrence 112 pounds of Cod and 13 skates, one of which weighed 38 pounds, were landed during the first 30 minutes. Every third roller now, fairly laid the groaning vessel on her beam's ends. Fishing interest slackened. Pale green, and ever so covert glances were directed from one to the other. One man had left his pipe in the cuddy and straightway, two others went below to help him look for it. Wall eyed cod and long black eels, came up and peered over the gunwales, but fishing activity had went.

Strangely yet it often happens thus, there were three, "Chet," Bill McCluggage and Jack Potts, for whom there had been fears that the ocean roll would prove too stomach wearing. They were the three that didn't turn a hair, keeping as untroubled and even keel. Arriving at the dock, Skipper Mello, admitted that the roll certainly did make up a little lease in spots.

WEDDING

The marriage of Emile Bachand, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bachand, and Miss Yvonne Bryant, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bryant, was performed with a nuptial mass at St. Mary's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley. Her bride's maid was her sister, Miss Ida Bryant, of Hartford. She wore a peach georgette frock with picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Ernest Bachand, the groom's brother. Mrs. Noel Garand sang Ave Maria, and after the service, O Promise Me. James Olson played the march from Lohengrin and Mendlesohn's wedding march.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the groom's parents. The dining room was decorated in pink and white, a large bell being suspended over the places for the bride and groom. Just previous to the serving of the breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Bachand were presented $100 each by the groom's parents. The bride received many beautiful gifts. Her gift from the groom was a white gold bracelet and her gift to him was a gold watch and charm. Gold pieces were given the bride's maid and best man. until he learned how to keep perspiration odorless

But Dick wasn't fooled. So many people were dodging him lately, that he began to suspect the trouble.

Dick's the best-liked fellow in his crowd today. Let him tell you how easy it is to keep perspiraton odorless.

• • •

"Funny I didn't tumble to 'B. O.' sooner.

"But that just goes to show how tricky it is. Everybody has to perspire—as much as a quart a day, authorities say. But the odor becomes so familiar, we don't notice its offensiveness. Others do.

"Now I use Lifebuoy—and no matter how hot the weather, I'm safe. With its mild, antiseptic lather Lifebuoy purifies—brings lasting freedom from 'B. O.' Even removes cigarette odors from the fingers.

"Lifebuoy's a marvelous skin soap, too. And by removing germs, it guards health. You can tell Lifebuoy purifies from its pleasant, extra-clean scent that vanishes as you rinse."

Even a substantially greater investment will not bring you all that Cadillac- LaSalle provide Exclusive Handling-Ease and Safety Features—Luxurious Fisher Coachcraft—Matchless Interior Appointments—Greater Dependability and Economy of Operation—Traditional Superiority and Social Prestige—All Are Yours in Cadillac or La Salle without a Penny Price Premium.

IT MAY, at first thought, seem almost an impropriety for Cadillac to state that even a substantially greater financial outlay over and above the cost of Cadillac or La Salle will not bring you the equal of these cars. Yet the facts at once disclose this to be actually and literally true.

Consider for a moment the indispensable safety of non-shattering Security-Plate Glass. This alone will ordinarily cost you a substantial sum extra. It is standard equipment in every Cadillac and La Salle window, door and windshield. For it is Cadillac's conscientious conviction that every motorist is entitled to this protection in these days of high speed and congested traffic.

The luxurious Cadillac-La Salle Fisher Bodies cannot be obtained in any car aspiring to compete with Cadillac and La Salle. Yet an actual survey shows that 94.4% of all motorists who express a body preference prefer Body by Fisher.

You can, of course, duplicate the quality of the exquisite upholsteries that are standard with Cadillac and La Salle interiors, but you will find that you will be obliged to pay extra to do so.

The vigor, stamina, flexibility, dependability and complete freedom from vibration of the matchless 90-degree V-type 8-cylinder power plant certainly cannot be duplicated elsewhere.

Nor can you secure in any other car brakes as smooth, sure, powerful and effortlessly responsive as the Cadillac-La Salle Duplex-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes, for this braking system is protected by basic patents.

Finally, Cadillac does not hesitate to say that it is, perhaps, impossible to place a true dollars-and-cents valuation on the Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission. Experienced drivers have said that they would gladly pay much more for the quick, quiet, clashless, almost uncanny ease of gear-shifting it provides. Women in particular—once they are familiar with this new transmission—will not willingly dispense with its freedom from "tugging" and "timing". No other car can possibly give you the Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission—at any price—for it, too, is protected by basic patents.

These exclusive features of themselves almost compel the choice of Cadillac or La Salle. But when you remember that, in addition, all the smartness, sophistication and social prestige inseparably associated with Cadillac creations are yours—without a penny price premium—it becomes perfectly plain that your choice must lie with either Cadillac or La Salle.

LA SALLE

La Salle is just as easy to purchase as many cars of far less value and far less prestige. And it is far more economical to operate. It is priced from $2295 to $2875. Cadillac $3295 to $3995. All prices f. o. b. Detroit. The General Motors Deferred Payment Plan makes it possible for you to enjoy your Cadillac or La Salle at once and pay out of income.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values. Cadillac-La Salle delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 17—Police of this city joined in the search for William Ryan, Webster man, who has been missing from his home a week. A thorough search has been made of Webster and surrounding towns and today the hunters centered their efforts in woods surrounding Thompson and Wilsonville, where Ryan was reported to have been seen. Until a late hour no word of the enterprise being successful was had.

Louis A. Bodo of Walnut street, owner of "Otto" a German police dog took his pet to Wilsonville and started the dog on trails in an effort to track down the missing man. "Otto" gained considerable notoriety when he joined in the hunt for Alice Corbett, Smith college girl who disappeared in Northampton about three years ago.

A description of Ryan as received by the local police this morning is as follows: 51 years of age, weight about 115 pounds, height 5 feet eight inches, he was wearing a blue suit, a pair of shell rimmed glasses and tan colored shoes when last seen.

A reward of $100 has been offered to the person or persons leading to his discovery. Sergt. George Liard of the local police said this morning that Webster authorities are of the opinion that Ryan is a victim of some mental trouble. The Webster police also said they believed that the lost man may have strayed into the wooded sections on the outskirts of Putnam and urged that the local officers make investigation.

The pocketbook was the property of Mrs. George LaBelle of Providence street. She told Sergt. George Liard she laid the purse on a counter in Woolworth's Saturday afternoon while making a purchase and left forgetting to take her hand bag. Discovering her loss less than two minutes later she returned to the spot but the purse was missing. She remembered two ladies in her presence and suspected one of them of taking the money. Within an hour later Sergt. Liard by the process of elimination had found the "girl in the green hat" who admitted taking the purse, but stated she was planning to advertise her find in hopes of locating the owner. Sergt. Liard returned the purse to Mrs. LaBelle and received commendation of the benefactor for his proficiency.

$12,000,000 STREET BEGGING FOR A NAME

MILWAUKEE, (AP)—Through the heart of Milwaukee's down-town section runs a mile-long street without a name. It is the city's widest, finest thoroughfare.

The driveway, under construction since 1926, is 130 feet wide, and has cost more than $12,000,000. Because it links Cedar and Biddle streets the public calls it Cedar-Biddle street. That's not its name, the city fathers insist, but they haven't given it any other.

The boulevard is planned to divert the bulk of cross-town traffic from crowded business streets.

The Westerly fire department responded to a telephone alarm early Monday morning to put out a blaze in a railroad freight box car, loaded with coils of wire, attached to an eastbound freight train in the New Haven road, which caught fire shortly after 1 o'clock and was sidetracked at Bradford. One end of the box car was in flames when the firemen arrived and with a stream of water from the booster tank it was checked after about three feet had been burned off that end of the car.

In explanation of the cause it was learned that the framework beneath the box car broke, letting the load down onto the wheels. This caused a friction which set fire to the woodwork. The burning car was sidetracked and the freight continued on toward Boston.

A drive will be made to secure an amount of money for summer concerts in addition to the annual appropriation of $100 by the Westerly town financial meeting, for the Westerly band which is to give its first concert in Wilcox park, June 27th, according to announcement of band officials.

The players get no pay for their part in the concerts. The money all goes to make the band organization in Westerly possible.

COLCHESTER, June 17— Joseph Marinello of 305 Orange street, Newark, N. J., was brought before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Brown and Grand Juror Myron R. Abel in a session of the local justice court, Monday afternoon. The accused, who was driving the 1926 Hudson brougham, stolen from the London garage early Sunday morning, was captured by Policeman Anderson, familiarly known as the "lone wolf" on the outskirts of Darien a few hours after the occurrence of the theft.

Hyman London, proprietor of the London garage, I. Cohen, one of the partners of the Cohen Bros. dress factory from which nearly 1,000 dresses and 3,000 yards of piece goods were stolen and Arthur H. Chapman, proprietor of the A. H. Chapman garage from which the brand new 1929 Dodge sport coupe was stolen, all testified before the court. After a brief cross examination the accused was bound over to the next term of the superior court. Pending the raising of $15,000 bords, he was taken to the county jail in New London, by State Troopers Mackenzie and Busch of the Groton barracks.

Up to a late hour Monday afternoon no trace had been reported concerning the whereabouts of A. H. Chapman's new Dodge coupe.

THE DRUNKEN DRIVER.

Why there is so much opposition to the auto driver who is under the influence and why the authorities are justified in prosecutions that are intended to keep them off the highway, and why stiffer penalties are from time to time being applied by legislatures is all quickly explained by the crash which occurred in West Springfield at an early hour Sunday morning. One man was killed, one received a broken leg and one lost the sight of one eye.

According to the report of the affair it was a case where all had been drinking. The driver of the car, not the owner, was killed. The car had been driven for nearly 300 feet on the wrong side of the road before it crashed into an electric light pole and then into a tree with such force that it was completely wrecked.

Apparently they were traveling along a road that was without traffic at that time, but it can be easily understood what the situation would have been had other machines been going in the opposite direction with that machine out of control plunging along on the wrong side of the highway. Only by good fortune it would appear did others escape being involved in a mixup that might easily have caused several deaths.

It is this menace which is the object of new legislation and stricter enforcement. No matter how carefully and skilfully others may drive, they are at the mercy of irresponsible persons every time a person who has been drinking climbs in back of an automobile wheel. There is too much reckless driving on the part of persons in full control of their faculties without tolerating the driver who has been drinking. There are too many accidents even when there is a strict adherence to the rules of the road and whatever steps are taken to prevent any increase because of the driver whose head is muddled through drink is in the interest of public safety.

It is because of the grave possibilities resulting from driving while under the influence that there is such a demand for the elimination of leniency relative to drunken drivers. They certainly give no consideration to the protection of human life or the prevention of accidents.

THE CANAL SURVEY.

Inasmuch as Nicaragua entered into treaty relations with the United States whereby it gave us the perpetual right to construct a canal across that country, there was no reason to anticipate that it would oppose the plan for the making of another survey at this time. In fact, the relationship of the two governments was never better. We have rendered a highly valuable service to that republic and it is appreciated by the government and even by those who seriously objected to it at the start.

The new survey will be made by a battalion of army engineers, and it would not be unwise to see that they are surrounded with the proper amount of protection in view of the feeling which has been manifested by a certain element, but it will be in the interest of the canal rather than anything else that the engineers will move through the country.

We have certain information in regard to the conditions existing in Nicaragua and we know what was encountered along the proposed route when the first survey was made a generation ago, but new engineering practices are employed today. We know what was involved in the construction of the Panama canal and it would be possible to employ that knowledge and modern facilities in Nicaragua. Whether or not engineers today would deviate from the plan of digging the Nicaragua canal as at last decided awaits the outcome of the survey which has been authorized.

It is a case of knowing the conditions and being prepared to go ahead when the word is given. Inasmuch as it would be a job that might require ten years it would not be wise to wait until the last minute before ascertaining the requirements. Possibly in the light of present day knowledge important changes might be made in the route, though the use of the San Juan river and Lake Nicaragua seem highly probable now as in the past. That the survey is going to be made this year gives no assurance as to when the canal will be constructed.

THE FARM BILL.

Thoroughly justified was President Hoover in any elation which he may have displayed in connection with the passage of the farm relief bill. This was the real purpose for which the special session was promised, and the bill as enacted conforms closely to the legislation as approved by the president.

It was not obtained without a fight, a fight which was based upon embarrassing the administration in its efforts to give to the farmers what was promised and what was endorsed by the last election. This centered about the debenture plan, a scheme that was not advanced prior to the election but one which aroused as much opposition for good reason as did the equalization fee. The determined opposition of the president and the house forced the senate to realize that if that plan was insisted upon there would be no farm legislation, and the failure to enact such relief would fall directly upon those senators who were clamoring for it or nothing.

Under the bill as passed there is authorized a revolving fund of a half billion dollars to aid farm cooperatives in marketing crop surpluses. The administration of this fund will be in the hands of the federal farm board made up of eight members each receiving a salary of $12,000. Under the changes agreed upon in conference the board is given headquarters in the District of Columbia instead of the department of agriculture, which indicates a separate identity. Furthermore the stabilization corporation shall have the authority to acquire and store the surplus and also to act as a marketing agency for its stockholders.

While there were indications at one time that no legislation would result at this session to go into effect this year, that fear has been eliminated. The administration has succeeded in its plan and it will now proceed to see that the provisions of the act are put into operation. There will be an opportunity for applying it to conditions in existence or any others which develop. The means of administering such relief as has been advocated has been obtained and interest will now center in the nominations made for the farm board.

TACKLING THE TARIFF.

With the farm bill out of the way, with the census and reapportionment disposed of, interest at Washington must center on the tariff. This is a matter in which the president has displayed much interest and in doing so he has let it be known that he favored a limited revision.

This was emphasized as the session opened and it has been reiterated only recently by the president. In the beginning it was offered as a guide to the action of the congress and in the later declaration it was for the purpose of letting it be known that his attitude had not changed.

As the tariff now stands the house has acted. It has considered and approved the measure which provides changes in what some regard as many schedules, but which is referred to as within the bounds when the action suggested is considered in contrast to a complete revision. There is on the other hand no telling what the senate may do with the bill. Intimations have in fact been to the effect that what the house has done is as nothing compared to what may be expected from the senate.

From the attitude which has been taken by certain senators, including Senator Borah, there may be a limitation placed by the senate on what tariff revision is undertaken. The senator from Idaho favors limiting tariff revision to those interests which concern the farmer. In view of the farm relief purpose of the special session, this might seem plausible, but even if there is need for revision for the farmers it doesn't hold that there is no need for revision in other respects.

The session was not intended to bring about a complete revision of the tariff, but when it comes to removing inequalities or unwarranted conditions the time to do it would seem to be while the machinery is in operation.

NEW IMMIGRATION LAW.

No immigration law has remained unchanged for a great length of time. Alterations come frequently and of late years the tendency has been to reduce the number of aliens admitted.

Under the national origins plan which now promises to go into operation the first of July there will be a change in the numbers for the various nations but the whole number will be reduced only about 12,000. Efforts to have the national origins plan held up for another year have thus far not been successful and at the present time the indications are that a sufficient vote to interfere with it cannot be obtained.

The new plan will mean that admissions will be based upon the nationals of the 1920 census instead of those of the 1890 census. Objection to this has come from those nationals of northern European countries who think there should be no such reduction in admissions from Scandinavia, Germany, Denmark as will result while increases will be permitted to countries of southern Europe. Such changes in the quotas will be based upon nationals already here. It is admitted that it is impossible to be accurate in determining these nationals but it is figured that it is possible to come pretty close.

But with this change which seems likely to go into effect, there is no telling how long it will be permitted to go unchanged. With strong opposition to it before it starts it can be expected to accumulate more opposition as it goes on, while it is not improbable that it will fail to meet the requirements of those who have backed it. With the changing conditions, immigration legislation is due to change. The question is constantly being studied and if we can judge by the experiences of the past the future will see plenty of alterations and adjustments.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, June 17—Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut won his congressional spurs long ago, but he gained added prestige the past week by the masterly manner he handled the passage of the farm bill, which has been a bone of contention between every existing faction of the body of those 435 men composing the national house of representatives. This feather in the Tilson cap followed very closely the triumphal outcome of the census bill which is also due to Tilson's masterly management. Of course Tilson was soundly scolded and blamed by those opposing the measure, but it passed by such a majority that the result showed that Tilson had sized up the situation in advance and knew that he had the house with him in his determination to push the bill through on record time.

Representative Fenn is immensely pleased to be relieved of the heavy load he carried as chairman of the census committee all through the several years, in which the long delayed census bill was buffeted to and fro by advocates and opponents. It has proved a Connecticut victory in the fullest sense.

It is utterly useless to attempt to predict the outcome of the present controversy in congress regarding the extent to which tariff revision shall be applied. That the Hawley bill, as passed by the house, will be so changed by the senate that Hawley won't be able to recognize it, is a foregone conclusion. But whether the insurgent element, now led by Senator Borah, or the conservative element now following the president, will win out, is beyond even a "guess." On this, the proposed recess hinges. It may be determined in a day; it may not be determined till snow flies, too late to put it into effect.

The republicans of congress have seldom found themselves in such a tangle as exists at this moment. Unquestionably President Hoover is a man of such great business ability that he will run the government along business lines; but he has yet to recognize the fact that it is a political government and without cooperation of the congress, he can accomplish nothing in the way of carrying out his policies. He will face this situation throughout the extra session, but it is very generally believed that by the time the winter session opens he will have got his bearings, and will be a leader in fact as well as in name. The worst of it is, in the minds of the regulars, that he was led into the extra session by Borah and Norris, who were the first to leave him in the lurch after it was called. The president is facing possible party disruption through this, but leaders here foresee that all will end well, and that the party will be back on friendly footing as soon as the tariff bill is acted upon. Mr. Hoover has shown himself to be a fearless champion of what he believes is best for the country, and that very courage will have a tendency to inspire a respect that will soothe many party wounds now wide open and very sore to the touch.

When a president of the United States goes to church it isn't mere matter of putting on his "Sunday suit and a top hat," but it means that nearby traffic is stopped; a guard of secret service men are on hand, police keep back a big crowd of sight-seers. When a president enters the church the entire congregation rises and stands until he is seated. At the close of the service all again stand and remain quiet and standing until the president and his official party are outside the doors of the edifice. The crowds outside are kept back some distance by a force of capital police and the secret service men, who closely guard the president.

Even the little Quaker church was besieged and during the first Sundays of the Hoover administration, the crowd was so great that traffic was turned to other streets, motor buses ordered to change their route during the hours of service so great was the throng which "took a chance of seeing the president" when he went to worship in quiet Quaker fashion in the plain little structure in which a still plainer service was held.

In fact so famous has the little Friend's church become that President and Mrs. Hoover often slip away elsewhere for the morning service, and so escape the eager crowd that watches for their expected arrival.

Whether the president be Mr. Hoover or any of his predecessors, there is much necessary form, ceremony, and protection in "going to church." Cars draw up in front of the white house; the president and his wife and often their personal guests over the week end, come down the steps, enter the car, pass swiftly down through the white house grounds, closely followed by cars in which are secret service men. The sidewalks are lined with folk hoping to get a peep at the chief executive. But the real crowd is found at the church entrance and that is why Mr. Hoover often outwits them by forsaking the small Quaker church and attending some big non-ritualistic church of the capitol where his coming has not been heralded except to church officials who reserve a pew for him.

When it is known, however that the president will attend a given church, about one hour before the service several policemen appear on the scene, pews begin to fill and great miscellaneous groups take their stands on the sidewalks near the edifice. They are mostly tourists, and usually include a number of honeymooners. Some are satisfied to get just a look at the president, others want to attend the service. In some churches cards are issued to persons well known, who desire seats, but I doubt if that was done at the little Quaker church, which is so simple, so small and so unobtrusive that we cannot associate with the form and ceremony of issuing cards for anything. In other churches, however the entrance of the presidential party gets formal recognition. The congregation stands until the president walks down the aisle and takes his seat; secret service men attend; and at the close of the service the congregation again rises and stands until the president walks down the aisle and the great doors of the church are closed after him. During every service two alert secret service men from the white house sit directly behind the president, their watchful eyes ever on guard for possible trouble.

President Coolidge followed the Washington custom of a "top hat" for church, but thus far Mr. Hoover has clung to his fedora. But the Hoover's are not constant Washington church goers this hot summer. They go to the rough little fishing camp over on the Virginia shores, for their week ends, and sometimes attend some little church in a neighboring village and sometimes make it a day of entire rest or relaxation and stay in the camp all day. Mrs. Coolidge favored white for her summer wear, whether it was for church or otherwise. Mrs. Hoover likewise wears white much of the time, varying it with vivid colors occasionally, but always wears white, black or soft colors for her church going.

Few if any presidents of recent years have failed to observe Sunday worship. And as there are many churches here known as "The President's church," whether they be Episcopal, Unitarian or Congregational for the most part, with other denominations occasionally sharing the distinction. But President Hoover is the first Quaker to become president of the United States, and his attendance at the quiet little church far up in the city, was the first time it was brought to public notice, in a manner quite out of keeping with its simple and almost silent services.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 17—Retirement from the undersecretaryship of the state department of J. Reuben Clark, Utah, serves to recall vividly scenes in that department last March, just as President Hoover was taking office.

For while Mr. Hoover was being made president, with blare of bands and much acclaim, undampened by the rain, Clark was calling on a long and varied experience with Mexican revolutions to enable the new president to act with amazing speed on the most recent flareup.

It will be recalled that the Mexican revolution, coming as a sort of external voluntary pyrotechnical display to cast sidelights on the Hoover inauguration festivities, broke out the night of March 3.

An Associated Press dispatch telling of the first military coup reached Washington about midnight. That was the first word of it and the state department was promptly informed, as is customary.

Busy Time

Clark was at the department in an hour, boiling out messages of instruction and inquiry to American consuls in Mexico. He also had telephone conversations with his friend and associate, Ambassador Dwight Morrow, in Mexico City.

And, another thing, he had experience. Nearly 20 years ago he was solicitor of the state department when the long cycle of Mexican civil wars had its beginning.

It was quite clear to Clark that about the first thing the new president was going to need was a quick summary of the situation and of the questions the new revolt probably would involve for him.

So while Mr. Hoover was going through the inaugural ceremonies, Clark was preparing a memo for him that was about as complete a thing as can be imagined.

Each possible contingency, with alternative suggestions for action to deal with it, backed up by precedents, was outlined. And that was the document that lay on Hoover's white house desk when he took his seat.

Early Stand

President Hoover held his first press conference March 5. He promptly and unhesitatingly declared his policy, a policy of support for the constitutional government in Mexico.

That had a lot to do with suppression of the outbreak. And it was Clark's long memory and initiative which made swift presidential pronouncement possible.

As a Mormon, the Utah man has had intimate knowledge of the disaster that Mexican civil wars have brought upon Mormon colonies in northern Mexico, now for the most part reclaimed by mesquite brush.

He knows personally many once prosperous but now destitute veterans of that retreat to the border. And it is a gripping, thrilling tale of the frontiers, a story that has never been fully written, as he tells it.

TWO OF A KIND

Time—Tuesday evening. Place—Chicago. Characters (as they speak): Mrs. Kibbey, Mr. Kibbey, Van Epps.

Scene 1: Living room in the Kibbey's modern three-room kitchenette and bath. Mr and Mrs. Kibbey are discovered before their cozy artificial fireplace (all the heat comes from the radiator. Mr. Kibbey is reading something. Mrs. Kibbey is initialing guest towels.

Mrs. Kibbey—John.

Mr. Kibbey (he keeps on reading)—Yes, dear.

Mrs. Kibbey—Have you something on for Thursday evening?

Mr. Kibbey—No, dear.

Mrs. Kibbey—I think I'll ask the Plummers over for dinner. But I don't want to call them until I'm sure you can be here. You won't have to work late, will you?

Mr. Kibbey (still reading)—No, dear.

Mrs. Kibbey—John! I don't think you heard a word. Put down that book. What did I say?

Mr. Kibbey (turning a page)—Yes, dear. Don't worry. I heard you. Go ahead and ask them.

Mrs. Kibbey—You won't forget?

Mr. Kibbey—No, dear. (Mrs. Kibbey looks at her spouse quizzically, sighs and resumes her sewing as the curtain falls.)

Scene 2. Time—Wednesday evening. Place—The Kibbey dinette. As the curtain rises Mrs. Kibbey is just passing Mr. Kibbey the cream for his jello.

Mr. Kibbey—Oh, by the way, Marigold, I almost forgot to tell you. Mr. Van Epps dropped into my office today. His son is going down to my old alma mater this year. Van Epps asked if we could bring the boy over to get the lowdown on profs, etc. So I told him sure, come tomorrow night for dinner. 'S all right with you, honey?

Mrs. Kibbey (putting down the cream decisively) — Tomorrow night! John, don't tell me you made another engagement. After all I said last evening. (Her voice rises to a wail). Have you made a date and ruined my dinner party!

Mr. Kibbey (turning as red as his jello)—Your dinner party! Why—I—I forgot—I'm sorry, Marigold.

Mrs. Kibbey—You'll have to change it. I consulted you first and then made my plans. The Plummers are invited.

Mr. Kibbey—But, my dear, Van Epps is the head of our company. I can't offend him now.

Mrs. Kibbey (bristling) — Mrs. Plummer is the president of my Thursday Afternoon Ladies' Get-Together society. I can't offend her, either.

Mr. Kibbey (getting excited)—You can't offend her! Pish tosh. President of some silly woman's club.

Mrs. Kibbey (agitated and insulted) —So that's it! My friends aren't as important as yours. They can be insulted and ill treated so nothing will hurt the feelings of your precious friends. (Her voice rises to drown out Mr. Kibbey, who has opened his mouth to say something.) I'm to call Mrs. Plummer and say I'm sorry, dear, but after I invited you John said he would rather have his Mr. Van Epps, so I wish you'd take second place and come some time when we can't get any one better.

Mr. Kibbey (placatingly) — Now, now, Marigold, don't take it so hard. Never mind. If you can't change it, I'll tell Van Epps, not to come. I guess he'll understand.

Mrs. Kibbey—No, you won't either! Go ahead and have him. I'll spoil my evening and entertain your friends. Mine can go. They don't matter. Have your Mr. Van Epps—have his whole family. And I'll slave to get them a good dinner.

Mr Kibbey—No you won't. I won't have it. I'll tell him not to come.

Mrs. Kibbey—It's better to insult my friends than yours. (She dissolves into tears). Oh, why can't you (sniff) be as thoughtful as other husbands. I'm sure they wouldn't——

Mr. Kibbey (maneuvering to escape through the dinette door) — Now, Marigold. I'll make it all right with Van Epps. There's no use making such a fuss (and before Mrs. Kibbey can reply he has disappeared as the curtain falls.)

Scene 1. Time — The following morning. Place—Mr. Kibbey's office. Mr. Kibbey is sitting at his desk. Enter Mr. Van Epps.

Mr. Kibbey Oh, I'm so glad to see you, old man. About tonight — my wife——

Mr. Van Epps—That's what I came to see you about. Your wife probably has planned a big meal and now I can't come.

Mr. Kibbey (taken back) — Can't come!

Mr. Van Epps—I'm devilishly sorry, Kibbey, but you see I'd forgotten a little dinner party my wife's giving tonight. And say, did she bawl me out! (He laughs reminiscently.) Accused me of insulting her friends and not being thoughtful like their husbands. Ye gods! I wish we could get along like other couples—There's simply no accounting for some women's choler.

Mr. Kibbey (with a sly smile)—No, old man, there really isn't!—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

First Burying Ground At Mason Monument

Mr. Editor: The contribution of W. S. Case, lately read before the Society of the Founders of Norwich and published in your paper last Saturday, is a worthy and awakening document. For generations it has been understood that John Mason, who fought in Flanders centuries before there were any "Fourteen Points" to muddle-up our world-maps, really did do things for Norwich. And back in 1871 the spirit of recognition of Mason's valor and sacrifices impelled some of our citizens to erect to his memory a suitable granite memorial. It appears now, only 58 years later, that that Mason memorial, together with the first burying ground of Norwich, has been sold and conveyed to a private citizen, who doesn't care for the memorial portion of his purchase.

Even if there were a serious proposal to move the Mason monument to a select spot on Hollyhock island, would that be a really good thing to do? Of course, every engineering problem attending such a removal and location could be taken care of easily, but would it be a good thing to do? Hollyhock island has been built by popular contribution, but would it be a good place for the Mason monument? Hollyhock island lies in the wash of tidewater. Has our appreciation of the deeds of our heroes of the past also descended to tidewater level?

The First Burying Ground At Norwich Town

Mr. Editor:—In spite of the numerous articles which have appeared about the subject there still seems to be considerable misunderstanding with regard to the "First Burying Ground of Norwich Town."

The "Mason monument," of course placed near it with the best intentions, seems only to have confused people's minds about the actual "burying ground" which was a town cemetery in which all the inhabitants who died during the first 40 years were interred.

It was not a "Founders" cemetery but the place to which every sorrowing family in the little settlement bore their dead.

First comers and second comers laid their beloved there in the hope that they might rest in peace in that little green spot their hands had helped to clear.

I appeal through you Mr. Editor, to all the inhabitants of Norwich Town, whether they came here in 1659 or later, to help me to carry out these old inhabitants' intentions.—Let them think of their own fathers and mothers and grandparents whom they have more recently laid to rest and help me to prevent this breach of trust with the dead to whom we all owe so much.

Yours truly,
EDITH HUNTINGTON WILSON.

YOUR HEALTH

Mothers Seeking Education at Well Baby Conferences.

By Marion Albro Bleason, M. D., Director, Division of Child Welfare, Rhode Island Board of Health. (From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Permanent well baby conferences are usually sponsored by private agencies, such as the Parent-Teacher associations and the nursing organizations. The place of meeting may be the school house, following the afternoon session, or the rooms of the nursing organization, preferably the latter. The fact that the school room is not available till late in the afternoon is a factor that makes it less desirable.

The cooperation of a local physician, or physicians in rotation, is a necessity for the success of the conference.

The regular weighing and measuring of the child holds the mother's interest, while the inspection furnishes the opportunity for individual instruction in infant and child hygiene, relative to feeding, clothing, habit formation, etc. Such subjects as vaccination, diphtheria immunization, quarantine, and isolation of sick children are handled in short talks to the group as a whole.

Referring all defects found to the family physician secures the cooperation of the medical profession as a whole, thus insuring the progress of the health campaign. No community can advance beyond the standards of the local professional men. If the profession does not come up to the standards desired by the community, there is but one solution. An enlightened, intelligent and aroused public opinion can secure what it wants. But it must be made worth while. We usually get what we pay for.

The danger of overstepping and prescribing treatment is one that must be borne continually in mind by those conducting the conference. When treatment is given, it changes the well baby conference to a medical clinic, and the real purpose of the conference—education of the mother—recedes to the background; good faith with the medical profession is violated, and the ultimate success of the conference retarded.

The itinerant conference presents greater problems of organization than does the permanent conference. Its success depends on the quality of the preliminary work done, the enthusiasm of the local committee, and the cooperation of the profession. Because of its transient nature, the work done must be more intensive. Mothers are always interested in the well-being of their children, but there is an inertia and a tendency to follow the line of least resistance inherent in man which requires efficient follow-up work in order to obtain desired results, namely, correction of remediable defects. The permanent type of conference, with weekly sessions, furnishes the opportunity for such continued oversight and repetition of advice.

We believe that the well baby conference should enroll children up to school age, in other words care for the pre-school child as well as the infant. The older children will not need to attend as frequently as the infants, but their occasional visits lay the foundation for regular medical inspection, which is one of the results to be hoped for in conducting such conferences.

The well baby conference should occupy an important place in any program of child welfare work.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Jenny Wren Hunts in Vain

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Persistence is a virtue when 'tis put to proper use;
But e'en a virtue, it would seem, may sometimes lack excuse.
—Old Mother Nature.

Jenny Wren couldn't forget that queer insect in the shed of Farmer Brown's house. You will remember it was what is called a House Centipede. So she kept going back to look for it again. She didn't see it until the next day and then she spied it. She darted at it. As before, it ran into a crack. Jenny grabbed twice. Each time all she got was a leg and these she dropped. For a moment she quite lost her temper. But when she had calmed down a little she heard again that funny little squeak. This time there were two squeaks. That is to say, a squeak came from two different places.

Jenny cocked her head to one side in order to listen to it. It sounded like the very faint squeak of an insect.

"There must be two of them," said Jenny to herself. "It's queer I can't find them."

Just then Mr. Wren joined her. "What are you hunting for in here?" he demanded.

"Listen!" said Jenny.

Mr. Wren cocked his head on one side and listened. "There are some insects around here," said he, and began to look about.

"That's what I thought, but I can't find them," said Jenny.

"What are those things kicking down there?" asked Mr. Wren.

"Legs," replied Jenny. "Twice I've tried to catch a queer fellow with long legs and all I've got was those legs."

"That noise seems to come from around them somewhere," said Mr. Wren, listening more intently than ever.

"I know it," said Jenny, "but you can see for yourself that there are no insects around them."

It was true. There wasn't the smallest of insects to be seen anywhere about. You may be sure that two pairs of bright eyes like those of Jenny and Mr. Wren would have seen the smallest insect. It was very mysterious. Together they hunted all over, but all their hunting was in vain. Finally they gave it up, for they could waste no more time with those hungry babies over in the nest.

But Jenny Wren couldn't forget that mysterious squeaking. She came back later. There was no squeaking. Once more she looked everything over thoroughly, then finally gave it up. "It is too much for me," said she. "I wonder if I shall hear that squeaking here again. I don't like mysteries. I don't like not being able to find things I know I ought to find."

Every morning the first thing Jenny Wren went to look for that Centipede, and every morning she stopped a minute or two to listen for that queer squeaking. But she didn't see the Centipede and she didn't hear the squeaking. Meanwhile the babies were growing fast and requiring more and more food. She forgot all about the Centipede. There was no time to think about anything but food. It was food, food, food from morning till night. She and Mr. Wren hardly had time to get enough for themselves. Hungry babies must be fed.

MISS NORTON GIVES ACADEMY MONEY FOR HEALTH CENTER GYM BUILDING

A sufficient sum of money to be used for the purpose of the erection of a new building for the use of Norwich Free Academy as a health center, donated by Miss Ella M. Norton, a member of the board of incorporators of the Academy, in memory of her father, Henry B. Norton, came in the form of a surprise announcement at the annual meeting of the Alumni association of the Academy held Monday evening at Slater Memorial hall. A second feature of the meeting was a most delightful address delivered by Prof. Charles R. Lanman of Harvard, N. F. A. '67, whose talk centered on good will among nations.

The announcement of the gift, as read by Shepard B. Palmer, president of the Academy corporation, is as follows: Miss Ella M. Norton, a member of the board of incorporators of the Free Academy, has given to the Academy a sufficient sum of money for the erection of a new building for the use of the school as a health center. This gift is made by Miss Norton in memory of her father, Henry B. Norton, who was one of those instrumental in the establishment of the Academy and during all of his life much interested in its work and prosperity. It will be known as "The Norton Memorial Building". It is expected that the money already pledged by former pupils for a memorial of the late Professor Hutchison will be used in the equipment of a room in this building to be known as "The Norton-Hutchison Gymnasium".

The general dimensions of the Norton Memorial building will be 150 by 75 feet, to be located between Slater Memorial hall and the house occupied by Prof. Henry A. Tirrell of the Academy. The front of the building will be occupied by the girl's department and the rear of the building by the boys' department.

As one enters the front of the building on the right will be the corrective gymnasium for the girls and also leading off of that a storage room for storing temporary bleachers. On the left of the main corridor will be stairs leading to the floor above; also offices for the instructor and her assistant. On the floor above will be the girls' shower room with 40 individual compartments; also a room for the gymnasium suits, etc.

Passing through the main corridor the large gymnasium is entered. This room has an overall dimension of 95 by 72 feet and is arranged so that bleachers may be put on either side for basketball league games. The main gymnasium is divided by a folding partition, 22 feet high, which makes the large room into two gymnasiums, one for the boys and one for the girls, each room being 47 by 69 feet. The boys' department faces on the athletic field and on the main floor contains a corrective gymnasium with office for the instructor and his assistant, and over this department is the shower and locker room.

The building will be of brick exterior with limestone trimming and the inside finish of the gymnasium proper will be glazed brick. The shower rooms will be in tile with modern plumbing fixtures.

Before the meeting was called to order by President Charles L. Stewart a delightful concert programme was rendered by the Academy orchestra under the direction of Frederick L. Cranston. The reports of the secretary, Miss Alma Bowman, and of the treasurer, Raymond V. Congdon, were given and accepted, the latter report showing a balance in the treasury of $774.35. This figure does not count the dues received by mail after Monday noon and that taken in at the meeting.

The association appropriated $250 to Norwich Free Academy towards meeting expenses in connection with a course in music appreciation, with the understanding that the trustees of Norwich Free Academy appropriate a like amount, to be used the following year. President Stewart made the announcement that Mr. Tirrell had informed him that the course had been successful in the past school year.

A report on the Hutchison Memorial gymnasium fund, given by Mrs. Elizabeth Brewster Davis, showed that $8,482 had been received by the committee in charge towards this fund. Mrs. Davis said that contributions had been received from 224 different contributors, and that there were 17 unpaid pledges of a little over $900. A number of other people also had signified their intentions of contributing upon the start of the erection of the building and on the condition of the degree of progress.

Officers Elected

The list of officers to serve for the ensuing year, as prepared by the nominating committee, were read by Harrison C. Noyes, chairman, and was as follows: President, Charles L. Stewart; vice president, Mrs. William H. Park; secretary, R. B. Sherman; assistant secretary, Miss Alma Bowman; treasurer, Raymond V. Congdon; members of the executive committee for four years, Mrs. Russell W. Baird and Charles V. James, who were elected the nominating committee are Herbert J. Ferguson and Raymond B. Sherman.

Address By Professor Lanman

At this point President Stewart introduced the speaker of the evening Prof. Lanman of Harvard, who was graduated in the tenth class, '67, from the Academy. President Stewart referred to him as one of the most distinguished alumnus.

In opening his address Prof. Lanman amused his large audience with remarks of a very humorous nature, after which he came into the serious portion of his talk, which was given, in part, as follows:

The World war gave us the most horribly convincing proof of all the ages, that force, driven by ill-will can never adequately settle questions of justice between nations: and that this can be done only by calm reason, backed up by good will. It proved, in short, that we must quit once and for all, assuming that our neighbor is the hating one.

And so, a group of men, eminently gifted with strength of intellect and nobility of character and practical wisdom, assembled at Paris as the reparations commission. The task was long. Often, discouraging. Above all else, it needed faith, it needed persistence, it needed good-will.

And good-will was victor. Not Germany, nor another, nor France. It may well be that our children's children will count as the birthday of the new era of human history, that day of week before last, when the reparations agreement was signed in Paris; and that they will count as decisive factors in human progress.

Let me cite some instances that show how eagerly the world welcomes the cheering signs of returning good will. A few weeks ago the Zeppelin started from Lake Constance to cross the ocean. She was driven back to a forced landing in the valley of the Rhone. Efficiently and delightedly the French sprang to the aid of their one-time "fiends." And delightedly the world clapped hands. So, true is Buddha's teaching of five and twenty centuries ago: "Hatred never comes to an end by hating. What brings hatred to an end is loving, that is the practice of good-will."

The journey of our President-elect Hoover to South America was to show good-will. What an admirable service to all the world! So was Lindbergh's flight thither. So was the prompt conference of Ambassador Dawes with Premier Ramsey MacDonald yesterday. So will be the premier's visit with President Hoover at Washington. So are the gifts of the Rockefellers to relieve the hideous ailments of the tropical sufferers from hook-worm, on the one hand; or, on the other hand, to restore the Cathedral of Rheims, whose incomparable beauties have for centuries lent their dignity to the coronation of the kings of France.

All these happy things—outwardly so diverse—are the expression of one fundamentally similar state of mind, a recognition of the changed basis of international relations and duties. The French government has decided to abolish the ancient dignity of Marshal of France. For seven centuries, from the time of Louis IX, Saint Louis, to the days of Joffre and Foch, this proud title has been used to crown achievement of war. The action of government is devoid of appeal to vulgar applause, and is all the more deeply significant as testifying to their deliberate and resolute purpose to renounce war as a means of settling international misunderstandings.

As a parting statement Prof. Lanman said, "What chance have we got. We have a chance to contribute to the good-will of the world. It will be done. It is being done this moment."

At the conclusion of his talk Prof. Lanman was given tremendous applause by his appreciative audience.

Selections By Academy Quartet

Three pleasing numbers were then rendered by the Academy quartet, Stewart Hynd, Earl Swan, Frank Dodge and Oliver Welte; Dwight W. Richardson, accompanying.

A message from the graduating class of 1929 was brought to the gathering by Jack Marks, president.

President Stewart made the announcement that it was the hope of the officers that a representative of the Norwich Society of New York could be here tonight and address the gathering. He said that he had received a letter from J. Olin Howe, president of the society, expressing his deep regret that he was unable to be present.

Following this announcement Shepard B. Palmer, president of the board of trustees made the important announcement of the gift of Miss Norton and made reference to Mr. Norton, in whose memory the gift is made, especially of his interest in the Academy and of his rapid strides in business. He also gave a brief synopsis of his life and his connections in this city, remarking that he had come to Norwich from Brandford, entered as a clerk in a store, and within three years was head of it, the Backus and Norton store, wholesale grocers. Mr. Norton was an original founder of the Academy, president of the Attawaugan company, and had other important connections, Mr. Palmer said.

Teacher Changes

Principal Henry A. Tirrell of the Academy also made brief remarks, announcing the teacher changes at the school as follows: Miss Lillian Boynton, Miss Jean Theve, Miss Lorinda Orn, Miss Viola Levitsky are leaving this year, all for the purpose of getting married. Several teachers have been secured to take the places of these.

Dancing was enjoyed after the meeting.

A nolle was entered in the case of John Mitchell, 21, of New York city, on the payment of $11, when he was presented in the city court Monday morning on three charges, operation of a motor vehicle without a driver's license, without registration and without lights. In view of the fact that Mitchell possessed a driver's license and registration, which were at home, the small penalty was imposed. RECENTLY ORGANIZED MOHAWK CO. IS TO USE NORTH MAIN STREET MILL

What promises to be a valuable addition to the industries of Norwich is the Mohawk Company, Inc., which was recently organized for the treating of textile fabrics and the production of specialty lacquesr.

The company has purchased the Dupont Viscoloid company's plant off North Main street, which was formerly the Hubbard paper mill. It is now engaged in removing the old machinery and getting ready for the new equipment. The plant will be in operation as soon as it can be made ready and the new machinery is installed.

The company includes C. M. Patterson of Hartford, president and treasurer; H. V. Patterson of New York, vice president; Kenneth B. Church of this city, secretary and manager.

President Patterson was for many years associated with Colonel Herman A. Metz of New York. Vice President Patterson held a responsible position with E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., of Wilmington, Del. Secretary and Manager Church has been chemist with the Aspinook company of Jewett City for the past nine years where he was also in charge of permatex production which fabric was made under his patent. Mr. Church concluded his services with the Aspinook company a week ago.

The DuPont plant is well adapted for the needs of the Mohawk company and its acquisition by the new company reduces the number of available manufacturing plants in this city.

PALATABLE FOODS WIN APPETITE

Scientist Urges Healthful Use of Sugar

"An important thing to remember about eating is that we should enjoy our food," says one of the country's eminent food scientists. "Remember that sugar is one of the finest condimental foods in the world."

He goes on to explain that sugar is nature's incomparable flavor. It helps to relieve the monotony of our daily diets. It is an aid to nutrition and health because it adds to the enjoyment of eating, and for that reason enables us to eat a greater variety of other healthful foods, by improving their flavors.

"Sugar is wholesome," he said, "and it is inexpensive. Everyone can benefit from this flavor which adds so much pleasure to nearly all the other foods we eat."

The advice of this famous man can be carried out in planning almost all daily dishes. Fresh or cooked fruits are full of minerals, vitamins and other elements necessary in the diet. They are made more delightful to our taste by the addition of sugar.

The flavors of nearly all vegetables are very much improved by adding a pinch of sugar in cooking. Sugar in connection with chocolate or cocoa makes milk a delicious beverage. Most foods are made more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

LACROIX LEADS ACADEMY HITTERS WITH SEASON'S AVERAGE OF .456

Amie (Buck) LaCroix, who divided his time between center field and second base during the Academy season, led the Wildcats in batting with probably a record-shattering average of .456, according to the averages announced Monday night. LaCroix, with 66 hits in 79 trips, including at least one hit in every game in which he played, compiled the highest average of any Academy regular in modern times and it is mighty near the record for an extensive schedule. Hal Cummings, third sacker, followed LaCroix, in second place with an average of .413 on 31 hits in 75 times at bat. These were the only two .400 hitters, matching the Jarvis-Greene combination of 1928.

Armand (Bud) Fontaine, catcher, was third with .367, just one point better than Capt. Jack Marks, who made a great comeback in the last few weeks after being out for several games with an injured ankle. Anso Tombari closed out the select first five and also was the last hitter over .350, batting for .357.

Tombari was the home run champ of the club, with three circuit clouts of the four made, Red Fagan getting the other. LaCroix led in triples with five, one better than Fagan while Hal Cummings and Anso Tombari were tied for doubles with six with LaCroix next with four.

The sacrifice hit crown went to Chubby Gibbs, veteran shortstop, with Tombari next while Alec Arico, with nine and Gibbs and Cummings with eight apiece, were the leaders in stolen bases.

LaCroix, besides leading in batting, also had the most hits, 36, and hit for the most total bases, 50. Tombari batted in the most runs, 25, and Cummings scored the most runs, 30.

The team hit for the very good average of .330.

It's hot, ain't it?

And when you're hot you ain't got no pep nor nothing. That's the way I feel now but the editor says I got to write enough to fill the space or I lose my job.

That's the hell of having to work for a living. If you don't do just as the boss says you're canned. And if there ain't no money coming in you don't eat, and if you don't eat you sooner or later croak.

That's why I'm trying to fill up the space in this morning's issue of this paper. I don't want to starve yet. There's lot pleasanter deaths than that.

But just them few remarks set me to thinking if I'd be any happier if I didn't have to work and could do just as I pleased. Say, folks, I'll bet I'd get tired of just doing nothing—but I'm willing to try.

Say I guess a lotta money can be a curse as well as a blessing. I've seen a lotta folks what was rolling in wealth but they wasn't having a good time. They only think they are.

If you got a lotta money there's plenty of guys what is trying to get it away from you. Then you eat a lotta rich food and first thing you know your stomick's gone haywire.

You suffer and you wish for the crackers and milk of the days when you was poor. Didja ever see these rich boys ordering milk toast and a glass of milk, when you know they has been used to porterhouse steak and mushrooms.

Them's the fellers what money knocked the skids from under. I'd bet they'd give all the money they had to be able to eat one good square meal again. That's one thing money won't do, buy health and happiness. Them two things is gifts.

Well folks I guess the space is filled so I'll knock off writing. Still I'd better confess that I'd like to get a crack at a little real jack, I'd take a chance on getting indigestion.

TWO GOVERNORS MAY BE PRESENT AT QUINTERO-MAYS BOUT THURSDAY

Gov. John H. Trumbull and Gov. Frank T. Allen of Massachusetts have been extended invitations by State Athletic Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue to attend the Mays-Quintero bout at New London Thursday evening. The two governors will be at the Yale-Harvard boat race the following day and are expected to be in New London the night before the race. Not only will the bout be honored by the presence of two governors, but there will be quite a number of other notables in the arena that night.

With the crowd assembling for the rowing classic on Friday New London will be filled to overflowing with visitors from far and near. The newspaper men from all the metropolitan dailies are planning to attend this bout which is evidence in itself that the bout is worthy of notice throughout the fistic world. Already reservations seats are being made by fight fans from Boston and New York who are coming on to see the fight. Four days before the fight more than half the ringside seats have been sold. Promoter Ernest Fakourey said last night that the seat sale up to the present time was the best of any fight yet.

Mays completed his training for the bout Monday and today and Wednesday will devote his time solely to light work. In his workout yesterday he looked fast and fit for the bout. He tipped the scales at 134¼ pounds and said that he felt fine and was confident that he could take the decision from Quintero.

The colorful Spanish-American boxer fro mTampa, Fla., will arrive in New London today and will complete his training at a New London gym. Quintero is the ruling favorite to win, established as such through his record against many of the top-notch fighters in the lightweight division. Quintero is confident that he can win in the early rounds by a knockout but those who know Mays are rather of a different opinion.

The strong supporting card for the main attraction is also drawing considerable interest throughout the state as some topnotch boys are appearing.

PASSAIC COP DRAWS DOWN $25,000 FOR RACE

LOS ANGELES, June 17—(AP)—C. C. Pyle's second annual trans-continental peripatetic pageant nestled in a niche of sports history tonight with Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., a Finn by race and "cop" by trade, heading the list of those enriched thereby in cash and reputation.

Salo won the long footrace and $25,000 first prize money, by a scant two minutes and 47 seconds. The course was more than 3,600 miles long, starting at New York last March 31 and ending here yesterday. Salo's total elapsed time for the distance was 525 hours, 57 minutes and 20 seconds.

Peter Gavuzzi, Italian living in England, was second with a total elapsed time of 526 hours and seven seconds. His prize was $10,000, a total of $60,000 in prizes is to be divided among the first 15 of the 19 runners who finished. One hundred and four men started.

The finale of the race was held over a course of 26 miles and 385 yards at Wrigley field here. Salo was the first to finish this lap, which he entered nine minutes and 56 seconds behind Gavuzzi's total time. Sam Richman of New York, finished second in the local marathon.

Giusto Umek of Italy won third prize of $6,000 in the trans-continental race. His time was 533 hours 46 minutes and 52 seconds. Fourth place prize of $3,500 went to Richman with 571 hours 29 minutes and 29 seconds. Paul Simpson, Burlington, N. C., college student, was fifth with 586 hours 30 minutes and 53 second and a prize of $2,500.

COOK WINS FROM RISKO ON A FOUL

BOSTON, June 17—(AP)—George Cook, Australian heavyweight, won on a foul from Johnny Risko of Cleveland, half way through their 10-round bout here tonight in the Braves field show that opened at Boston's boxing season. Risko had every round up to the point where the referee ruled that he dropped Cook with a low right hook.

The Cleveland baker gave Cook an unmerciful body whaling for four rounds and would have punished him about the head if the Australian had refrained from holding. He clinched at every opportunity, thereby forcing Risko to center on his midriff. Cook's bobbing tactics made several of Risko's blows appear low and his handlers claimed a foul early in the third round.

When the fifth started, Cook rushed into a clinch and Risko tried to break free by hooking hard with both hands to theb ody. Cook dropped under the barrage and, as he squirmed about on the canvas, the referee heeded the claim of foul which was raised in his corner and awarded him the decision.

Cook's first move in the battle was a foul, a butt which opened a slight cut over Risko's eye soon after the starting bell. Risko did not complain and the referee allowed Cook to continue after warning him sharply.

LERMOND RUNS FASTEST MILE SINCE 1915

NEW YORK, June 17—(AP)—The long suffering record for the 100 yard dash was spared further abuse in the big benefit track field meet at the Yankee stadium tonight but the classic mark for the one-mile run had the narrowest of escapes.

Shirtly before Claude Bracey, the Texan, trimmed Eddie Tolan of the University of Michigan in a 9 4-5 100-yard dash, young Leo Lermond of the Boston A. A. reeled off America's fastest outdoor mile turned in since 1915 the second fastest ever recorded in this country.

Lermond chalked up his great performance in a thrilling duel with Gus Moore, Brooklyn harriers, 22-year-old holder of the national cross country championship, who carried him along until the final straightaway at a pace that made the marvellous time possible.

Lermond's mile was the second fastest ever run in this country outdoors. In 1915 4:12 3-5 was reeled off at Cambridge, Mass., by Norman Taber of Brown university, a mark which stood as the world's record until Nurmi lowered it.

TAFTVILLE LEGION WINS SECOND STRAIGHT GAME

The Taftville American Legion team won their second straight game in the Junior Twilight league at the J. B. Martin diamond, swamping the Y. M. C. A. by a 20 to 7 score.

The "Y" was completely outclassed and the result of the contest was never in doubt after the first inning. The Y. M. C. A. in an effort to stop the Legionnaires used three twirlers but they all looked about the same to the hard hitting Taftville outfit. The winners collected a total of twelve hits which together with thirteen errors by the "Y" accounted for the large score. Mercik, a left hander, twirled fo rthe Legionnaires and although hit rather hard was able to take it easy during most of the contest thanks to a big lead piled up early in the game.

The Y. M. C. A. started off well, scoring three runs in the first inning. Taftville came right back, however, going them one better in their half. From that time on, the game was all Taftville, the up-town team scoring six in the second, three in the third, four in the fifth and three more in the sixth. The "Y" added one more run in the second and three in the sixth for their final score.

Elkin Smith's Home on Canterbury Turnpike

MANY HANDSOME RESIDENCES BEING BUILT IN NORWICH TOWN SECTION

Within the past year or two there has been a marked tendency of Norwich people to build outside the city limits and the section of Norwich known as the Harland road and Canterbury turnpike has been built up very fast. During the past year nearly a dozen houses have been completed in this section of the town and all of them are very attractive.

Among those completed on Harland road is the very attractive home of Dr. Frank D. Coles, which has been built within the past year. This house is ideally situated on a large plot overlooking Norwich Town to the west and affords a splendid view far to the south. The house is of the colonial type of architecture with a sun porch with a southern exposure. The house is finished in broad clapboards and is painted white with a red composition shingle roof. The grounds about the house are very attractive with a bank of flowering shrubs bordering the entrance which is of tapestry brick. The interior of the house is exceptionally well planned, there being a large living room with fire-place. The rooms are attractive in hardwood and hard finish plaster. In the rear of the house is a large garage part of which is used for an animal hospital which the doctor conducts.

On the Canterbury turnpike one of the prettiest homes is that of Elkin Smith. This home is of the Dutch colonial type and is set well back from the street. The house is two stories high, the first story being in tapestry brick and the second story of stucco. There is a sun porch at the southern end of the house. The entrance to the house is of colonial architecture and is enclosed in glass. The grounds about the house are very attractive with a bank of evergreens at each side of the entrance and bordered by a small hedge of flowering plants. The walk leading to the house is of white cement and the steps are of tapestry brick to harmonize with the building. The interior of the house is very artistically arranged and very prettily appointed. In the rear of the house is a large garage. The house is heated by an ABC automatic oil-burner installed by Harold C. Dahl of Boswell avenue. The plumbing equipment is very modern and of the best type.

These two houses are examples of the types of houses that are being put up in this section of the town making it one of the prettiest of the residential places in Norwich. Many other houses are being erected in this part of Norwich but have not yet reached the completion stage.

New London

Property at the corner of West Colt street and Connecticut avenue has been sold to the Hartford Roman Catholic Diocesan Corp. as a site for a church for Syrians of this city. Plans for the proposed edifice are now being prepared and building operations, it is expected, will be started shortly. Preparations for the construction work are being made under the direction of Rev. Anthony Aneed.

The contract has been awarded for a house to be built at the corner of Crest street and Berkeley avenue for John Sexton. The house will be of frame construction, two stories high, and will cost about $8,000.

The permit has been issued for a house to be erected on Colman street at a cost of approximately $4,000. The dwelling will be 26x38 feet, arranged for one family.

A New London builder has the contract to make alterations to the present two-family house at 148 Williams street which will be remodeled for a three-family dwelling. The changes will include an outside stairway and interior alterations.

A Waterford builder has the contract for a dwelling to be built on Park street for Francis Jackson. From private plans, the house will be of old English style, frame construction, 28x26 feet.

Announcement has been made that plans are under way looking to the erection in the near future of a combination administration and classroom building at Connecticut college for Women. It has also been decided that upon completion of the administration building changes will be made in the present library. The proposed administration building will be four stories high, of stone construction, 50x150 feet. The first story will contain offices, waiting rooms, etc. Administrative offices will be on the main floor. There will be classrooms on the second story and lecture rooms on the upper floor. ELEVEN BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED BY FIRE MARSHAL DURING PAST WEEK

During the past week there have been 11 permits granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft, bringing the total number of permits for the month of June to 20, a figure that is far ahead of the normal average for the first two weeks. The permits issued during the past week are for garages and alterations to present buildings.

The expense of the new construction as estimated by the applicants is approximately $3200. This figure is possibly lower than the actual work will cost, as estimated expense of construction is found to be considerably under the figure given in the applications.

Considerable work has been accomplished on local buildings in and about Norwich. The Bailey property on Main street at the corner of Main and North Main has been torn down to make room for the new filling station of the Standard Oil company. Work on the foundations for the new building will start as soon as the debris from the old barn has been cleared away. The new station is to be erected by a local building firm and the estimated cost is $5000

J., followed. The school chorus sang There's Music in the Air. The orchestra played an overture. Then Dr. Charles De Lancey Alton, M. The school principal, Eugene W. Ellis, announced the winners of the various prizes offered in the school. INDUSTRIALS, RAILS AND PUBLIC UTILITIES MOVED HIGHER IN MARKET

NEW YORK, June 17—(AP)—Aided by easing under conditions which in the case of call money are believed temporary, speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement on the New York stock exchange today. While the advance was by no means uniform, and final quotations disclosed a rather long list of net declines. The Associated Press indices of 50 industrials 20 rails and 20 public utilities all moved higher, the last named setting a new high record. Total sales fell just short of 3 1-4 million shares.

Call money held steady at 7 per cent. all day with loans in the outside market reported as low as 6 1-2. This was attributed to the government overdraft in connection with the payment of June 15 maturities, and the delay of the federal income tax checks in being cleared through the banks. Higher call money is expected not later than Wednesday. Meanwhile, fundamental conditions in the time money market were easier with a further shading of rates of nearly all maturities.

The high rate of output and consumption in the leading industries, favorable merger and dividend rumors and the prospect for an unusually excellent series of first half year statements provided the background for the advance in prices. The outside public apparently was timid about reentering the market, but pool managers resumed operations on the theory that small speculators and investors would be back in the market after the turn of the month.

Recent organization of large public utility holding companies by powerful banking interests, coupled with the rapidly growing earnings of the leading power and light companies, has stimulated the demand for the public utility stocks. Commonwealth Power, a recent favorite, broke nearly 14 points on profit-taking in today's market, but Detroit Edison, Standard Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas and North American forged into new high ground.

Concurrent strength and activity of U. S. Steel common, General Motors and Radio, three of the so-called market leaders, had a bullish effect on sentiment. Cutten and Fisher interests were reported to be heavy buyers of steel and motors, while Radio, in which a large short interest has been built up on rumors of a poor six months report, probably rallied on covering.

Buying of the oils was rather selective in character. Entrance of a new group in Lago was immediately reflected by a sharp runup in that stock to a new high record. Atlantic Refining also moved into new high ground and Houston was run up 6 1-2 points, buying of the other oils was rather selective in character.

Coppers, which were strong Saturday, ran into some rather heavy profit-taking. Aviation, motor accessory and chemical shares were mixed, Montgomery-Ward, following the precedent set by other stocks which have "rights" over-hanging the market, dropped back below 110. The possibility of an inauguration of dividends of Hahn Department Stores next month helped to maintain interest in the other merchandising issues.

General Electric soared 10 points to another new high record at 305 1-4, closing around the top, other issues to move into new high ground included Allis Chalmers, Columbia Carbon, Glidden, National Distillers Products and preferred, Snider Packing preferred, Union Carbide and Continental Baking A.

Rails also presented several points of strength, with New Haven, Norfolk & Western and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis breaking through their previous 1929 highs, Jersey Central showed a net gain if more than 10 points and Chesapeake & Ohio 5.

Grain futures lost ground on reports of better weather, Chicago wheat losing about 2 cents a bushel, cotton rallied 50 to 75 cents a bale on buying by trade interests. Sugar prices held firm.

In the foreign exchange market, French francs crossed 3.91 cents to a new high for the year, sterling held around the year's low and Argentine paper pesos dropped to a new low in what was described as a demoralized market.

BOND MARKET.

NEW YORK, June 17—(AP)—Convertibles and a few rails and industrials attracted most of the attention on today's irregular bond market. Behind the trading was a somewhat better tone induced by the whittling of another quarter of one per cent. from the time money rate, bringing the charge down to 8 per cent.

American Telephone convertible 4 1-2s again changed hands in enormous volume and made a maximum gain of about 2 points as turnover crossed $1,000,000 par value. The bond closed at a net advance of 1 3-8. International Telephone 4 1-2s, which can be exchanged for stock on July 1, mounted 2 points, while Atchison 4 1-2s and New Haven 6s were also strong in the share privilege group. An exception was the Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2 per cent. issues, which dipped 7 1-2 points, a sharp reaction from its high of late last week.

Steel obligations showed a mixed trend on moderate turnovers, the Bethlehem 6s and 5 1-2s improved 7-8 and 1-2, respectively, while U. S. Steel 5s held unchanged from Saturday in an active market. Illinois Steel debenture 4 1-2s met pressure and dropped 1 1-2, while Midvale Steel 5s made a small advance.

Rails displayed marked irregularity. Issues of the Canadian roads worked mostly lower and were joined behind minus signs by the Erie, St. Louis & San Francisco general 4s and 4 1-2s, Seaboard 6s, Missouri Pacific general 4s and St. Paul adjustment 5s. A striking indication of the fundamental thinness of the market, however, was seen in the sale of one Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville refunding 4, a high grade bond and infrequently traded, at a decline of 9 5-8 from the last transaction.

Rails making nominal gains included Missouri, Kansas & Texas adjustment 5s, Missouri Pacific refunding 5s, Pennsylvania Consolidated 4 1-2s, Western Maryland 4s and Louisville & Nashville 4s.

Announcement that Toho Electric Power company was coming into the New York market tomorrow with a loan of more than $11,000,000 in short term notes brought out some inquiry for listed issues of that company, and the 7s and 8s moved up fractionally, the former making the best turnover in the foreign list. The trend of foreign obligations generally was upward, although price fluctuations were small.

United States government issues moved narrowly and met with little inquiry. Price changes were mostly downward.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, June 17—(AP)—For at least the moment, timely gains in Canada proved an overmatch today for friends of higher prices on wheat, and the market flattened out. Moreover, newly harvested wheat began to arrive in Kansas City, and receipts of wheat there as well as St. Louis were much larger than a year ago.

Closing quotations on wheat were weak, 2 to 3 1-8c a bushel below Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1-2 to 3-4c down, oats 1-4 a 3-8 to 5-8c off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 7c.

Contrasting sharply with what has been the rule of late, grain traders gave but little heed today to news from Washington such as details of appropriations for farm relief, the market influence of which appeared to have been discounted in full for the present. Instead, crop prospects in Canada took the lion's share of attention. A precarious outlook there because of moisture shortage was suddenly altered today by downpours which at numerous places supplied an inch or more of water, likely to be of immense benefit in promoting spring wheat progress. Inasmuch as previous to these rains, a crop scare of major extent appeared to be imminent, the price effects in Chicago was immediate, especially as evidence indicated that Winnipeg traders had become free sellers of future delivery contracts here.

Adding to the consequent downward impetus of the wheat market was news that ideal harvest weather prevailed in the domestic winter wheat belt, and that apparently a big portion of the Kansas crop would be in this week. Meanwhile, reports at hand showed that Kansas City today received 296 cars of wheat and St. Louis 120 cars, compared with respectively 75 cars and 34 cars a year ago. Moreover, a decrease of 1,051,000 bushels noted today in the United States visible supply, total was less than had generally been looked for, and was another disappointment to the buying side of the market.

Better weather conditions for corn growth, together with enlarged receipts, 338 cars in Chicago today had a depressing influence on corn values. Oats prices went lower with corn.

Packers selling was the chief feature of the provision market.

Changing Times In Vermont

The changing times—they change so fast
I can't connive the reason;
I get so fearful fur behind
And furder every season;
To wear a shirt full-tailed and whole
Would jest be social treason.

I'd like to see some pretty basques
With lots of whalebone in 'em;
They made the wimmen look so well
That menfolks splurged to win 'em,
But dresses that are jest a belt,
I'm certingly agin 'em.

I'd like some stuff to eat with names
That tell you what you're eating,
Like good old applesass deduced
From good old poundful sweating;
I'd like to lose the "church" peerade
And moon along to meeting.

Where has the chicsome pull-back gone?
I haven't seen one lately;
It had good length, if not much breadth,
And made a lass look stately;
The pull-back and the Grecian bend,
Oh! friends, I miss thamm greatly.

I'd like some leather boots again
To shed the snow and gravel,
Nor would I care what folks might say,
Let Oxford cobblers cavil;
There's nothing like a hawss well-shod
For standing or for travel.

It doesn't seem that yesterday
Could ever have existed.
Things have no back-fire with the past
So changed they are and twisted—
Must be that I've outlived the war
In which my youth enlisted.

—Daniel L. Cady, in Burlington Free Press.

The One Woman

We've toasted all manners of women,
We've pledged them, the old and the young,
Since days of the gallant knight errants
All womanhood's praises we've sung;
We've pledged them for love and for duty,
For trust and a faith near divine—
We've held high our glasses and pledged them
In our first and last bumpers of wine;
But somehow, in zeal for their beauty,
Fond eyes, and their lily white hands,
We've overlooked one in our pledging—
The Woman Who Understands.
Our poor limitations and uses,
She knows them far better than we—
She bravely accepts our excuses,
And motives refuses to see;
She overlooks all of our errors,
The things we don't do that we should,
And knows, like ourselves, we'd be better
And worthier men if we could;
In the end, when our errors confront us,
She soothes us with comforting hands,
And erases the penance — God bless her!—
The Woman Who Understands.

—John D. Wells.

Distorted Evidence

No amount of statistical evidence, distorted in an effort to mislead the public, can disprove government figures showing the gain of Lucky Strike to be greater than the combined increase of all other cigarettes. The public will be served and this is proof, indeed, that regardless of price, you actually get more in Lucky Strike than any other cigarette can offer. Its perfect blend of fine tobaccos gives pure smoking delight. Its exclusive, secret toasting process guarantees the tobaccos free from irritants and impurities and, in the opinion of 20,679* physicians, makes Lucky Strike less irritating than other cigarettes.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

One of the most dramatic court scenes ever shown on the screen is featured in First National's "His Captive Woman," which closes at the Palace theatre today.

The story opens with a woman on trial accused of the murder of her lover.

In "Ship Mates," Lane appears as a sailor on a battleship, and the antics, and acrobatic and clever tricks he does, furnish much of the hilarious comedy in the picture. His leading lady is Charlotte Merriam, who has been featured in other comedies released by Educational.

Other sound featurettes on this program include a Pathe Sound News—The World in Scene and Sound—The latest sound Cport Life—new events in the Field of Sport and a Pathe Sound Revue the wonder reel of the screen.

"Hearts in Dixie," the screen's first singing, dancing and talking comedy of the Old South, a 100 per cent dialogue Fox Movietone production, begins its local first run engagement tomorrow at the Palace theatre. Audiences in other cities have received enthusiastically this novel picture which puts vocal and instrumental music and dancing to such brilliant use in telling a story that is full of emotional interest. Elsewhere it likewise has been hailed as an innovation and everyone who likes to keep abreast of the latest in entertainment of the speaking screen should be sure to see it.

Broadway Theatre.

Much discussion has been aroused in the modern picture industry as to the flood scenes in Warner Bros. "Noah's Ark," which is now showing at the Broadway theatre.

Darryl F. Zanuck, who supervised the production, admits it was one of the most colossal tasks ever faced in the making of any super-feature. Both Zanuck and Jack L. Warner generously give credit for these sequences to Fred Jackman, who is responsible for the photographic effects.

Warner Bros. provided Jackman with a crew of 125 men, who started working on the production two months ahead of Michael Curtiz, the director, and who were kept busy for more than three months after the taking of the final scenes.

Besides the flood scenes, Jackman was called in for sensational spectacular effects in both the Biblical and modern episodes of "Noah's Ark."

"Noah's Ark" has an all-star cast headed by Dolores Costello, George O'Brien, Noah Beery and Louise Zazenda, and in many scenes as many as 10,000 extras are used. The script was written by Anthony Coldeway from an original story by Darryl F. Zanuck, associate Warner Bros. executive, who supervised the picture.

A British auctioneer mounted his rostrum recently, and lit an inch long stub of candle. The property offered went to the highest bidder at the instant the candle flickered out. These unusual conditions were imposed by the owner of the property.

COUNCIL CONSIDERS PURCHASE OF PAYNE PROPERTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 17—The city council held a meeting that continued until after 10 o'clock tonight.

Director of Law Troland appeared before the council on the matter of the purchase of the Payne property for the Coast Guard academy. There is some difference between counsel for the city and owners of the property, which must be smoothed out. The Payne heirs proposed giving a deed to be kept in escrow until such time as the deed passed. The proposition of the city is to take the property at a price of $50,000 upon the delivery of warrantee deed, that to comew hen the government has agreed to take the property for the purpoces intent. It is proposed that the city shall pay cash for the property and that the Payne heirs shall pay it back at the same price, provided the city changes its mind as to locating the proposed academy on this property. Then there is a proposition to apportion the taxes of the property up to the purchase, tax year not ending until Nov. 1. There are two dwellings on the property which are now rented and the Payne heirs want to take the rentals up to the sale of the property.

It is understood that counsel has agreed to these terms.

There were 17 building applications granted, mostly for garages and additions, although a few were for dwellings.

Councilor Fox inquired whether the application of the Beacon Oil Co. to locate a gas station near the Thames river bridge in East New London had been approved by the state. He said there seemed to be some hokus-pokus that some applicants could get the desired permission while it was denied to others. The state has the approval of the site whether the city approves it or not. He was assured that the state had approved of the application before the mayor of the city signed it.

Property to the value of $836 was bought from the C. S. Mersick Co. of New Haven. Councilor Murray reported for the committee that inspected the condemned property which the city's building inspector and fire marshal proposed to tear down. He said that only three of the seven members of the council were present to inspect the property and asked that the council have a meeting with the director of law as to the procedure before any vote was taken.

A few weeks ago counsel for Annabel Douglas proposed deeding to the city a portion of land at the corner of Truman and Black Hall street that that corner might be widened. The Warren and Myers survey has been looked up and there is a question as to whether the Douglas property encroaches on the street. A compromise is possible and to affect it, the matter was referred to the director of law and city manager.

Reports from the compensation board, providing for the laying of a sewer in Coleman street at a cost of $750, in Cedar Grove avenue and Ledyard street at a cost of $1185, in Grove street at a cost of $10,985, Addison street at a cost of $1,940, Waldon avenue at a cost of $9,504 were received.

He learns that fifty thousand dollars in the "Ritz" is actually almost poverty.

COUNCIL ADJOURNS WITHOUT ACTION ON APPLIANCE SALES ORDINANCE

Citizens of Norwich talked for three hours and ten minutes Monday evening in the town hall at the special hearing before the common council on the proposed ordinance to stop the gas and electric department from selling appliances.

The general business management of the department, the service rendered to patrons, the financial side, the legal aspects of the situation and the employment of Earl W. Taggart as head of the appliances sales department were all attacked and defended until the meeting had talked itself out by 11.10 when Mayor Lee Roy Robbins called the hearing adjourned, but one belated speaker was cut off when the gavel fell as he arose to address the mayor a moment afterwards.

After the hearing adjourned, the common council held an executive session for an hour and a half more, but took no action but to adjourn to take up the subject again at the earliest convenient time.

Those entering the hall had a card handed to them headed "Some Facts and Figures as to the City of Norwich Gas and Electric Plant". It contained the following:

$100,000.00 cash paid the city from net earnings in the last two years.

Street lighting and public buildings furnished the city at cost.

Mayor Robbins and the members of the common council were seated on the platform when he called the meeting to order and Clerk Weston C. Pullen read the call to the 300 men and women in the hall.

Mayor Robbins explained to the meeting that this was not a city meeting but was a hearing before the common council on the desirability of passing the ordinance referred to. He stated that a time limit of 10 minutes would be set for those who wished to speak, and he asked that those who were opposed to the passage of the ordinance should speak first.

Letter From Commission.

William H. Cruickshank, a member of the gas and electric commission, presented the following communication at the opening of the meeting, signed by the five members of the gas and electric commission, Joseph P. Connor, president, Samuel Goldberg, vice president, William H. Cruickshank secretary Jacob Munz and Archibald Torrance:

To the Honorable Court of Common Council, Norwich, Connecticut.

Gentlemen:

As a matter of record and that you may know the position of the commission relative to the proposed ordinance, we approved the following resolution:

VOTED:

That the board of gas and electric commissioners of the city of Norwich feel that the best interests of the department require a continuation of the policy of the department in the sale of appliances as practiced since the year 1924 and it further expresses the conviction that an analysis of the earnings of the department covering a period from 1924 to the present time, the increase in sale of both gas and electricity, the condition of the property of the city, what it has earned, what has been applied in cash toward its debts and sinking funds, what has been acquired and developed all justify the commission in the interests of the city of going on formal record as opposed to any ordinance which will stop, limit or control the sale of appliances which it hereby does.

In Opposition to Ordinance.

Guy B. Dolbeare, a former member of the gas and electric commission, opposed the passage of the ordinance and favored continuance of the present practice of the commission because of the benefit to the citizens in getting standard high grade appliances, and said this question would never have come up if the gas and electric department were privately owned.

James L. Case, who was a former president of the commission, said he belonged to an organization which had for a slogan, If a thing is right we are for it, if it is wrong we are against it. He said the proposed ordinance was not for the best interests of Norwich and he reviewed the history of the gas and electric department from 1917, including the engagement of Engineer Mole during a rehabilitation period, the beginning of the sale of appliances under Mr. Flagg which continued for 5 years and he appealed to the common council not to pass the ordinance but if there were corrections needed to make these for if it is not done some one else may come in and Norwich dealers will face greater competition and their situation will be far worse.

Ms Hanover spoke against the ordinance, commending the gas and electric department for rendering a public service and declaring if corrections were to be made they could be handled by the commissioners who were honorable men. Don't make the gas and electric department a football for everybody to kick at, he concluded amid applause.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott registered his opposition to the passage of the ordinance. He argued that there were two points, the first as to the legal right to sell appliances, and he declared the gas and electric department had that right. The second was the question of whether it was right for the gas and electric department to enter into competition with other agencies selling appliances. He urged the citizens to look at the subject as stockholders in an enterprise that was turning into the city a gross profit of some $200,000 annually, and advised that if there had been any competition that had done any harm it could be rectified. Let us use the justest and fairest way possible and continue this institution that turns so much money into the city treasury.

Abner Schwartz of Schwartz Bros., Inc., declared he was heartily in favor of letting the department continue the sale of appliances, and Albert Boardman spoke of his advocacy of municipal ownership but expressed his criticism of the business management of the Norwich department. He spoke of the department selling a Hoover sweeper for $79 which he could have sold for $50 and of the salaries and commissions paid, while no charge is made against the department for advertising or rent, and he declared their methods were not fair competition. He would like to see them continue selling but their competition is not fair.

Mr. Cruickshank arose to answer that the department had never sold a Hoover sweeper.

To Pick The Fruit

James P. Sheridan was given a greeting of applause as he came to the front to speak. He commended the presentation of the subject made by Rev. Mr. Abbott, saying it was eminent, fair, able, honest and concise. Mr. Sheridan spoke of the sale of appliances 20 years ago and raised a burst of applause when he said that at that time the department was selling out the orchard but now the fruit is ripening and somebody wants to come in and pick the fruit. He stated that the situation looked to him like 11 conscientious objectors against 23,000 people and he asked if the people were going to give up a gold mine so that 11 could profit thereby. He declared he would rather have this thing settled by a ballot vote of the people rather than by a few men.

Edward Kirby spoke for neutrality, saying he thought this could be fixed satisfactorily. Why not a 50-50 break or even a 60-40 break for the dealers? Let's get together and settle it, Mr. Kirby said.

Henry D. Johnson objected to the passage of the proposed ordinance on the ground of the service on appliances which the department renders and he related an instance of quick and effective service by the department on a machine which had been bought from a merchant.

Discussed Legality

Judge T. J. Kelly discussed with Corporation Counsel E. W. Perkins some of the legal aspects of the situation and declared that it ought to have gone to the supreme court and he didn't believe it had any place in this meeting.

Judge Nelson J. Ayling declared that the only question was whether we shall interfere with the sale of appliances. We have had and now have good men on the commission, we are getting results now, he said, and he hoped the common council would not pass the ordinance.

D. T. Shea, a former member of the commission, was the final speaker in opposition to the ordinance, saying it was a question of whether the department should continue or surrender to a few dealers. The interest of the 7,000 stockholders of the department should not be ignored, but it should be run for the interest of the stockholders and not in the interest of a few dealers.

In Favor of Ordinance

George E. Pitcher was first to respond when Mayor Robbins invited those in favor of the ordinance to speak. He spoke briefly and was followed by Carl W. Brown, a dealer, who has been the chief mover in the opposition to sale of appliances by the gas and electric department. Mr. Brown charged that there was unfair discrimination in the rate as made Oct. 15 on electric refrigerators.

Attorney Arthur M. Brown, speaking as a representative of the dealers, who want the ordinance passed, said that much that had been said during the evening should have been said long ago. He contended that while there was no legal force in the city meeting where the vote was 234 to 221 to stop the sale of appliances, there was moral force in the vote which the gas and electric commission should recognize. A later meeting directed them to stop the sale and no one set of men has a right to say "We don't care." The commissioners can sell until the common council takes away that right, he declared.

Addressing the common council, he told them they had made their own investigation, found there was a loss of $5,000 a year and nothing had been said in this meeting to make them change their minds in the face of the votes of these city meetings.

Arguments in Rebuttal

Edwin W. Higgins accepted Mayor Robbins' invitation to speak in rebuttal and reviewed the proceedings in the superior court, where he appeared per se because there was no appearance for the city since the common council voted not to have the corporation counsel appear. Mr. Higgins called these proceedings most extraordinary and unfair, urged that the people stop, look and listen before doing anything to an organization which turned in $50,000 a year. He said the dealers can get 12 1-2 per cent commission without touching a refrigerator and said that the action proposed by this ordinance was without precedent.

Attorney George H. Gilman, who said he was speaking for the gas and electric department, said that the logic was all with the opponents of the ordinance, that the department is doing what no merchant will do and should not be deprived of this feeder for gas sales. It was a question of 20 or 30 peevish plumbers on one side and the whole people of Norwich on the other.

Remarks Start Storm.

Rev. Mr. Abbott came back with a stirring rejoinder to some of the arguments put forth by Attorney Brown and was followed by Judge Allyn L. Brown, who favored the passage of the ordinance, which he declared was for the best interests of Norwich, but he stirred up a storm when he made a reference to loyalty for family as exhibited by one gentleman making a position for his son and keeping him in it.

Mr. Case hurried to the front and took the floor as Judge Brown concluded saying he believed in fair play and he wanted to say that it was while he was president of the gas and electric commission that Earl Taggart was appointed to the place he occupies now and he was not put in the place by his father. Mr. Case declared Earl Taggart was doing a fine piece of work in his position as manager of the sales department.

Mrs. E. W. Higgins also came to the defense of Mr. Taggart and mentioned an instance of his securing a stove for her when the merchants showed no interest in getting it.

Charles W. Taggart, general manager of the department and father of Earl Taggart, also replied stating that Judge Brown had made an unfair accusation against himself and his son and that the judge's own brother was not without sin.

Mr. Taggart presented an affidavit from Herbert Sharp of the Silberman Furniture company stating that he wished to withdraw the company name from the merchants' petition, claiming that misrepresentations were made to him when he signed. Mr. Taggart said he also had an affidavit from George O. Hathaway that he never put his name to the petition, and Alex Pasnik said P. J. Morley had told him he signed in a hurry without understanding what the petition was.

William Shanley, who is at the head of the gas department, stated that he was the one who brought Earl Taggart here. Mrs. E. A. Rich gave an instance of service rendered. James P. Sheriden told Judge Brown he had been wrong in bringing the name of the manager of the appliance department into the discussion. Mr. Boardman reiterated his claim that the business was not being run right and Harry M. Land and John Oguinick were the concluding speakers.

HOLD SALAMUCHA; PAPERS FOUND KEROSENE-SOAKED

Paul Salamucha, owner of the building at 463 North Main street in which is located Union hall, is being held for questioning by the police relative to a fire which was discovered in the hall shortly before midnight last night. The fire was under the stage on the third floor of the building and the stage was burning briskly when discovered by two boys who notified Sergeant Matthew Delaney who pulled in Box 27 on the fire house of the Greeneville company.

When the firemen arrived the flames were shooting from the windows in the rear of the bulding. A line of hose was laid and the blaze quickly subdued. Upon investigation a pail containing kerosene, and a number of kerosene-soaked papers were discovered. The beams underneath the stage were also found to be soaked with kerosene.

Mr. Salamucha was brought to the police station and was given a severe grilling relative to the presence of the kerosene. A Polish wedding party had occupied the hall earlier in the day.

The firemen had been called to the building once before during the day when some member of a wedding party that was using the hall threw a cigarette onto the roof of an adjoining building. Members of the wedding party at the time were warned about throwing cigarettes about.

The Greeneville company, Squad A, Engine Co. No. 1, and the aerial truck responded to the alarm. The damage was several hundred dollars.

ALFALFA DEMONSTRATION GIVEN ON FARMS

An alfalfa demonstration under the auspices of the New London County Farm Bureau was given Monday evening at 6 o'clock, s. t., at the Mitchell Dairies, Salem, located one mile west of Salem four corners.

Mitchell Dairies is managed by Roland Allen. Mr. Allen has about 40 acres of very fine alfalfa and clover to harvest. He also has about 22 acres of sweet clover for pasture sowed this spring which should interest many New London county dairymen. On one field Mr. Allen can show why it is necessary to use certain amounts and kinds of fertilizer for best results.

Professor J. S. Owens of Connecticut Agricultural college was present and will attend a similar meeting at the farm of O. R. Dimmock of the Goshen section of Waterford on June 18, Tuesday evening, 6 o'clock S. T. Mr. Dimmock has several acres of clover and alfalfa which any dairyman would be proud to own. He also has seeded sweet clover for pasture which is showing up well.

OLD CLOTHES HAVE REAL VALUE FOR NEAR EAST

The people of the Near East are as thrilled over receiving American used clothing as we are over purchasing a new outfit, according to Guy V. Dolbeare, treasurer of the Norwich committee of Near East Relief. "Our old clothes have real money value over there," Mr. Dolbeare said. "If we did not give clothing it would be necessary for the organization to purchase that much on the other side of the water. In those countries which are so slowly returning to anything like the necessities of life after the severe disasters they have suffered in recent years, a gift of clothing makes everyday seem like Christmas.

"Since Near East Relief closes its campaign June 30 we must endeavor to obtain by that time both the cash and clothing to complete the work which necessarily will run over the next two years over there. Our local community receives a credit of 30 cents for each pound of clothing against our quota. The clothing given in Meriden last week gave that city a credit of $1,000, in Norwalk the week before $1,100, and in Bridgeport $1,500.

"This is all part of the final campaign for Near East Relief begun January 1, 1928, which was renewed the first of this year with an appeal for $2,000,000 to be raised in cash, pledges and commodities from January to June inclusive. 852,000 pounds of clothing were contributed in this country last year. It has proved a life saver. The Armenian winter is longer and more severe than Americans realize. Most of the country is a mile above sea level and the weather is below zero for many weeks. Outside of two or three cities the people live in small villages and their huts are not warm like our homes in this country."

Clothing may be left at any public school building or at the Academy or at the fire stations in the city. Cash contributions or pledges may be sent to the treasurer at the Norwich Savings society.

CALLS FOR WORLD PEACE BY DAWES AND MACDONALD

Ambassador Dawes Advocated a Naval Policy Between the United States and Great Britain That Would Result in a Translation of a Policy of Disarmament Into a Fixed Agreement Between the Nations—Premier MacDonald Favored an Agreement That Might Result in Studying the Arts and Ways of Peace.

LONDON, June 18—(AP)—The chosen spokesmen of two peoples, those of Great Britain and the United States, simultaneously tonight made official calls for world peace in which these two nations should be an example and encouragement for other nations. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald delivered his pronouncement to residents of his native Lossiemouth, Scotland. United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes made his maiden public speech in that capacity at the Pilgrims' dinner in London.

In a message from the premier read at the Pilgrims' dinner he said that the two English speaking countries desire no alliance "either of common offense or of future defense. They only want mutual good will which will be an example and encouragement for other nations to come into the same companionship."

"Moreover," said his message, "we are placed in an extraordinary position in that our coming together in no way means we are leaving somebody else out. It is a great world impulse to get side by side which both America and ourselves are feeling." The prime minister found no great issue with the United States but rather a similarity to neglected roads between two men "with a slightly rough surface and some overgrowth, but with men determined to smooth them out."

General Dawes declared that an early agreement on naval reduction was of outstanding importance at the present time. "My theme," he said, "is what method of procedure had best be adopted between the nations—a step so important to the peace of the world and the happiness hereafter of mankind."

The ambassador compared at length the experiences of economic experts and statesmen in wrestling with the problem of war reparations and those of naval experts and statesmen with the even more inclusive problem of armaments. The ambassador, whose name was given to the first successful plan for dealing with the first problem, concluded that upon the statesman "lies the duty of peace making, and in these negotiations he must hold the initiative. He is the one to build up the new order and to start the new policy, guided as he goes by the advice of those competent and patriotic naval experts who serve him. x x x

"At the beginning of the work, the contribution of the naval experts to the problem should be a definition of abstract equality. It is certainly possible to naval experts to arrive at a definition for evaluation of the fighting strength of ships. x x x These ships might differ in displacement, size of guns, age, speed and other characteristics, and yet such an agreed properly weighted value might be given to each of these different characteristics as to make it possible to compare, for example the cruiser fleet or combined fleets of the two navies.

"If the naval experts rise to a proper sense of their responsibility, the use by statesmen of their yardstick will not be one which will invite peril from those extreme pacifists and extreme militarists who form the 'lunatic fringe.'

Further along in his speech General Dawes declared that "in the inarticulate consciences and hearts of the two great English speaking peoples there is upheld, sacred and inviolate, the principle of equality between them of naval strength.

Their attitude upon this question—unmistakable—assumed as out of the realm of debate even by nationalistic demogogues of both countries—while decorated by reason, is based under the providence of God upon fundamental human instincts and a comingling of the blood. x x x In the joint hands of these same English-speaking people rests not only their secure guarantee but as well the art of the covenant of human freedom."

The British prime minister at Lossiemouth spoke in general terms of the historic meeting which he had with General Dawes on Sunday, declaring that its purpose was looking toward the hope that it might be instrumental in "preparing a broad ground around which other nations might ultimately sit in cooperative friendship studying the arts and ways of peace."

Of the meeting he said, "we found each other taking the same general views of world peace. The hands we clasped were not cold with official correctness but warm with a friendship inspired by common enthusiasm for service in the cause of international good will and common sense.

"We did not meet to threaten other nations, to dominate other peoples, nor indeed did we meet to form alliances and pacts. We had no intention or presenting to the other nations an accomplished fact they can take or leave. x x x

"I hope that neither the large states nor the small ones will have any doubt that they (the Anglo-American conversations) are not exclusive—they are inclusive."

MEETING OF ANTI-SMITH DEMOCRATS IN VIRGINIA

ROANOKE, Va., June 18—(AP)—Dr. William Moseley Brown, 35 year old Washington anti-Smith democrat offered today to lead them in their effort to wrest control of state offices from the democratic party, and repudiate democratic leaders who supported Alfred E. Smith for the presidency.

Nominated for governor by acclamation at the close of the anti-Smith convention today, Dr. Brown came through the crowded auditorium to the platform and in a short address pledged himself to a vigorous campaign under the anti-Smith banner. No reference was made to republican support that might be expected either by Dr. Brown or by action of the convention itself.

MANDAMUS ACTION AGAINST STATE DENTAL COMMISSION

NEW HAVEN, June 18—(AP)—A mandamus action against the State Dental commission, was brought today by Manuel Kligerman, of New York city and formerly of here. He asks for a court order to direct the commission to issue him a license to practise in this state without the formality of an examination.

Kligerman alleged that the dental commission refused his application for a license after notifying him that he must take the customary examination, although he has been a practicing dentist in New York city since 1919. He claims that the laws of Connecticut permits the issuance of a license to any dentist, who has practiced in another state for a period of five years. The commission has until next Wednesday to answer.

Yellow Bird Stowaway In A Repentant Mood

A Depressed Tone Has Replaced the Exuberant Shouting.

PARIS, June 18—(AP)—The round of official receptions that occupied the three-man crew of the Yellow Bird all today will continue tomorrow. They are to be received by Premier Poincare and then by President Doumergue, it was understood tonight that the legion of honor was to be bestowed on each of them.

The original announcement today was that only Pilot Jean Assolant and Navigator Rene Le Fevre would receive the decoration, but Minister of Aviation Laurent Eynack declared "it was an error to exclude the name of Armeno Lotti, Jr., (radio man and hacker) from yesterday's communique. All three shared the danger and should share the honors."

Officialdom was puzzled as to whether Arthur Schreiber of Portland, Me., the stowaway, should be invited to attend the visits of state tomorrow. Decision was left with the three aviators, and it was negative.

It was evident from the behavior of the youth that someone had spoken plainly with him today. He was greatly subdued and spoke in a depressed tone instead of his exuberant shouting of the last few days.

At last contrite he said tonight, "I know I did wrong. I ought not to have risked the lives of the French aviators. I recognized they have been very generous to me and I ask nothing better than that they reap the whole benefit of their adventure. I got into the plane of my own volition without knowledge of any member of the crew. I did it without realizing the danger that resulted from the additional weight. I am sorry."

Lotti interrupted the stowaway and declared that Schreiber goes back to the United States on Thursday "with all our sympathy".

Schreiber, as the time comes to take a steamer home has begun to worry about what people at home think of his act. He is particularly anxious that all Americans be informed before he lands of the good treatment he received from the Yellow Bird crew and the French in general.

O. P. MANHOLE GAS FATAL TO FOUR MEN IN LOWELL

LOWELL, Mass., June 18.—(AP) — Four men were dead and a fifth was in a serious condition at a hospital tonight as a result of inhaling gas in a manhole today. Three firemen were also at the hospital recovering from the effect of the gas which overcame them during rescue attempts.

The four men who were killed and the fifth was taken from the manhole alive were all employed by the city sewer department. They had been assigned to investigate complaints that sewer gas was escaping from the manhole, which is near a large tanning plant.

THAMES RIVER PLOT FOR GOVERNMENT LIGHTHOUSE

HARTFORD, June 18—(AP)—Deeds have been prepared by the attorney general for conveyance by State Treasurer Samuel R. Spencer, acting for the state, of four pieces of property to the United States government for lighthouses. The state in each case reserves the right to invade the property to serve legal processes. Three of the plots, one in the Thames river on the west side just below Montville, one in the Norwalk river and one in the Housatonic river, are 200 feet in diameter and the fourth, in Stamford harbor, is 100 feet in diameter.

MOTORIST CHAREST HELD CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE

WATERURY, June 18—(AP)—Charles Charest, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., was today held criminally responsible in a finding issued by Coroner John T. Monzani for the death on April 13 of Mary Calabrese, 5, this city, who was fatally injured on that day by Charest's car. His machine was parked on West Porter street and, becoming free, rolled down grade, striking the girl. The coroner found that immediately after the accident, the brakes on the machine were practically useless by reason of water and grease having gotten into them when the machine was washed a short time before the accident.

PATROL OF AIRCRAFT FOR HARVARD-YALE REGATTA

Arrangements For an Air Patrol Over the Thames River Have Been Made by the State Department of Aeronautics—Captain Harry Generous, State Deputy Aviation Commissioner, Will Fly the Air Patrol—Two Speedboats Will Be Operated on the River—Regulations to Be Effective in New London, Friday.

HARTFORD, June 18—(AP)—Announcement of the completed arrangements for a comprehensive patrol of aircraft operations in New London, Friday, in connection with the annual Harvard-Yale regatta on the Thames river, was made from the office of the Connecticut state department of aeronautics today.

For the past few years it has been the policy of the state commissioner of aeronautics, Captain Clarence M. Knox, to see that all planes flying over the vicinity and course of the boat races were restricted to safe flying. This year, because of the marked progress of aviation, the number of planes expected to attend the races will make proper supervision more necessary than ever before.

Captain Harry Generous, state deputy aviation commissioner, will fly the air patrol, while two speedboats will be operated on the river. An officer will be stationed at the Groton state airport to supervise the operation of air traffic from the base.

The state aviation department has issued the following official air traffic regulations to be effective in New London, Friday, due to the Yale-Harvard boat races and the accompanying crowds of spectators:

1.—There shall be no flying over the course at any time during the day under an altitude of 2,000 feet.

2.—To commercial photographic concerns, desiring to take pictures of the races, special permits will be issued and ships plainly marked at the Groton airport, prior to the races, authorizing them to fly at an altitude of 1,000 feet over prescribed areas. (These permits will be supplied by the commissioner upon application not later than Thursday.)

3.—All traffic should be in a clockwise direction—the northbound to the west of the river, the southbound to the east of the river.

4.—In the event the ceiling is below 2,000 feet, there will be no flying allowed in the vicinity of the course.

5.—Ships will be allowed to land on their incoming trip, take off and return from the races, and depart for their home stations from the Groton airport, (the state-owned field), providing they use no part of the freshly graded area which is clearly visible from the air. In case any ship does land upon the freshly graded area, it will be grounded until time for departure to the home station.

BAPTISTS PLANNING TO COMBAT THE DIVORCE EVIL

DENVER, Colo., June 18.—(AP) — Resolution presented today denouncing war and compulsory military training promises to stir up the first whole-hearted debate of the northern Baptist convention. After laying plans to combat the divorce evil and voting for a renewed temperance educational campaign, the convention today elected officers, selected Cleveland, Ohio, as the 1930 convention city, then sidestepped for the moment a resolution on the compulsory military training question.

A. M. Harris, retiring president of the convention, announced when the war resolution was reached that he would entertain a motion to defer the remainder of the report of the resolutions committee until tomorrow. Those opposing the resolution declared they would maintain that by adopting a blanket denunciation on war, the Baptists would make themselves fervid conscientious objectors.

Alton L. Miller of Boston was elected president of the convention. The entire slate of nominations, including the Rev. Dr. David Jones Evans of Kansas City, Mo., for vice president, was accepted.

WAVES ARE POUNDING HULK OF STEAMER LAUREL

CAPE LOOKOUT, Ore., June 18—(AP)—As great combers, lashed to new fury by freshening winds, pounded the hulk of the Steamer Laurel, beached outside the mouth of the Columbia river, it became increasingly evident late today that Captain Louis Johnson, sole human occupant of the vessel faced another night aboard.

The skipper refused to be rescued after all his crew was removed bellowing defiance at the elements and refusal at his would be rescuer; the commander has paced up and down the after section of the bisected lumber freighter, apparently surveying the wreckage with a view to determining what might be salvaged and preventing by his presence aboard any but the agents of the ship's operators, the Tates line, from profiting by such salvage.

It also was conjectured that Johnson eftl impelled by a sense of duty to remain aboard as long as possible.

INVESTIGATION INTO DEATH OF THEORA HIX

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 18 —(AP)— Mrs. Helen M. Snook, wife of the deposed Ohio State university professor, Dr. James H. Snook, who is held for investigation in the hammer slaying of Theora Hix, 24 year old co-ed, became the dominant figure in the inquiry today when she was submitted to a four and one half hour quizzing by County Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr.

The investigation passed its fourth day with federal authorities taking a hand to determine if narcotics had any part in the slaying, the announcement of the discovery of a kitchen knife near the place where the body was found, and the continued detaining of Dr. Snook and Marion T. Meyers, graduate student at the university, who have been in jail since last Saturday.

Mrs. Snook was reported on the verge of collapse near the end of her questioning.

BOY WAS DROWNED DURING PICNIC PARTY

MERRIMACK, N. H., June 18—(AP) —The body of Gabriel Rustican, 17, of Medford, Mass., was recovered from Lake Naticook today by Deputy Sheriff Frank Flanders.

Rustican came here yesterday with a picnic party of young people of the First Baptist church, Medford. He was not missed until the party prepared to leave for home last night. He had been swimming during the day and when he had not been found during the night, dragging of the lake was started.

HISTORIC BELL TO BE SHOWN THROUGHOUT NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, June 18—(AP)— Governor Frank G. Allen today viewed a bell cast by Paul Revere in 1795 and given by General Henry Knox, revolutionary hero, to his old church at Thomaston, Me. The bell was brought here from Portland, Me., and will be shown throughout New England in an effort to raise funds to erect a replica of General Knox's home at Thomaston. The Knox Memorial association has charge of the tour.

DENIED GRADUATION FOR WRITING ACROSTIC POEM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 18—(AP)— Two days before he was to be graduated from Harvard university, Edward Fitzhugh, of Boise, Idaho, today stands expelled from that institution for having written the senior class baccalaureate hymn in the form of an acrostic which spelled out words which were obscene.

University officials declined to comment on the drastic punishment meted out to Fitzhugh. The student, who was an editor of the Harvard advocate, a student monthly, and prominent in university literary affairs, referred to his work, however, as a "silly boyish prank."

"I guess I haven't grown up yet," Fitzhugh said, in commenting on the affair. He was reported to have left Cambridge today although his parents were believed to be enroute to this city to attend the commencement exercises.

Fitzhugh's hymn, sacred in sentiment was a four-verse work of four lines each and was sung at the baccalaureate service Sunday. Discovery of the obscenity was not made until after the service. The hymn had been written so that if the first letters of the 16 lines were read downward, they spelled out four obscene words.

Friends of Fitzhugh stated that he had come upon the early part of the acrostic by accident and that he developed it further, not believing that the trick would be generally noticed.

Action of the faculty in voting not to award Fitzhugh his degree was reported to have been unanimous.

HOOVER ASK PUBLIC TO HELP COMBAT RUM RUNNERS

WASHINGTON, June 18—(AP)—Cooperation of American citizens again was sought today by President Hoover to aid the federal government in enforcing prohibition.

Instead of a general appeal for support of all laws, such as was made a month or so ago, this time the president made a specific request to those living along the Canadian border that they cooperate with the treasury department in coping with rum runners.

"I have some questions as to the incidents on the border Mr. Hoover said. "I deeply deplore the killing of any person. The treasury department is making every effort to prevent this misuse of firearms. Any case of misuse will be determined by the orderly proceedings of the department and the courts.

"I hope that the communities along the border will do their best to help the treasury and the systematic war that is being carried on by international criminals against the laws of the United States. It is these activities that are at the root of all of our difficulties."

The appeal was made by the chief executive at his press conference. Earlier Assistant Secretary Lowman had announced that confidential reports from treasury agents indicated an unprecedented gathering of bootleggers along the Canadian border. The customs border patrol, he added, had been strengthened across the entire country.

GOV. TRUMBULL HAS BUT SCORE OF BILLS TO SIGN

HARTFORD, June 18—(AP)— Gov. Trumbull today disposed of all save a score of the bills remaining from the 1929 legislature by signing 113 special acts. Only two public acts, the purity of lubricating oil bill and the measure to liberalize the killing of deer doing damage to property, are still being held by the governor for consideration. Among the special laws which he is still considering are the bill reducing the number of aldermen in Hartford from 30 to 20, on which a veto has been asked by the republican town committee, the Hartford Teachers' Pension bill to which the city administration objects, the state park and forest commission appropriation, the Stamford permanent improvement bond issue, and the Arnold college for hygiene and physical education charter.

HOOVER HAS SIGNED FARM RELIEF BILL

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(AP)—President Hoover today signed the farm relief appropriation bill making $151,500,000 immediately available for the use of the newly created federal farm board, the personnel of which is expected to be announced shortly.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 18—A class of ten graduates received diplomas at the closing exercises of the Windham Center grammar school held in the school auditorium this evening. Decorations were appropriate to the class colors, blue and white, and the class flower, the white carnation. The class motto "Not on the Heights but Climbing" appeared on a banner over the stage. The program consisted of well rendered musical numbers and concluded with a play, Tony, the Color Bearer. Selections were given by the school orchestra, the members of which are: Dorothy Wilson, Russell Wallen, Richard McDonald, Florence Hnizdo, John Dean, Frank McDonald and William Spokesfield. The graduates: Margaret Barstow, George Bass, Theofile Chalecki, John Holmes Dean, salutatorian, Hazel Macomber, Frank McDonald, valedictorian, Gail Smith, Hannah Spokesfield, Emerson Tompkins and Annie Wilcox. Walter R. King of the town school committee presented the diplomas, Mrs. Harry N. Moseley is principal of the school.

Two excellent vocational talks by Rotarians Walter Abbe and Frank M. Smith made up the program at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held at the Nathan Hale hotel this noon. Rotarian Abbe, who is affiliated with the Smith Winchester Manufacturing company at South Windham spoke on A Century of Pioneering in Paper-Making Machinery, in his interesting history of the plant which began business at South Windham in 1828 and manufactured the first Fourdrinier paper-making machine in the United States.

Postmaster Smith gave some interesting sidelights and statistics in his talk which was entitled The U. S. Mail, on Land, Sea and in the Air. A third talk scheduled to be given by Charles B. Pomeroy, prominent dairyman, was postponed to a later date owing to the expiration of the club meeting time. The meeting was in charge of President Raymond A. Parker who introduced as guests, Rotarian Sidney Bard, president of the Danielson club, Maurice Smith of Ohio, son of Postmaster Smith and Rev. Harry S. McCready, of Portland, Me., former member of the club. With the announcement that he would be on a fishing trip in Maine next week, President Parker stated that he was preceding over his last meeting before his successor, Louis H. Arnold takes office. He took the occasion to thank the members for the splendid cooperation in carrying out the year's work. Under the leadership of Harry W. Standish, a special song was rendered for the benefit of Rev. McCready. In the attendance contest which is now underway, Division A, Walter S. Jordan, general, was reported as leading Division B, Walter S. Barnes, general, by a small margin.

The graduating class of St. Mary's school held their class night exercises in St. Mary's hall Monday evening, a feature being the class prophecy which was arranged into a play entitled In Twenty-Five Years and which cleverly depicted the future career of each graduating member. The class jingle, composed by Claire Dumas, class poet, excited much laughter. Theresa Durand presented the class will. Rev. Fathers Mathieu and Belec addressed the graduates and during an abundant supper toasts were given to the curates as well as to the girls of '29 and the boys of the class. The class song, Memories Dear, was sung and the entertainment then evolved into a series of enjoyable games. The pupils of the seventh grade attended on invitation.

Dr. George Royal of Des Moines, Iowa, upon whom Amherst college conferred the degree of master of science at commencement Monday is a graduate of the old Natchaug high school of this city, graduating in 1874 as a classmate of the late Mrs. Minnie Pomeroy Cooley of New Haven, the daughter of Sheriff Pomeroy, the late States Attorney Hadlai A. Hull of New London county and George A. Conant of Hartford, for many years clerk of the Hartford county superior court, now retired. His schoolmates at the old high school included the late Edwin B. Gater of the supreme court, John J. Jennings, of Bristol, father of Judge Newell Jennings, Gilbert D. Lamb of New York and Franklin and Allen B. Lincoln of Ashford. Attorney William A. King was in Dr. Royal's class of '78 at Amherst.

He spent his boyhood in Caventry and was married in 1879 to Ella J. Kingsbury of that town. Dr. Royal, Edward Gazer and Hadlai Hull worked as "janitors" at the high school to earn their tuition and they also worked their way through college. Dr. Royal, who is an outstanding figure in the homeopathic school of medicine in America, will be accompanied by Mrs. Royal on a trip east which will include visits with relatives and old friends. He is listed in Who's Who in America and in American Authors, being an authority of note on medical subjects.

THE NORTON MEMORIAL.

By the gift of the Academy which will make possible the erection of the Norton Memorial building there will be provided a fine memorial for the late Henry B. Norton and additional facilities at the institution which have long been needed. This health center provided by Miss Ella M. Norton will permit an expansion at the Academy which will go far beyond the hopes of those who had undertaken to secure a gymnasium building through alumni contributions. The memorial has been so well worked out, however, that the efforts for a Hutchinson gym will be combined with the larger project and the memorial to the first principle will take the form of equipping a room in the gym.

This gift means much to a fast growing institution. It will permit for the first time such activities as are contemplated and it cannot fail to have an important bearing upon the hundreds who will be brought under the influence of that branch of instructions. Never before have schools given so much attention to physical activities as they are now doing, but never has the Academy had the facilities for such work as will be provided in the Norton Memorial. The removal of the present gym will be a relief to an already crowded main building.

This gift to the Academy is one in which the entire community has cause for gratitude. Whatever makes that a larger and better institution means just that much additional benefit for the city. For years Norwich has been profiting from the foresight of the founders of this institution. They builded well and those that have come after them have seen the desirability of adding thereto. Thus they have not only endorsed that good work but have been eager to see it broaden as it continues. The establishment of a health center means a new but highly important addition, and as it takes its place alongside the Slater Memorial it will be a fine example of what can be done for the benefit of a community's young people. It is a thoughtful and generous gift for a deserving institution.

MRS. HOOVER'S TEA.

From southern states are coming protests over the fact that Mrs. Hoover entertained the wife of Congressman DePriest of Chicago, colored, at one of the teas given at the white house for the wives of congressmen. Probably such protests are only what were to be expected from the south where race feeling runs high, but it is apparent that Mrs. Hoover saw no reason for any discrimination in the case of Mrs. DePriest because her skin was dark.

It was through no one's fault at Washington that the people in DePriest's district saw fit to send him to congress. It has been the custom for the president's wife to entertain the wives of congressmen at tea and this is what Mrs. Hoover has been doing, by inviting them to the white house in groups. Mrs. DePriest was included among the others when her turn came. She was not asked to stay at home because she is a Negro. That might have been the way some of those who are protesting would have dealt with the matter, but not Mrs. Hoover. She was big and broad enough to include them all and we will be greatly surprised if the country doesn't take a similar view of it.

The question of entertaining Negroes at the white house has come up before. Theodore Roosevelt faced the matter squarely when it was a question of receiving Booker T. Washington and Mrs. Hoover also met it squarely when the name of Mrs. DePriest appeared in the list of wives of congressmen.

The outburst from the south undoubtedly reflects political expression that will be used in various ways as time goes on, but it would have been far more to its credit had the south looked upon the affair as it was, considered it as such and said nothing about it. When it indicates that Mrs. Hoover should have done otherwise than she did it displays a narrowness that is far from praiseworthy. The feeling is of long standing and it is not surprising that the Negroes take pride in getting ahead especially when they do so against such opposition.

OIL WASTE.

All one needs to do is to become smeared by the oil which is discharged by oil-burning vessels and he will quickly appreciate the opposition that is felt toward the practice of casting this waste upon the waters only to have it drift to the shores and befoul everything it comes in contact with.

Under regulations which were adopted a few years ago vessels are supposed to refrain from discharging this waste in harbors and except when a good distance from land, but when complaints continue to be made concerning the oil pollution it would seem that there were some who are not living up to requirements. When it is done in harbors it is not difficult to check up on the practice. The result is that harbors are for the most part free from this objectionable oil but it is impossible to maintain a patrol for the purpose of spotting those who defy the regulations on the high seas, and it is highly probable that those in charge of such details on steamships suit their own convenience when it comes to parting with the oil waste.

The difficulty of picking out any particular spot for the discharge of the sludge so that it will not be blown onto some beach can be appreciated. Distance is helpful and that is why vessels are supposed not to discharge such material within a certain limit, and it is because the sludge is reaching the beaches and shores that the belief prevails that the regulations are not being respected.

It makes little difference whether it is sludge or garbage that is deposited upon the shore, it is certainly not welcome. The former is much more damaging and more difficult to dispose of, but neither one should be there.

If it were possible to prove that any vessel was engaged in this practice in violation of the regulations it could be made most uncomfortable for the individual responsible. Suspicions are not enough and when there are not even suspicions the situation is a weak one. About all that remains under such circumstances is to give publicity to the conditions prevailing and to voice a strong protest that may reach those who are to blame.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES.

When there were 120 lives lost following a fire which filled a hospital at Cleveland with gas there was much uncertainty as to what the gas was. It was desirable to know in order that there might be steps taken in the future to prevent it. By the creation of similar conditions, or as nearly so as possible, the chemical warfare service with the cooperation of a special army and navy board has made tests from which the conclusion has been reached that the fatal gas was carbon monoxide and nitrous fumes, the deadliness of which is well known so that gas masks are of no use in dealing with them.

While it was a desirable thing to ascertain the character of the gas, it was also important that some action should be taken for the prevention of any recurrence. It was evident that the use of non-combustible films in X-ray work was needed in the interest of fire prevention; but those who made a study of the situation at Cleveland urge the construction of storage rooms which will have expert supervision and that such rooms be in buildings detached from that in which there are patients, or be located near the roof of such institutions. The board likewise recommends methods of treating gassed persons and sets forth the method of handling the situation where films are afire and giving off fumes.

It was most unfortunate that that Cleveland disaster should have occurred. It is highly important that there should be no repetition. The recommendations which have been made following the tests are calculated to show how it can be prevented and it is to be hoped that they will be placed before all who have to deal with conditions similar to those which prevailed in Cleveland prior to the fire.

SCHREIBER'S TREATMENT.

It will have to be admitted that Armeno Lotti, Jr., backer of the Yellow Bird flight has treated the American stowaway most generously. It is to be realized that by his act of hiding aboard the plane he endangered the lives of three men in order to gratify his own ambitions. He forced the Yellow Bird to take the long route and then to land in Spain because the gasoline supply had been exhausted. That was due to the extra load that was carried unintentionally.

Schreiber's purpose in making the flight was to profit from the publicity he would get. This was quickly recognized by Lotti who immediately required the stowaway to agree to divide whatever he received with the two pilots of the plane. Even though there was resentment over his act, and a general recognition of the fact that it was a most inconsiderate and dangerous thing to do, Schreiber has been treated as if he had been a member of the crew. He has been treated in a manner directly opposite to what many believe he should have been.

There are always two ways of looking at such a situation. Had there been such treatment as he deserved there would have been a chance for public resentment over that, while the extension of all possible favors on the part of the Yellow Bird's crew leaves no opportunity for the arousing of sympathy in his behalf and awakens no great public concern over his welfare. He has had a most unusual experience all because the machine on which he hid and those operating it were able to meet the test which he imposed. He is by no means the first flying stowaway but in the interest of safety there should be more careful inspections previous to such long flight for the purpose of preventing others, who will be inspired by Schreiber's act, from doing the same thing.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There seems to be great need of fire prevention in the oil fields.

June is contributing that influence which starts the rush to the seashore.

The man on the corner says: Would an oiled road by any other name be as sweet?

We've reached the week when the wielders of the blue and the crimson get their chance to back their favorites.

Ex President Coolidge sprained a hand landing a trout but said it was worth it. How many hands have you sprained this season?

With all the speculation about the marriage of the prince of Wales, possibly he envies Col. Lindbergh and his ability to duck much publicity.

The conduct of the radicals in the senate is such as to impress the public with the need of fewer instead of more of them. That should suggest something for the voters to do.

ALL IS NOT GOLD

"Window shopping! I'm sick of it. I want clothes and clothes and then I want clothes!"

So spoke Barbara Clef, who used to be Barbara Janney, as she crossed busy streets determinedly, ignoring all the traffic signals, and returning scowl for scowl with outraged motorists.

"And I want them now," she concluded as she reached the shopping district and stood undecided.

"I can't," he told hereself candidly, "pretend that I'm shopping. I haven't the nerve. Every clerk seems to know I've no intention of buying. What to do? What to do?"

Leisurely she strolled along. Eagerly she drank in the changing panorama. Everyone else was hurrying. It would be simply great if she had something to hurry for, she thought. She felt useless, futile. When she came out of her reverie Barbara saw that unconsciously she had headed for her old office.

"For no good reason," she told herself. "I'm going upstairs and just see how everybody is."

Going up in the elevator she thought back over a period of three years. Then she had been secretary to the president, drawing $75 a week. The sky had been the limit in those days. She experienced a momentary regret that she hadn't saved some of that money.

"Well, probably it is always the exact moment," she wryly admitted to herself, "when money is most needed that I think of these things." But she grinned as she remembered that period. No; she had no regrets; everything was perfect in those days. As she stepped out of the elevator she met Alec Lane, a salesman and a former beau.

"Hello, Barbara, you look as if you were sitting pretty!" The young mans' eyes shone with pleasure and approval.

"Hello, Alec! You don't look abused your own self," she replied gayly, and crossed over to the desk of Miss Allen, who had succeded her as secretary to Mr. Barry.

"Why, Barbara Clef—I mean, Mrs. Janney, how well you're looking! You've gained a lot, haven't you?" piped Miss Allen sweetly. Barbara's smile gave no indication that the dart had sped home.

"I do look well, don't I? But it's not because of the ten ounces I've gained, dear. It's the rest that takes those lines and wrinkles out of one's face. You ought to try it some time. Mr. Barry in conference?" And with a parting smile she sailed in to see her old employer. Had she been wise, after all, to leave him?

"Well, well," said Mr. Barry, cordially, "how's married life, Barbara? Think you'll ever want your old job back again?"

Barbara looked wistfully at him. Her old job would mean a lot to her right now. Her mind raced over the dull routine of her mornings; listening to the daily complaints of rheumatic old Mrs. Cutler, watching for the iceman and the milkman, attending to the million demands of her small son. He was so sweet, but, oh, how wearing!

Compare these household futilities with mornings spent watching and helping the growth and development of a great business. Barbara sighed.

"And how's the youngster?" Mr. Barry was asking.

"Oh," she answered lightly, "he's fine. And how is your son?"

"Hadn't you heard," Mr. Barry answered quietly, "that my Roger was dead?"

"How terrible!" Barbara gasped. She was horrified. Her brain wirled. In her straitened circumstances, consumed by a desire for wealth and luxury which she could not have, she had almost forgotten that she had something to watch and develop that belonged just to her and to Ray Jahney; beside which the greatest business in the world was as nothing.

Barbara was no fool. As she left her old employer and her old working associates, she saw again that mighty tide of prosperity and riches that swept about her she knew that often and often she would repine at her own narrow lot; even that she might forget the boy for a moment. But she also knew, and there was saving grace in the knowledge, that she would always know where lay her first, her real, her deliberately chosen and passionately loved job.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 18—Disclosure that the new British prime minister, J. Ramsay MacDonald, has been in unofficial correspondence with Senator Borah over his projected visit to the United States to confer with President Hoover may easily prove to be a highly significant development.

It is to be recalled that it was Borah who led the fight when the cruiser bill was on its passage through the senate in February for the amendment authorising a conference on freedom of the seas as a means to promote fleet reductions.

And since his premiership was insured MacDonald has had something to say in the same connection.

Significant

Coupled with these facts is the further matter that the London government is known to have been inquiring recently of the various dominion governments as to their views on several important international questions, including freedom of the seas.

Is it possible that the unprecedented proposals from London for the Hoover-MacDonald meeting have to do with an attempt to reach an accord on what shall be in the future rights of belligerents and neutrals on the seas?

The amendment to the cruiser bill initiated by Senator Borah, but modified by Senator Reed of Missouri and accepted by Senator Borah in that form, was voted by the senate Feb. 5 last, 81 to 1, former Senator Bruce of Maryland alone voting against it. It reads as follows:

"That congress favors a treaty or treaties with all the principal maritime nations regulating the conduct of belligerents and neutrals in war at sea, including the inviolability of private property thereon.

"That such treaty or treaties be negotiated, if practically possible, prior to the meeting of the conference on limitation of armaments in 1931."

Borah's View

In accepting the Reed substitute for his own original proposal to codify international law, Senator Borah said:

"I look upon the present stressful outlook between naval powers as being determined in a large measure by this question of the rights of belligerents and neutrals at sea.

"I quite agree that unless we can come to an agreement with reference to the rights of neutals, unless we can come to an understanding between nations as to legal use of the sea, there is no such thing as naval disarmament.

"I will go further and express the view that not only is there no such thing as naval disarmament or the reduction of naval armaments, but the failure to reach an understanding undoubtedly will lead to a competitive naval race. I can see no other alternative."

Does the projected visit to Washington of the British prime minister mean that an attempt to reach such an understanding now is definitely contemplated in London?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Plea for the Honeybees

Mr. Editor: I should like to call to the attention of the readers of The Bulletin a situation unusual and little understood.

The maples and beeches this month are heavily infested with aphis. The variety of aphis is one which secretes a sweetish substance technically known as honey dew. Anyone looking upon the maples about Norwich can see the upper surfaces of the leaves glistening with this honey dew. It is so abundant that it trickles to the points of the leaves and gathers in drops there.

Honey bees are prone to gather this secretion and store it in their combs. It is not a very choice honey to eat and properly is not honey. One of the problems of the beekeeper is to keep this substance separate from true honey. And this year the problem is an unusually difficult one.

Now comes another problem on top of that one. The state forester is working to keep our trees and roadways at their best. He is faithfully spraying the elms for the elm-beetle. He offers to spray the maples also for the aphis. This is being done.

The spray he is using for the aphis is a mixture of nicotine salts and deadly arsenate of lead. This poisonous mixture is generously applied to the leaves of the maples.

For a day or so the noxious odor of the nicotine will keep the bees away from these sprayed maples, but not for long. After a day or so the bees will come on dewy mornings to gather the honey dew which is now mixed with deadly arsenate. This will of course kill these bees.

If this spraying of the maples becomes general I fear that every beekeeper in the limits of the city of Norwich will find soon that his hives of bees are tenantless. I plead for these beekeepers. My own bees are mostly outside the city limits and will probably be only slightly affected by this unwise spraying.

If owners of maples must have their trees sprayed let them insist that only nicotine solution be used. Let them insist that the arsenate be left out of the spray.

As a mater of fact the trees will be but slightly if any injured by these aphides. Nature will very soon remove them by aid of their natural enemies. On the maples especially they are on leaves so mature that little harm will result in their staying there. I really question if by a month from now a tree unsprayed can be told from one which is now being sprayed. It seems a shame to kill off the useful honeybees of Norwich by this injudicious spraying.

ALLEN LATHAM.

Norwich, June 18, 1929.

Patriotism and Buckingham Memorial

Mr. Editor: Many years ago it was the custom of the early settlers of New England especially in the country section for the farmer to set aside a certain place on their homesteads for a burial place for their families and their immediate relatives and these were designated as God's acre. At one time there was one of these out where the old Norwich ball ground was located, opposite to the old Indian battle ground at Sachem's plain. This belonged to the family of Palmer. Newton Who owned the farm that was situated almost opposite to where we now find St. Mary's cemetery, on what is known today as Norwich avenue. This farm took in the whole section where now is located many fine homes on Russell and Bushnell roads and the other intervening streets. This fine old farm house that was the family homestead is standing today, and in appearance is not unlike some of the very modern and up-to-date houses in the immediate vicinity. In the course of time these family plots made way for the more modern and up-to-the-minute resting places of those who have heard the call and now know the answer. This is the season when these hallowed places are at their loveliest for nature is kind even to the most neglected burying place, carpeting the sunken graves with the softest green, and beautifying the fast crumbling headstones with the clinging vines and fragrant blossoms. At this season of the year, nature spreads with a lavish display all her most priceless jewels, all her glorious flowers of crimson and gold, and on Thursday, May 30, all over this country many thousands came to pay their respects to the patriots who lie sleeping, for here are to be found the heroes of five wars who gave their all, their lives for their beloved country. Some patriot who gave his life in the early Colonial wars sleeps within this hallowed ground with some boy who died in the great World war, and here they sleep, waiting for the bugle call that will bring them once again together. And as they are here at rest, but we cannot forget that here are those who loved their country well enough to defend its principles and die for the preservation of its integrity and to keep that old flag flying in the breeze.

We recall that out in the middle west at Springfield, Ills., there is a shaft pointing upward to the sky and beneath this rests the immortal Lincoln. Here he is just sleeping neath the prairie that he loved so well, and in the old town where he used to watch his children at play. The sentiment connected with this cannot be told in words. We can all learn a lesson from these brave men—lessons of loyalty, of sacrifice and devotion. In these days there are many who are living in this glorious land of ours, who have but little regard for the ideals that those brave men died for or for the glorious records that these men made.

And yet how soon we forget. We ought as a right give those old boys in blue every care, but it strikes me they are only recalled today when we see their fast thinning numbers as they slowly pass us by. Here I want to once again remind the people that as I passed the former home of the war governor that nothing has been done to put it in good condition.

And yet we all talk patriotism. All it amounts to is just plain talk and no action. I perhaps do not understand the reason why but I am in a receptive mood and am willing to be told. We have tag days for every conceivable thing and if it is necessary to have one let us go to it and I am sure every one will come across. Some one suggested that I could foot the bill for any repairs, but as I am not wealthy I will have to decline but in any event if something is started you can depend I will come over with mine and I don't mean maybe. I expect some one will get after me for bringing up this subject again, but that has no terrors for me. So start something.

Clothing of American Male Compares Unfavorably With That of His Sister

By Capt. C. S. Butler, U. S. Naval Medical School, Washington.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute.)

"As rare as the rustle of a woman's skirt" is a 1929 simile which, while enabling us to visualize the unusual, may also cause us to sense the revolution which has taken place in women's clothing. The majority opinion is that this revolution in female attire is all for the best, speaking in terms of personal hygiene. Short dresses bobbed hair and air-permeated clothing, even if she does continue to walk on stilts, are points in favor of the woman's attire which have scarcely been duplicated in the clothing of men.

The clothing of the American male will require many readjustments before it will compare at all favorably with that of his sister, who, in addition to the features noted above, now wears sensible hats and suspends the weight of the clothing from the shoulders instead of from the waistline. Time will not permit of a detailed description of these needs.

One of the first things that should be done to the wardrobe of His Lordship is to relegate the swallowtail coat and plug hat to the museums to take their places where they belong, alongside of specimens of chain armor and fossil Dodos. The man who first wore this combination was every bit as brave as the one who first swallowed a raw oyster. Each served a purpose! The latter gave a great food supply to the world that will benefit mankind for all time. The former enabled Darwin and his fellow scientists to prove that man (taken in the narrow sense and not to include woman) is descended from the "Maeque." As a useless piece of impediments the plug hat has no rival. But the swallowtail coat combined with it furnished the incontrovertible evidence referred to above.

Key West, Fla., is practically under the tropic of Cancer, while the north point of continental United States, leaving out Alaska, is at 49 degrees 24 minutes. The northeast point of Maine is west longitude 66 degrees 51 minutes is over 3,000 miles from San Diego, Calif., in west longitude 124 degrees 23 minutes. In the vast triangle of upwards of three and a half million square miles there is every variety of climate that the word affords, be it hot or cold, dry or moist, elevated above or depressed below sea level. Florida and southern California enjoy perpetual spring, while Seattle, Duluth and Newport have it delightfully cool all summer long.

With utter disregard for these geographical and climatic considerations, the hatmakers and haberdashers of America have conspired to lay a heavy load of expense upon the manhood of the United States. Throughout the area referred to the same formula must be observed. The hats must change every three months, and the period allotted to the straw is from May the 15th to September the 15th, whether the wearer live in St. Louis or Seattle, Brunswick or Sacramento. This technique enables those on the inside of the conspiracy to sell the entire adult male population of America a string of hats worth perhaps $2.99 for a $40 bill.

It would seem wise to devise some plan to divert the minds of the haberdashers from selling four hats a year to each male adult and to start them working on the problem in personal hygiene of how to do away with suspenders and yet suspend the male's clothing from his shoulder.

Stories That Recall Others

Kept the Dog Away

One warm spring day Albert, age five, complaining of the heat, asked his mother whether he might be permitted to eat his dinner on the porch. Mother, fearing that his dog, a constant companion, would get his nose in the little boy's food, was reluctant to give her consent. She relented, however, after much pleading, but not without a final admonition to keep the dog from the plate.

After the meal was over Albert came into the house, and was asked whether he had obeyed his mother's command.

"Oh, yes," he said, triumphantly. "Every time my dog came too near, I hit him with my spoon."

In the Country

Little three-year-old Jackie, who lived in town, had spent the afternoon at his grandfather's home in the country. Before leaving for home his mother took him out where through a small window in the barn he could see a cow calmly chewing her cud. He seemed fascinated, the cow is eating her chewing gum."

After a time she asked her chewing thinking. Then he said: "Look, mother, how much amazed and for a time stood don't let your "economy" come too high

The man who feels that he cannot afford to buy the Chrysler-built De Soto Six is perhaps the very man who cannot afford not to buy it.

Obviously, if he buys a cheaper six he will do so entirely on the strength of its purchase price.

But purchase price is only one of the three major items entering into the expense of owning a car. There are also the costs of upkeep and of maintenance to be considered. The sum of these three actually represents what it costs you to drive.

De Soto Six is economical of fuel and oil. It will keep on running almost indefinitely with a negligible maintenance expense—records of De Sotos that have gone over 40,000 miles prove this. Consequently, in the course of a few months, your De Soto Six will easily save the difference between its price and that of a car inferior in engineering, design and materials.

This purely dollars-and-cents reason for preferring De Soto Six can be supplemented by the self-evident fact that all the time you are getting more comfort, pleasure, safety and pride of ownership from this Chrysler-built six than a cheaper car could possibly give you.

It will cost you nothing to take a demonstration—and no obligations implied.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE AT LEFFINGWELL CHURCH

More than 75 persons partook of the delectable strawberry shortcake supper served Tuesday evening at the Leffingwell Baptist church under the auspices of the Women's union of Leffingwell. The menu which consisted of meat loaf, strawberry shortcake and potato salad was served at neatly arranged tables, which had June flowers for decoration.

Valedictory Address

Miss Emily Huntington Bidwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Allen Bidwell, of 17 Bliss place, ranking scholar of the class of '29, delivered the valedictory address.

Miss Bidwell gave her address as follows:

Parents and Friends; Mr. Tirrell and teachers; Mr. Palmer and Gentlemen of the board of Trustees:

The class of 1929, the last of this decade, expresses to you its sincere thanks for your assistance in guiding its feet on the paths of learning. It greatly appreciates your interest in its efforts to seek the lamp of knowledge.

In the years to come understanding of the benefits it has received here will increase. In the future it will always remember the experiences it has gained at this school.

Classmates:

Today we are leaving the Norwich Free Academy where we have spent four happy years together. The inspiration that we have received here should help us on our future roads whatever they may be.

May the class of '29, every one of us, find true success, the just reward of hard work.

Ivy Oration

The ivy oration this year was delivered by James N. Casey. In planting the hedge, the young man addressed his classmates as follows:

We are assembled here today for the last time together and are all recipients of a great honor—our diplomas from an old and respected seat of learning, the Norwich Free Academy. We have reached one of the milestones of life. From now on each of us must be his own man. We are on the threshold of the world and as heirs to the Kingdom of the Earth. Let us use the words of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette—"O God, guide us, protect us, we are too young to reign."

I believe that the present generation is on the way to the culmination of a civilization far different from any in the history of the earth—a civilization of capitalism and conservative socialism, in a world completely electrified and guided for a World Court of Kelloggs and Roots and Coolidges. It will be a civilization in which women will be a force equal in every respect to the men because Goethe's contention that "ideas are like beards, women and children never have them" is already proved false by women's success in arts and letters, business and athletics.

And so, to prepare ourselves for this advanced mode of life we must have an advanced education. Now by this I do not mean a college education. A college education is not vital to success. It only helps one enjoy success better. A modern education is a liberal education, wide in scope and unbiased in opinion. It cannot be hampered by bigotry or too many social inhibitions.

The hedge which we have planted is emblematic of these principles. It conquers all adverse conditions and when conditions improve it thrives. It lends beauty and formality. It is not frivolous. It enjoys its battle with the elements. It preserves in its growth and it is equally unaffected by jealous criticism or undeserved praise. I can think of no better model on which to build for the future. Strength of purpose, formality, beauty, modesty and fidelity are all found in it. Copy these attributes and you will succeed as that hedge will thrive so that when you have reached a position of influence and affluence you will hark back to the pleasant memories of the days you spent in the Academy acquiring a sound knowledge which will have served you well. I will take this opportunity as spokesman for the class of '29 to thank the trustees, the principal and the teachers for all they have done for us in the last four years, and wish them the greatest success in the future in their respective vocations.

The Norwich Industrial league, the classic of Eastern Conn. baseball, swings into its third year of play at the Academy campus this evening at 6:30 o'clock with a program of exercises befitting a big league opening. A parade, speaking, the usual formality of the throwing out of the first ball and last but not least a ball game have been crowded into the program for the opener. Prior to the first of the scheduled league games, to be played by the Richmond Radiator and Y. M. C. A. teams, runners up to the United States Finishing Co. a year ago, the six teams of the circuit together with the league officials will assemble at the field and march once around the diamond. Music for the parade will be provided by the Italian band, which has donated its services for the occasion.

With the conclusion of the parade Mayor Lee Roy Robbins will say a few words, windup and then send the first ball of the season speeding on its way to the plate. Umpire Hank Morin will hellow out that familiar cry "Playball" and the grind will be on. Six clubs, with the exception of the Smoke Shop, all veteran campaigners in the loop, will pick up the chase for pennant honors, won a year ago and since deserted by the Finishers. The contenders are: Y. M. C. A., Richmond Radiator Co., Polish Citizens club, Thermos Bottle Co., International Silver and Smoke Shop.

As in years past the teams in the league are made up of the best available talent in the vicinity. Each club is well balanced and there is little fear of a run-away for any particular outfit. What's more, there appears to be no reason at this time why the chase this year will not be equally as exciting as the one which was not decided until the final night of play a year ago. The managers of each club have submitted to the league board of governors a list of their players and the latter have stricken out the names of any whom in their opinion, are not eligible for league duty.

In regard to tonight's game, a better attraction could not have been selected for the opener. Both the "Y" and Richmond teams were extremely popular during 1928, drawing record crowds when they made their appearance. They played hard, clean, heads-up ball and always showed just enough scrap to make their games interesting. Both clubs have taken on additional strength this season and each is confident of being on top at the end of the season's scramble.

Particular interest centers around tonight's game, inasmuch as Lloyd Jarvis, the probable Radiator starting hurler, will be making his seasonal debut as a member of a local team. As everyone knows, Lloyd, in his first year of college, not only made the Freshman team at Holy Cross, but proved one of its outstanding stars. Against the Academy in a special game played on June 1st, he actually toyed with his former teammates while he was on the hill and hit with the same force that he did while operating under the Red and White banner. Should he fail to get the assignment against the Y he will play the center garden.

For the Y either Rabbit Gauthier or Lefty Dugas will do the hurling, with prospects favoring the former for the call. Should Gauthier go to the hill Dugas will roam the outfield together with Leffingwell and Brown. The backstopping will be done by Enos Eccleston.

Every little detail has been arranged for a gala opening tonight and all that remains necessary now is fair weather and a real enthusiastic crowd. It is hoped that the local following will give the league the same splendid support that it did a year ago. The managers of the various teams are requested to have all of their men on hand at the field at 6 o'clock sharp so that there will be no delay in the starting of the formalities. "Bill" McKnight, popular umpire of a year ago has been named as Morin's working mate and will cover the bases.

RED SOX AND YANKEES SPLIT IN TWIN BILL

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP) — The Boston Red Sox fought the New York champions of the world to an even break here today, setting the Yankees back another half game in the pennant race. The Athletics won after the Hugmen had helped themselves to the opener by 9 to 0. The Red Sox took the nightcap by 7 to 4.

Babe Ruth returned to the Yankee bench, and participated in batting practice. Frank Nekola, star college southpaw from Holy Cross, joined the club today.

JONES AND McVEY ARE MATCHED FOR BOSTON SHOW

BOSTON, June 18.—(AP) — Gorilla Jones, hard hitting negro middleweight, and Jack McVey of New York, have been matched for the feature bout of the next Boston garden boxing show at Braves field on June 24. Promoter Eddie Mack said he intended to present the winner a $1,000 belt, thereby crowning him the colored middleweight champion.

Jones appeared here several weeks ago when he scored his second victory over Al Mello of Lowell. His battle with McVey will be his first in the middleweight ranks. McVey recently defeated Arthur Flynn of Lawrence in a Boston ring.

ROTARY ERRORS GIVE BALTIC EASY VICTORY

For the first three innings, the game was nip and tuck, the score standing at 4 to 3 at the start of the fourth with the Rotary leading. In the fourth frame, however, Baltic scored five counters giving them a comfortable lead which they lengthened in the next two innings, scoring one in the fifth and three more in the sixth. The Rotary added a run in each of the fifth and seventh frames.

Alex twirled for Baltic and was touched for eight hits. Gromka pitched the entire game for the Rotary except part of the last inning, when Caron relieved him.

The only feature of the game was a long home run by McNeil, the Rotary catcher, in the seventh.

Tonight's Game

Tonight's game in the Junior Twilight league will be played at the Hollyhock Island diamond and will be between the Elks and the Y. M. C. A. The Elks having already won two games are out after their third straight. The "Y", however, are also determined to break into the win column and have been practicing diligently during the week in an effort to pick the best possible combination from their collection of material. Fuller will probably pitch for the Elks and Rusillo for the Y. M. C. A. The game is scheduled to start at 6:30 p. m. sharp.

DESPITE HAIRY ADORNMENTS H. OF D. TEAM PLAYS BALL

If there are any fans in this city who think that the House of David baseball team cannot play ball because they don't believe in cutting their hair and shaving off their beards, they will be surprised when they see the hairy players in action. They are a curious lot, the House of David team. From the neck down they dont look any different from any other team. But from there up, they make Smith Brothers look like a pair of selling platers for hair.

The barbers' union, and butchers will not compose any part of the personnel of the reception committee for the House of David ball players, as the whiskers do not need the former and are vegetarians. The athletes are human but they have their own peculiar belief and the wearing of beards is one of them. These draperies do not interfere with the diamond work of the athletes and it will be a formidable club that will appear in the role of the opposition to the local team at the J. B. Martin grounds Sunday afternoon.

The idea of wearing a beard on the baseball diamond, as the House of David players do, might revolutionize baseball if generally adopted in all parts of the country. Equipment dealers are not in favor of it as it might cramp their style in the matter of selling masks, chest-protectors, etc. If a catcher could grow an extra long and heavy beard, it would enable him to dispense with a heavy chest-protector and if the whiskers were long enough he also might discontinue his shin guards. Then too, a number of passed balls would be averted by becoming entangled in the brush. Whiskers also would serve wonderfully to screen signals from opposing clubs.

CRIMSON FRESHMEN SHOW WAY TO JR. VARSITY

RED TOP, June 18—(AP)—Three Harvard crews too kto the river this afternoon shortly after 5 o'clock and a two mile race was staged as a preliminary to the winding up of the training period. The junior varsity, combination and freshmen shells took the middle two miles of the four mile course and staged a tri-boat meet, resulting in a victory for the freshmen crew. They crossed the finishing line in 10 minutes and 42 seconds, with a half a boat length between their shell and the junior varsity. The combination boat lagged behind with a two length distance between them and the freshmen.

The varsity took the course after the race and paddled slowly down to the two mile mark, returning at an easy stroke. A racing stroke was tried for nearly a mile but owing to the heat, was stopped.

The three boat racew as rowed at an almost flat time. The members of the three crews were all in good condition after their competitive efforts.

"Jumping at conclusions" and "snap judgments" are familiar phrases with all of us.

The so-called intelligentia warn us poor lowbrows against the folly of jumping at conclusions and making snappy judgments, yet they do it, and how.

How often you hear your friends say of someone whom they scarcely known that "Mr. So and So, drinks like a fish," just because they once saw him take a glass of home brew.

Or, "Mr. Blank, swears like a pirate" just because they heard him say "damn" once when he hit his thumb with a hammer. Or, isn't it terrible the wa, Mr. Doe makes his wife do the washing" when they see Mrs. Doe hanging out a few handkerchiefs on the line.

"From little acorns the mighty oak doth grow" is a quotation that we often hear. And how often from just a single misconstrued happening does a very harmful and malicious story get into circulation.

As an illustration, I heard a story the other day about a certain party in our town. It seems a neighbor, or rather a nearby resident, chanced to see one of these new pressure cookers being taken into a house on the street.

It was not long before the story was in circulation that Mr. So and So on the street was engaged in manufacturing liquor. How did they know? Why, because they saw him sneaking a still into his house. Can you beat it?

Then there is the case where another person peeked into somebody's garage and saw a hot water tank that was to be installed in the cellar. The telephone wires became hot and the story was being transmitted with plenty of embellishments.

The story was that Mr. Blank was about to disfigure the neighborhood by establishing a gasoline filling station on the street. Why before that story got well going the busybodies even had the kind of gas he was going to sell and how many pumps were to be erected.

Can you tie that one? Sure you can, you hear those wild and wooly rumors everyday. Just work on a newspaper a few years and you'll spend more time chasing up wild rumors than you do in gathering real facts.

And then try to pin them down as to where they got their facts and their answer is "They say." And I'll be darned if they know who "they" are. When you hear somebody start his or her bit of gossip with "They say that" just listen politely and then forget it.

It's a ten to one bet that 99 per cent of the story is pure and unadulterated fiction with perhaps 1 per cent fact. And the world knows you can't get much kick outa 1 per cent stuff.

FITCHVILLE MANAGER CLAIMS WIN OVER POLISH CLUB

Sports Editor: I saw by Monday morning's Bulletin that the Polish Citizen's club claim to have won a ball game here on Sunday, June 16th. Now the correct score at the end of the 9th inning was 4 to 4. Mr. Panek ordered his players to leave the field, claiming that his team was ahead, 4 to 3, and claiming that one run scored by my team was illegal. The umpire at the plate allowed the run.

In the fourth inning Fitchville had men on first and third bases with one man down. The batsman hit a fly ball to right center which was caught. The runner on first had started to second base but returned to first and was safe. After reaching first base safe he overalid the bag and was touched out for the third out of the inning. The base runner on third base who was on the bag scored before the runner on first base was retired and the umpire allowed the run. Mr. Panek, who perhaps thought we did not know any baseball here in Fitchville, though he might lose, told his men not to play anymore and the umpire awarded the game to Fitchville by the score of 9—0.

Now, further, I wish to say that in 25 years of baseball I never played with or against more unsportsmanlike players as the men on the Polish Citizens team, with the exception of Mr. Hamil. From the first pitched ball until the last man was out they crabbed and played dirty ball. In fact two of my team were spiked. And it was not because we are yellow but because I had given my men orders not to argue or scrap on the field that others did not get spiked or hurt in the game.

I wish while I manage the team here to play clean baseball even though I occasionally lose a game.

With the umpire awarding us the game we now stand tied with the Polish Citizens, each having won a game, although I do not like to win a ball game in that way. But while I manage the team Fitchville will never play them again as I see no fun for the players or spectators to play a team of the calibre of the Polish Citizens.

D. E. MARRA,
Mgr. Fitchville B. B. club.

CUBS SWAMP CARDS IN BATTING ORGY

CHICAGO, June 18.—(AP)— Chicago hammered Harold Hald from the mound in the fifth and defeated St. Louis, 13 to 6, in the second game of the series here today.

Hack Wilson led the Chicago assault with his 12th and 13th home runs of the season.

Manager McCarthy switched his Cubs lineup and put Hornsby third place in the batting order. Cuyler was dropped to fifth, Wilson returned to the cleanup role.

SELLOUT FOR MAYS-QUINTERO BOUT IS PREDICTION OF THE PROMOTER

That the Mays-Quintero bout on Thursday evening at the Hamilton street arena will be a sell-out was the prediction of Promoter Ernest Fakourey last night. The advance sale of seats, especially the ringside seats, has reached the three-quarter mark and he advised those who desired ringside reservations to get them today and not depen don the chance of getting them at the box office on the night of the fight. This fight is apparently recognized by fight fans as an attraction that tops anything ever put on in eastern Connecticut and right it may be.

Bobby Mays, state lightweight champion, is now down to 134 pounds and is carefully guarding his weight so that he will not be trained too fine. Mays' work was cut to only light sparring and a short workout Tuesday and there will be little or no boxing for the champ today. Mays' expects to weight in Thursday afternoon at about his present weight of 134 pounds. In a workout yesterday Mays' looked fast and against three southpaw sparring partners he paid particular attention to a defense for right hand leads. He is bearing in mind that Quintero is a fighter with the southpaw stance the same as his own and it is to this end that he has been training.

Quintero is expected to arrive early today and from advance reports the Spaniard is down to fighting weight and is brimming over with confidence that he can out Mays away. That is problematical as Mays is one of the cleverest defensive boys that ever stepped in a ring. The New Londoner is never set and is seldom caught in a corner. His feet are always moving and he presents a fast moving target for his opponents to shoot at. It is this shiftiness and speed that takes away from Mays punching power but he cuts his opponents to ribbons without knocking them out.

The principals in the other star bout between Al Beauregard of Taftville and Huzhie Devlin of New London are all set to go. Devlin in New London claims that he is just burning up with eagerness to tackle Beauregard. Over in Meriden the Taftville Bearcat is rounding into shape and local backers who have seen him in training are certain that he will give Devlin plenty of action during the 10 rounds they are in the ring. Beauregard by virtue of his showing recently against Johnny Vacca of Boston installs him as a slight favorite over Devlin.

Local interest outside the Beauregard bout centers around the curtain raiser in which Norwich's popular little Irishman, Tommy McCarthy, clashes with Johnny Andrews of New Haven. McCarhty has been training hard for the past two weeks and hopes to duplicate his performance of the last show in New London when he knocked out his opponent in short order.

HERMAN'S HOMER IN 9TH GIVES ROBINS DOUBLE WIN

BROOKLYN, June 18.—(AP)— Babe Herman's home run over the right field wall in the ninth inning of the second game against the Giants put the finishing touches upon a perfect afternoon for the Robins. Brooklyn had won the first game by 8 to 7 and Herman's home run placed the second in the victory column by 7 to 6, sending 35,000 fans to supper happy.

Both Dazzy Vance and Larry Benton were knocked from the box in the opening clash, but Johnny Morrison did well enough in a relief role to pull out the decision. The Giant pitching remained spotty. Doug McWeeny went the route for the Robins in the nightcap.

Bill Terry got nine hits in ten times at bat in the two games, one blow being a home. Melvin Ott got his fifteenth homer in the first contest.

WHAT IS CHRYSLER ENGINEERING?

It is a matter of opinion as to who did most in creating the automobile, but it is a matter of fact that Chrysler has done most in modernizing it. Some of the most vital and thrilling chapters in the history of the motor car have been written by Chrysler engineers.

Chrysler engineering, analyzed in simple terms, is a combination of far-sighted vision and resourceful genius that succeed in accomplishing inspired improvements. In one word, Chrysler engineering is . . . Progress.

This is not a vainglorious gesture,—it is a statement of plain, hard-shell fact fully borne out by the following partial list of advancements which Chrysler has pioneered or developed:

Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes
Rubber Shock Insulators
"Silver-Dome" and "Red Head" High-compression Engines
High Turbulence Offset Combustion Chamber
Fully Counter-weighted 7-Bearing Crankshaft
Iso-therm Invar Strut Pistons with Tungsten Rings

ZEPHERIN DESPATIS DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART ATTACK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 18.— About in the business district this morning, apparently in normal health and talking with friends and acquaintances and occupying himself watching Ira A. Warren painting safety zones across the Main street pavement, Zepherin Despatis went to his home on Connecticut Mills avenue, entered, lay down on the bed, screamed and died before medical aid could be summoned. The young man, whose occupation was that of weaving, had been subject to heart attacks for a number of years and also had suffered greatly from a chronic rheumatic trouble. However, while he was down town half an hour before he died he appeared as well as he ordinarily was and there was not the slightest indication that his earthly end was so imminent. Mr. Despatis was born at Roxin Pond, Canada, May 11, 1904, a son of Zepherin and Della Gelieau Despatis. With the family he came to the states as a child. He had been resident here for years. He is survived by his mother, two brothers, Florimond and Aurelian, and by one sister, Robia. His father died a number of years ago. Dr. George M. Burroughs, medical examiner, viewed the body and pronounced death due to natural causes.

The people of this town figuratively lay down and panted today as the weather man relentless applied the broiling process that has endured for about a week. Thermometers being what they are, and not at all convincing to many people who do not believe all they see, not to mention all they hear, it may be a thankless bit of reporting to mention that there were any number of thermometers in shaded and sheltered places registering 90 to 100 degrees—note the variation—at 2 p. m.

With the trout fishing season waning, The Bulletin, through this column, renews its offer of $1.00 per pound for a brown trout provenly taken from a Killingly stream. The offer is made not because this species of fish is worth that much money, but more to satisfy the curiosity of scores of sportsmen of this town as to what has become of the several thousand brown trout of good size that were placed in streams hereabouts several years ago and about which nothing has since been heard except through the press. The $1.00 a pound offer goes for one fish, and may it weigh as much as the largest of the kind do. However, it must be established beyond doubt that the said trout is caught in Killingly waters.

A little country schoolhouse — on Church street— in the town of Brooklyn that has been in disuse for years has been purchased by Miss Bertha Conde, writer, world traveler and lecturer, and is to be remodeled and modernized for her use. Miss Conde is at present staying at the Park Inn here. This school building, reminiscent of the days of the little red schoolhouses, though this particular one does not happen to be painted in that color, is situated in historic territory, and nearby The Elms, the country home of Miss Emily M. Morgan of Hartford. It is in the territory known in pre-Revolutionary days as Kingswood Manor and close by Old Trinity church, which dates back to the 18th century and is one of the oldest Episcopal churches in America. Four books have been published by Miss Conde, who is listed in Who's Who, probably the best known of them being The Business of Being a Friend, which volume appeared in 1916. Miss Conde has interested herself in Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A. work and the book mentioned above is widely used in the work and study of these organizations. Miss Conde's Who's Who address is New York city.

State Officers Theodore Strand, Elton Nolan and John Murphy of the Danielson barracks raiding a farm place in the West Thompson district yesterday seized a still of 25 gallons capacity that was running. The officers also seized 20 gallons of alcohol they found in a cupboard and various utensils and containers. Bridget Rydzewski was placed under arrest, later presented in a justice's court of the town of Thompson and fined $100, which she paid.

Store owners and their staffs in Danielson will start this year's half-holiday period on July 4, with a full holiday, for this year Independence day comes on a Thursday. The half-holidays will continue through July and August. However, grocery and meat concerns already have started half-holiday arrangements and are closing during June on Thursday afternoons.

There was an outpouring of bathers this afternoon, numbers going from Danielson to Old Killingly pond and to Moosup pond. The rivers here have been largely abandoned as swimming places, being generally regarded as too dangerous.

Supt. W. E. Parker of the schools of Killingly and Brooklyn will spend considerable of the long vacation period here, keeping in touch with his work and giving attention to various matters pertaining to the school.

Worcester interests have purchased from Horowitz Brothers of New Haven the stock purchased by the New Haven firm from F. E. Bitgood a few days ago.

An indication of the trend of the times, mechanically, is the appearance here of four young men obtaining subscriptions for a publication with a view of earning sufficient money to pay their way through the aero engineering course of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Routine business was transacted today when stockholders of the Killingly Trust company held their annual meeting.

Allan A. Dean, Jr., of Philadelphia, is in Danielson to spend the summer with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Smith of Hawkins street.

COLCHESTER

FIRE COMPANY ELECTION APPROVED BY BURGESSES

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, June 18—At a recent meeting of the borough warden and burgesses the names of the newly elected officers of the Colchester Fire Co. were duly approved and placed on record. It was also voted to contribute $15 towards a public subscription for a fireworks display on the evening of July 4th. The burgesses have asked Fire Chief Brown to have full charge of the affair. It is hoped that some of the public spirited citizens will contribute toward the fireworks fund. The magnificent displays which were arranged in past years by the late Harley P. Buell and the late Dr. E. B. Cragin have been much missed in recent years and borough residents are pleased to note that an effort is being made to revive the custom.

Dog Warden Harold F. Brown with Deputy Chauncey Canung from the office of the commissioner of domestic animals were scouting about the outskirts of the village Monday morning and as a result they brought into the local justice court six farmers whose dogs were roaming about the town in violation of the state quarantine requirements. Prokop Dickey, M. Podolski and Constantine Siborski of the Chestnut Hill section, Kalman Berman of South Main street, Leopold Kutis of the Bulkeley hill section and Frank Laskowski of Linwood avenue were all presented before Justice of the Peace P. Charles F. Brown and Grand Juror Myron R. Abel in a session of court held at 6 o'clock Monday evening. Each man was fined one dollar and costs amounting to a total of $11.90 apiece. Laskowski was fined an extra dollar as his stray dog had not been registered. Warden Brown states that all of these men had been warned repeatedly to confine their dogs on their own premises but when they continued to ignore the quarantine restrictions their arrest became necessary in accordance with instructions from the commissioner of domestic animals.

PUTNAM

MANY REPORTS OF RYAN COME TO POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 18—The local police were deluged with telephone calls this morning from residents of the rural districts reporting that they had seen a man answering the description of William Ryan of Webster, missing now for a week. Acting on clues furnished by these people Captain Jarvis caused investigation of each to be made but no trace of Ryan had been obtained at a late hour tonight.

Clarence Shaw of School street, a filling station attendant reported that a man answering Ryan's description entered his station last Wednesday or Thursday morning and offered for sale sewing needles and as a bonus included a fountain pen which he claimed he found in Wilsonville. Shaw refused the proposition and the salesman then inquired for directions to Providence. The station attendant told Capt. Jarvis this morning he observed nothing suspicious about the traveler and gave his appearance in Putnam no attention until he read a description of Ryan in Monday's Bulletin. Harry Prentice, proprietor of a gasoline station on North School street, reported to Capt. Jarvis of seeing the same person last Wednesday or Thursday. Prentice stated that the man was unsuccessful in his attempt to sell him (Prentice) needles and left at once in the direction of Danielson.

Another report from North Woodstock was received by Putnam police this morning from a woman who claimed to have seen Ryan Monday morning. She intimated that he was walking on the road to Southbridge when she observed him.

Deputy Chief John Templeman of the Webster police said this morning that every section of Providence and its outlying districts have been combed in search of Ryan by police of that city, but without success.

Louis Bodo of Walnut street, owner of "Otto," a German police dog, set his dog on trails in Wilsonville and Thompson Monday afternoon. The man hunting canine followed a number of trails and a final one which brought the police to Brandy hill in Thompson. Here the dog stopped. Webster police believe that Ryan was given a ride by a passing autoist and carried to some point between Brandy hill and Putnam.

The search continued today by police of Webster, Putnam and Providence. The fresh clues furnished this morning increased hopes that the missing man would be found before Wednesday.

A Gideon Rally and Bible Dedication will be held at the Congregational church on Sunday evening. This will be a union service in which the ministers of the local churches will take part. This occasion is the placing of sixty-five Bibles in the rooms of the Putnam Inn.

Raymond, also of Hartford, secretary of the Connecticut Bible society and well known to many Putnam people will be present at the meeting and will deliver his famous address, "The One Book."

A similar service and gathering will take place in Willimantic on Sunday afternoon when Bibles will be placed in Hotel Hooker and the Nathan Hale hotel.

Graduation exercises at St. Mary's parochial school will take place in St. Mary's hall Wednesday evening. An elaborate programme has been prepared by the faculty of the school. The speaker of the evening will be Rev. W. Arthur Routhier, pastor of St. Charles' church in Bridgeport. Father Routhier is a former curate of St. Mary's and former principal of St. Mary's school. Prizes to the honor students of the class and the presentation of medals and diplomas to the graduates by Rev. Ernest J. Bolleau principal of the school will brine the exercises to a close.

An elaborate and interesting programme presented was as follows: "White Overture," (P. Metra), high school orchestra; address of welcome, by Philip Arnold, class president; class history by Chester Hale; "Star of the Desert," (Bonheur) by the boys' and girls' glee clubs; characteristics, by Katherine Bansahan and Dorothy Woodis; "Mighty Lak a Rose" sung by Leo Pominville, tenor; statistics, by George Holbrook; "Cowboy Song," (Anderson) boys' glee club; class will, Thomas Foley and Herbert Lepire; "Come Down to Kew," (Sleeper), girls' glee club; class prophesy, Eva Jane Covell and Anne McDonnell; "Spanish Dance," high school orchestra; class poem, William Shann; charge to the juniors, Russell Sherman; violin solo, "Serenade," Leo Pominville; presentation of the class gift to the school, Philip Arnold; class gifts, Rhoda E. HANOVER

The closing exercises of the Hanover schools were in the form of an entertainment at the parish house Thursday evening, the 13th. This entertainment was highly appreciated and enjoyed by all who attended and proved that the pupils appreciated and made excellent use of the year's instruction given them upon the part of their most devoted teachers. A very enjoyable reward awaited the children by a picnic on Lee hill the following day.

Hanover also witnessed another picnic upon the same day at another of the homes so well adapted to celebrations of that character when about 40 members and friends of the Norwich Round Table met with Mr. and Mrs. Stone at the Parsonage-by-the-Pines for their annual meeting and picnic, which took the place of the usual banquet held at this time. PACKARD

Greatest Spring Sales in History

PACKARD sold more cars in the month of May than in any May in the company's history. April before it was the greatest April that Packard has ever enjoyed.

After all, the motoring public is the final judge of merit—and the greatest spring business in Packard's history can only be a tribute to the quality and reputation of Packard cars.

Even more important is the tribute to Packard supremacy found in the records of Packard ownership.

Two-thirds of all Packard Standard Eight business comes from those who give up other makes of cars. This is most significant when country-wide records indicate that ninety-six per cent of all Packard owners remain in the Packard family—replace their old Packards with new ones.

If you are considering the purchase of a new car, investigate the three Packard Straight-Eight lines—Standard, Custom and DeLuxe. Prices range from $2275 to $5985 at the factory.

Our facilities for handling used cars are excellent. When may we appraise your present car and put a Packard Eight at your disposal for a demonstration drive?

If you prefer to buy out of income, you will find the Packard Payment Plan most attractive. Many take possession of their new cars without any cash outlay—because the used car allowance equals or exceeds the down payment.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Mr. Wren Solves the Mystery
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Pray cultivate the open mind
And to the truth be never blind.
—Mr. Wren.

Jenny Wren had forgotten all about the House Centipede she had twice tried to catch in the shed back of Farmer Brown's house. The first time she had succeeded in merely pulling off one long leg. The second time she pulled off two legs.

She was reminded of it, however, when Mr. Wren came bringing a House Centipede which he had caught in the shed. "Did you ever see anything with so many long legs?" he asked.

"Yes," said she, "that is exactly like that queer insect I tried to catch and told you about. Where did you get it?"

"In the shed," replied Mr. Wren.

"Well," said Jenny, "I don't think

"Well, we can't stop and listen to these legs any longer" the children will like all these legs."

"Then we'll pull them off," replied Mr. Wren.

So they pulled off the long legs, killed the Centipede and fed it to one of the babies. "Listen!" said Jenny. "Do you remember that funny little squeak in the shed when we couldn't find any insect anywhere around?"

"Of course I remember it," replied Mr. Wren, who was sitting with his head cocked to one side. "I hear it this instant."

"So do I," said Jenny.

Both sat with their heads cocked to one side. You know the ears of birds are very keen. They can hear what you and I might not be able to hear. The tiny squeak that would sound very faint to you and me would be much more easily heard by Jenny Wren. Just now she was hearing not one squeak, often repeated, but many squeaks.

"Look at those legs!" said Mr. Wren suddenly. "One might think they were alive the way they are kicking."

Jenny looked at the legs they had pulled from the House Centipede. All those legs were kicking, just as if they were alive. Just then Mr. Wren flew down close to one of them and cocked his head to one side. Then he hopped over to another and did the same thing. There was a funny expression on his face as he looked up at Jenny Wren. "My dear," said he, "here are your squeaking insects."

"What do you mean?" Jenny asked.

"I mean that it is these legs that are making the squeaking that we thought was made by insects," replied Mr. Wren.

"Who ever heard of such a thing?" cried Jenny.

"All the same, it is true," replied Mr. Wren. "Come, listen to one of these legs yourself."

Jenny did. Then it was her turn to have a funny expression as she looked at Mr. Wren. She hopped over to a leg that had stopped kicking and listened. There was no little squeak. "You are right, my dear," said she. "I remember now that when I saw that queer fellow in the shed and tried to catch him, I pulled off three of his legs. I got one the first time and two the second time, and both times I noticed those kicking legs and heard the squeaking. It's a queer performance. Well, we can't stoop and listen to these legs any longer; the babies are crying for food!"

She spread her wings and off she went and Mr. Wren followed. Now that the mystery was solved, they no longer had any interest in it.

And the mystery was solved, for the House Centipede does have legs that squeak after they are pulled off. They do not squeak before, but afterward. They kick and squeak and so draw the attention of a possible enemy away from their owner, who thus has a chance to escape. You know there is a Lizard who throws off part of his tail, which twists and wiggles and thrashes about while its owner escapes.

COLUMBIA

A play, The Nurnberg Stove, was given in the town hall Friday evening by the pupils of the Pine street school. The hall was well filled. The presentation of the play showed careful training by the teacher, Miss Congetta Sergio. Several of those taking part showed wonderful ability for acting. John Zuryk as August Strehla and John Ozuchry as the father, Karl, also Katie Ambrose as the older sister Dorethea showed marked talent in that direction. In the scene laid in the antique shop there were several interesting numbers, among them being a drill by the four wooden soldiers, Lillian Stein, Catherine Ambrose, Molly Rubenstein and Mary Zuryk—a graceful dance by Sylvia Mokolaw and accordion music by Mary Zuryk. Molly Rubenstein played the part of the queen.

"The simplest method of skin care is by far the best. That is the consistent thorough use of Palmolive Soap, which combines deep cleansing with the well-known cosmetic effects of palm and olive oils."
L. Massé

"In addition to my own beauty products, I always recommend the soap blended of palm and olive oils. It leaves the skin in a smooth, healthy condition."

The leading experts advise one soap and only one . . . to safeguard beauty

"Palmolive Soap is a powerful factor for promoting perfect skin hygiene. Other soaps, even more expensive ones, owing to their caustic nature, often irritate the epidermis and, in the end, tire and spoil it."
Mme Lakensky Le Grès
L'Institut de Beauté, 26, Place Vendôme

PARIS! The natural place to go for advice on beauty! And here all the leaders in Parisian beauty culture agree on one soap as best, Palmolive!

They echo the opinion of the distinguished Lina Cavalieri, that "Palmolive, by cleansing the pores thoroughly, leaves the skin in a smooth, healthy condition."

The list of patrons attended by these well-known Parisian experts includes Her Majesty, the Queen of England; Her Majesty, the Queen of Spain; the Infanta, Princess Eulalia, and numerous personalities in the world of opera and the theatre, as well as women of wealth and social position from many lands. They all learn, in Paris, how to retain a youthful complexion by the twice-a-day use of Palmolive Soap.

How to use Palmolive

The treatment is so simple, when one considers the effective results it brings. Massage a lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water gently into the pores. Rinse, with warm water, graduated to cold. Then, and then only, are you ready for make-up—Parisian specialists tell you.

In America, alone, there are over 14,500 beauty specialists who advocate this palm and olive oil facial soap . . . greatest professional endorsement any soap ever had!

"I recommend to my clients the soap of palm and olive oils which, separately, have great cosmetic value—and which, in the blending of Palmolive Soap, are doubly effective."
Dr. N. G. Papot

RECOVERY IN STOCK PRICES HALTED BY APPROACH OF CREDIT STRINGENCY

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP)— The recovery in stock prices, which has been under way for a fortnight, showed signs of petering out today on the approach of the expected mid-year credit stringency. While the bulk of the day's activity was on the side of rising prices, with at least a score issues pushed into new high ground, professional traders took profits freely in the late trading on the belief that the market was entitled to at least a technical reaction. Closing quotations disclosed marked irregularity.

Resumption of the flow of gold from Great Britain to New York, with takings of $7,000,000 reported in London today, was one of the most important financial developments of the day. This was expected to alleviate the mid-year credit strain which has become decidedly involved this year through the calling for payment of more than a billion dollars in stock subscription "rights."

Call money held steady at 7 per cent all day, with a fair supply available due to the heavy accumulation of funds here by large corporations in preparation for July 1 disbursements, but bankers look for a stiffening within the next day or two. Time money showed further relaxation, with all maturities available at 8 per cent. Widespread publicity was given to a statement by Arthur Reynolds, Chicago banker, that a relaxation of the federal reserve boards' credit policy was likely in order to facilitate the movement and storage of crops.

Official announcement was made during the day of the organization of the third large public utility holding company by the Morgan interests. This apparently stimulated the demand for the public utility and electrical equipment issues, new high records being established by American Power & Light, American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, Standard Gas & Electric, General Electric and Westinghouse Manufacturing. Profit-taking cut down some of the gains.

The Associated Press index of 20 leading public utilities registered another new high record, on a gain of nearly 5 points. The indices of 50 industrials and 20 rails showed small net declines. Trading continued moderately heavy in volume, the day's sales falling just below 3,350,000 shares.

Despite the fact that second quarter earnings of the General Motors Corporation are expected to set a new high record for that period, and first half year earnings of other manufacturers are likely to make excellent comparison with the same period a year ago, the motor shares showed signs of heaviness. Selling presumably was based on the theory that the increasingly keen competition may bring about price cuts, and impair profits in the last six months. Graham-Paige, in which a new pool has just been formed, was a conspicuous exception, retaining 2 3-4 points of its extreme gain of 4 points. General Motors, Chrysler and Studebaker lost a point or more and Auburn dropped 3 1-2.

Further selling also developed in such recent favorites as Commonwealth Power, Lazo Oil, Michigan Steel, Montgomery-Ward, National Distillers, Murray Corporation, Sears Roebuck, F. G. Shattuck, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Wright Aeronautical, all off 2 to 4 points.

Baldwin Locomotive, which will shortly announce a 4 for 1 stock split-up according to current rumors, jumped 18 1-2 points. A. M. Byers, International Telephone and R. H. Macy also were conspicuously strong.

In the foreign exchange market, Sterling showed a slightly firmer tendency presumably in reflection of the demand for bills to pay for gold imports. French francs advanced to another new 1929 high, and the Argentine peso sank to a new low.

Wheat and corn advanced about a cent a bushel and cotton closed unchanged to 50 cents a bale lower, with weather reports the chief influence in all markets.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP)—Dealings in two convertible issues, American Telephone 4 1-2s and International Telephone 4 1-2s, completely overshadowed the remainder of the bond list today.

The former had a turnover of approximately $2,700,000, par value, and closed 1 5-8 net higher at 127 1-4, the best price in several weeks, on the strength of the stock into which it may be converted after January 1. The International Telephone issue jumped 5 1-2 points to 131 1-2, a new high, on sales of about $470,000, par value. The two telephone bonds accounted for nearly one-third of the total business for the day.

Other convertibles also found higher ground, notably Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s which made a new 1929 high at 217 1-2 after a rise of 9 points, thus more than recovering yesterday's slump. Sales of this bond, however, were small.

With time money at 8 per cent for all maturities, other sections of the list responded to somewhat better sentiment with the result that the combined price average of representative issues moved up. Rails, utilities and steel company obligations absorbed most of the interest and although selling depressed quotations in spots, the trend was to slightly higher ground.

Rails making the best response to the moderately broad inquiry for obligations in this group included, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific General 4s and Refunding 4s, St. Paul Adjustment 5s, Pennsylvania Consolidated 4s and General 4 1-2s, Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Southern Pacific Refunding 4s, Southern Railway General 4s and Union Pacific Refunding 4s. Canadian National 4 1-2s, Seaboard All Florida 6s, Wabash 5 1-2s and New York Central 4 1-2s receded fractionally.

Among the utilities, strength developed in Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, New York Telephone 6s, Tennessee Electric Power 6s and North American Edison 5 1-2s.

The industrial list was marked by activity in some of the steel issues and the price changes were mostly upward. Illinois Steel 4 1-2s moved up a point, Indiana Steel 5s advanced 1-2 and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s improved 3-8. Lackawanna 5s lost nearly a point.

United States government issues found enough support to gain small fractions. Foreign bonds were dull, the feature being Kingdom of Italy 7s which made a net advance of 1-4 on a moderately heavy turnover.

Collins and Griffin pleaded guilty and were sentenced to 30 days in jail. The youths said that they had been to New York and were on their way home when they arrived in New London Saturday evening. Going to Huntington street they observed the automobile of Walker parked alongside the curb and decided to steal it. Tony Albino, 23, of Station 5, Waterford and Louis Kounas, 21, of 389 Bank street, are patients at Lawrence hospital, the former suffering from a fractured left leg and bruises and contusions and Kounas is suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. His condition is reported as critical.

Albino was driving his motorcycle along the New Haven turnpike last night and Kounas was riding on the rear seat. The cycle was speeding along the highway in Waterford and when near Reynolds' curve, Waterford, a Chevrolet, driven by Walter T. Branch, 892 Bank street, emerged from a highway, almost in front of the speeding cycle. Before Albino could bring the cycle to a stop, it crashed against the auto. The force of the collision hurled the two occupants of the cycle to the highway. Both drivers were thrown to the highway and when passing autoists stopped it was determined that Kounas was seriously injured for he was bleeding from the nostrils and ears. He was rushed to the hospital where he remained unconscious throughout the night, but regained consciousness this forenoon. Branch was arrested on a technical charge of reckless driving by state police. In the event of Kounas' death the charge will be changed to that of manslaughter.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Claudette Colbert, Broadway stage star, likes the movies and finds talking pictures fascinating, but she also is in love with the stage and never has played before the camera except when she was also working behind the footlights.

It was so in her first picture, "For the Love of Mike," made in New York while she was having her film stage success in "The Barker."

It was so in her second, the new crook and fake spiritualism melodrama, "The Hole in the Wall," made at Paramount's Long Island studio while she was working every night and two afternoons a week in "Tin Pan Alley."

Coincidence has something to do with it, doubtless. But since Miss Colbert is one of the most sought-after leading women of the Broadway stage, busy nearly all the time, about her only chance in the films is by doubling up in her engagements.

This schedule doesn't allow much time for play—working at the studio from 9 o'clock in the morning on, and at the theatre until 11 o'clock at night. But she thrives on it and looks pretty.

She was born in Paris of French parentage and has made her home in New York for the past 15 years. Her English and French diction are equally perfect.

Robert Florey, the director of "The Hole in the Wall," which comes to the Broadway theatre for a three days run on Thursday, is also French. He and Miss Colbert conversed in both French and English while working on "The Hole in the Wall," in which she has the leading feminine role.

Palace Theatre

"Hearts in Dixie," which now is showing locally at the Palace theatre, comes here with the most glowing praise from every theatre in which it has been shown.

This Fox Movietone all-talking production is unique from many standpoints. It tells a story of the southland, just after the Civil war; it has pathos, yet is fraught with humor, and besides its actors it has more than two hundred singers, dancers and musical comedy stars recruited from among the best in the field.

Among the entertainers is the Billbrew chorus of sixty mixed voices which render two score or so spirituals and folk songs that come from the screen in marvelous fashion. The chorus has a wide radio reputation.

Directed by Paul Sloane, "Hearts in Dixie" is amusement of the highest order.

"Hearts of Dixie" creates a new category among screen production in the sense that it has a dramatic story of wistful beauty as a medium to convey songs, choral and instrumental music and dances. A feature in itself is the all-talking comedy, "The Crazy Nut". This program also includes a Pathe sound news, the world events in scene and sound, and Topics of the Day, the funny magazine of laughs in sound.

Kelly Tires

"Our company's progress in the tire manufacturing industry," said Mr. J. J. Salling, manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire company's branch in Hartford, "is an instance of how unceasing efforts to maintain and better the high quality of a product must in the long run obtain recognition from the buying public.

"It may be of interest to some to know that in the last four years Kelly has trebled its sales—this in the face of the keenest kind of competition ever experienced. Certainly we must attribute part of the increased business to increasing car registrations, but the greatest factor is a growing appreciation by car-owners that it pays to buy the better class of tires.

"The public's recognition of the Kelly reputation was proven recently, when our company went into production on the new Kelly REGISTERED balloon tire. The demand for this new tire has become overwhelming, and this in the face of the fact that its price is considerably higher than that of the regular Kelly line. The public, through years of experience with Kelly products, has accepted at its face value our company's statement that the REGISTERED balloon is "the finest tire that money can buy."

Farm Class Nets $2,116

ROBINSON, Ill, (AP) — Fourteen members of the vocational agriculture class at Robinson high school realized $2,116 net profit on class projects during the last year.

PSYCHOLOGY IS FACTOR IN REPARATION ACCORD

NEW YORK—(AP)—Second thought on the reparations settlement has convinced some leading bankers that a sharp line must be drawn between the economic and the physchological results of the Paris agreement.

The economic benefits, they say, will accrue from the establishment of an international bank to stabilize exchanges and from the probable flotation of $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 in reparations bonds this fall or early next year.

On the other hand, they believe that the psychological effects can begin operating immediately. The world can go confidently ahead with its building of ships, roads, factories, bridges, piers, airplanes and motor cars without fear of an economic impasse.

OLD CLAIMS YIELD GOLD TO HYDRAULIC DREDGES

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, (AP)— Hydraulic dredges, being used for the first time in Alaska goldfields, took nearly $1,000,000 in the metal last year from claims which pilacer miners discarded 20 years ago.

Two years and $10,000,000 was the cost of installation in time and money. Two more dredges will be used this year on the same claims and officials of the Fairbanks Exploration company estimate a gross revenue of $50,000,000.

POETRY

Forebodings

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow,
Leave the things of the future to fate;
What's the use to anticipate sorrow?
Life's troubles come never too late.
If to hope over much be an error,
'Tis one that the wise have preferred;
And how often have hearts been in terror
Of evils—that never occurred!

Have faith, and thy faith shall sustain thee;
Permit not suspicion and care
With invisible bonds to enchain thee,
But bear what God gives thee to bear;
By His Spirit supported and gladdened,
Be ne'er by "forebodings" deterred;
But think how oft hearts have been saddened
By fear of—what never occurred!

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow!
Short and dark as our life may appear,
We may make it still darker by sorrow—
Still shorter by folly and fear!
Half our troubles are half our invention,
And often from blessings conferred
Have we shrunk in the wild apprehension
Of evils—that never occurred!

They're Wrong

One type of mind in this broad land,
I've never understood:
It says that life is sweet and grand,
The world is bright and good
Yet war and pestilence are rife,
And starving children cry
And all the simple facts of life
Should show such folks they lie.

But there's another line of speech
That makes me just as sad:
It's from these tearful boys who teach
That all the world is bad—
But blossoms bloom in earth below
Birds sing in skies above,
And Heaven's fountains overflow
To drench the earth with love!

The optimist, the pessimist,
Each is a blundering pest;
Together bad and good exist,
And tragedy and jest.
Each misses what is understood
By children to be true—
The world is neither bad nor good,
But middling—just like you!

—Ted Robinson, in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HOCKANUM AUTO BADLY DAMAGED IN CRASH AT WASHINGTON ST. CORNER

Supervisor William H. Callahan of the water department, driving the Dodge coupe belonging to the department, was in collision about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the corner of Sachem and Washington streets, with an Auburn sedan driven by its owner, Mrs. Alice L. Brewer, 5 High street, Hockanum. Both machines sustained considerable damage and an occupant of the Hockanum woman's machine was reported to have suffered injuries.

Supervisor Callahan was driving east on Sachem street and as he came to the corner, the other machine came up Washington street. Each driver tried to avoid a collision but the water department coupe struck the sedan in the side at the left front mudguard and swung so that it sideswiped the sedan at the same time.

The Hockanum woman's car jumped the curb on Washington street and ran over onto the grass of Chelsea parade. The water department coupe had the forward bumper and right front mudguard and headlight broken and axle bent. The sedan sustained much greater damage. Both mudguards on the left side were crushed, the left front axle broken, steering gear broken, left front door frame split, left front tire and tube split, and a large dent put in the sedan top at a point near the rear corner.

A woman passenger in Mrs. Brewer's car was taken into the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Levin on Williams avenue and was attended there by Dr. David Sussler, who found her suffering from bruises on the body and arms.

WINDS FROM GRAND BANKS BREAKING THE HEAT WAVE

Heat Prostrations Increased Throughout the East Yesterday—Excessive Use of Water at Newark Has Brought the Reservoirs to a Low Mark—Most of the Eastern States Sweltered as the Seventh Day of the Heat Wave Drew to a Close—Cooler Weather is Forecast For Today.

(By the Associated Press)

While cool northeasterly winds, blowing down from Grand Banks and the iceberg lane, brought comfort to the New England seacoast, most of the eastern states Wednesday night still sweltered as the seventh day of the heat wave drew to a close.

Millions in the metropolitan area, all over New Jersey, Pennsylvania, western New York and inland New England, got little comfort out of the news that it was cooler Wednesday in Boston except from telling each other that "when Boston cools off, the whole east will cool off."

Meanwhile, although Boston and Portland, Me., were several degrees cooler Wednesday than Tuesday, and getting cooler all the time, schools were closing in Springfield and Lawrence, Mass., because the mercury had shot up above 90 at noon.

For New York and surrounding territory relief was promised late Wednesday, with thunder storms, and the prediction reads: "Somewhat cooler tomorrow (Thursday)."

But throughout the day the temperature kept pace with that of Tuesday, when in New York city it mounted to 93 and broke all records for June weather. At 4 p. m. Wednesday the temperature in New York city was 92, only 1 degree lower than Tuesday at the same hour and higher than it had been on any June 19th since 1872.

Heat prostrations increased throughout the east, and Newark, N. J., faced still another problem. Excessive use of water in the last week had brought the reservoirs to a low mark, and emergency steps had to be taken to conserve the water supply. Firemen were instructed not to turn on the hose any more to cool off youngsters in the streets.

HEAT CAUSED DEATH OF MAN IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 19—(AP)—Charles Miller, 71, the first local victim of the intense heat this year, died here tonight five hours after he was overcome while at work. This is the first case of serious prostration reported in the immediate vicinity.

TWO BABIES AND A MAN OVERCOME IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 19—(AP)—Two babies and a man were overcome by the heat here today. The babies, one 11 months old, and the other 14, were treated at the Emergency hospital and discharged later.

Daniel Lyons, 35, was treated at the railroad bridge at Bridge street, and Railroad avenue, and taken to Hillside Home for further treatment. The temperature at noon was reported as 90.

DAWES' SPEECH PRAISED BY THE BRITISH PRESS

LONDON, June 19.—(AP)—Discussion of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes' speech at the Pilgrims' dinner last night and of his opinions on how the disarmament problem should be attacked was active today, without a single adverse criticism.

There is no doubt that the speeches of Ambassador Dawes and of Prime Minister MacDonald on the disarmament question and the hope for improvement in Anglo-American relations have given the new government an excellent sendoff. Premier MacDonald's foreign policy has monopolized the attention of the press of all papers, leaving the new minister free from the criticism they might otherwise have received.

Some newspapers have chaffed the prime minister for a certain theatricality in the way he maneuvered the incident to the advantage of his new administration. They hint that he will not find his path so easy when it comes to actual negotiations.

This has not prevented the entire press from welcoming Ambassador Dawes' speech with whole-hearted enthusiasm and wishing Premier MacDonald success in his disarmament and peace policies.

People are now wondering what will be the next move in this connection, it cannot be denied that there is some disappointment in the pronouncements made by the ambassador and the prime minister.

The public had been led to suppose that something more concrete would be divulged, and also that Washington's idea what the naval yardstick should be, would be disclosed.

DEATH OF CHILDREN DUE TO FOOD POISONING

CHICAGO, June 19.—(AP)—Food poisoning, rather than a plot to kill by the use of drugs, was believed today to be the cause of the malady which resulted in the death of three children and threatened the lives of the two surviving children of the Edwin Markowski family.

The theory of the poison plot was virtually abandoned by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, county coroner, when his staff chemist, Dr. R. W. Webster, reported he found no traces of well known chemical poisons in the vital organs of the two children who died first.

Search for some micro-organisms which might have been responsible was started immediately by Dr. Richard H. Jaffe, director of the county hospital laboratory, and Dr. Bundesen enlisted the aid of Prof. E. O. Jordan, head of the department of bacteriology at the University of Chicago and one of the nation's leading bacteriologists.

Coroner Bundesen said the theory of food poisoning was strengthened by the fact that both the mother and father of the children apparently were suffering from the same malady.

ONE DEATH IN COLLISION ON NEW YORK 6TH AVE EL.

NEW YORK, June 19.—(AP)—Police headquarters tonight reported that one person was killed in a collision between two Sixth avenue elevated trains tonight at 113th street and Eighth avenue. Several persons were reported to have been injured.

The collision, a rear-end crash, occurred at the highest point on the elevated structure between West 122th and West 113th streets, and debris fell from the structure, endangering people in the street below.

Police and firemen began at once the work of removing the injured, some of whom had to be carried back along the runway beside the tracks to the 110th street station. Police reserves assisted passengers along the runway and down a 50-foot ladder that firemen raised from the street to the scene of the wreck.

A small fire that broke out in the wreckage was quickly extinguished and power was shut off, completely tying up the line.

SALEM TRIAL WITHDRAWN BECAUSE OF ILLNESS OF JUROR

SALEM, Mass., June 19—(AP)—Trial in Essex superior court of Mrs. Mary Grinkovich and Wadlow Renouski, both of Lawrence, for the attempted murder of Peter Yegelovitch, of that city, today was withdrawn from a jury and put over for the September session because of the illness of John Hafner, of Lawrence, a juror.

The defendants are charged with attempting to take Yegelovitch's life by poison because he had bothered one woman.

MEXICO IS AWAITING DECISION BY POPE PIUS

MEXICO CITY, June 19—(AP)—A day of waiting for decision by Pope Pius on the basis of agreement for settling the controversy between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic church, bore no results today. The watchers settled down to a night vigil thinking that a cable message from Vatican City might be received in the late hours.

It was learned that the subject has been put up fairly to the pontiff and that announcement of a definite settlement of the three year old problem depends only upon his assent. If his approval is received President Portes Gil and the papal legate, Archbishop Ruiz Y Flores of Michoacan, will meet and sign the already prepared public statement. The world will then learn the terms on which the conciliation has been effected.

It was admitted in authoritative circles here that if Pope Pius disapproves the present agreement, the chances for a settlement will be remote. It was declared that the concord reached by the president and archbishop represents the limit to which the Mexican government can go.

The terms of the agreement were cabled to the vatican through the Chilean embassy on Monday night. Since then the negotiators here have maintained an attitude of watchful waiting.

SENATE WRANGLED UP TO TIME OF RECESS

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Wrangling to the end, congress recessed tonight for a vacation preparatory to tackling again two months hence the tariff revision measure.

The senate meets again August 19, by which time it expects to have from its finance committee the house tariff bill. With its work cleaned up, the house membership scattered until September 23. Then it will return to await passage by the senate of the tariff measure and begin negotiations for adjustment of differences.

The adjournment was taken without consideration of the conflicting reports made by the senate judiciary committee on the right of Andrew W. Mellon to continue as secretary of the treasury in the face of an old statute forbidding that cabinet officer to be engaged in carrying on commerce. A bare majority of the committee held that Mr. Mellon was legally holding office.

The last hour of the house session saw it send on his way Walter Newton, who has resigned as a member from Minnesota to accept a place as secretary to President Hoover. Praise was accorded him by half a dozen members, including both the majority and minority leaders, Tilson of Connecticut and Garner of Texas.

WARE SHOALS MILLS OPEN WITH NON-UNION WORKERS

WARE SHOALS, S. C., June 19—(AP)—The Ware Shoals mills, idle for more than two weeks, following a walkout of employes when two men were discharged, operated today with a partial force while two units of national guard and 18 special police and state constables stood by to prevent possible violence.

Beyond hooting and jeering by strikers as workers who refused to join them marched into the mill this morning, the day passed quietly. Mill officials said 700 operatives returned to work. The plant employs about 1,700 workers on both day and night shifts combined.

The national guardsmen numbering 90 were ordered here by Governor John G. Richards on request of the sheriffs of the three counties in this section, under command of Major George Morgan, of Greenville.

The strike of the Ware Shoals employes followed the discharge of R. E. Campbell and O. H. Darnwell, two employes, who were engaged in organizing a local of the United Textile Workers' union.

A 16 YEAR OLD BOY WAS DROWNED AT MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN, June 19—(AP)—Albert Mascarella, 16, was drowned here today when he slipped on a piling and struck his head, dropping into deep water. The lad was swimming with a group of his playmates and had climbed to the top of a wharf piling, near the Standard Oil company dock. He lost his footing and struck on his head, falling off into the deep water, from which his body was recovered by police a half hour later. Efforts to revive the boy were futile.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

ROME, June 19—(AP)—King Victor Emmanuel has conferred the hereditary title of marquis upon Senator William Marconi.

TOKYO, Japan, June 19—(AP)—Large numbers of persons were reported missing in the vicinity of Komagatake volcano, which has been in violent eruption, but it still was impossible to obtain any official estimate of the number of the dead and injured.

HILO, Hawaii, June 19—(AP)—Four pieces of airplane wreckage picked up near Kamilo on the Island of Hawaii were believed to have been parts of the plane, Golden Eagle or Miss Doran, which disappeared in the Dole flight from California to Honolulu, in 1927, during which five fliers perished.

BOGOTA, Colombia, June 19—(AP)—Forty persons were said today to have perished and more than 100 to have been injured in the almost complete destruction of the town of Seville by floods from the Quilleace river. A landslide from a hill into the river caused the stream to change its course.

CIVIL WAR VETS PARADE ON GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 19.—(AP)—With faltering step but heads held high, 200 soldiers of the furious engagement of nearly 66 years ago on the famous "wheat field of the Gettysburg battlefield" marched in proud review early tonight over that same ground.

The march was held at 6:30 p. m. because of the excessive heat. A number of the paraders wore full uniforms while others were garbed in "mufti." Most of the bent gray heads carried the funny little blue caps which were regulation equipment of the Union army in the Civil war. In the reviewing stand were the new and retiring commanders of the Pennsylvania department Grand Army of the Republic, Philip Engelskirger of Franklin, and George L. Rudolph, Pittsburgh, respectively.

After the review the veterans in turn reviewed the Sons of Veterans and then the whole assemblage of the six affiliated organizations with the G. A. R. went to a theatre. They were addressed by Lieutenant Governor Arthur H. James.

PANIC ON STEAMER WHEN BLOW-VALVE BURST

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 19—(AP)—Two hundred passengers, mostly women and children on the steamer Osman Bedell, bound from this city to Erie Beach, Ont., were thrown into a momentary panic this afternoon and two of the crew were slightly injured as a blow-off valve in the engine room burst under heavy pressure of steam. Passengers were removed later in safety.

The vessel was about 1,000 feet off the Erie Beach dock at the time, Captain Fontaine said, and started to drift down into the swift Niagara river. He succeeded in anchoring not far from the Peace bridge.

A cloud of steam which enveloped the boat caused watchers on Canadian and American shores to spread the report that a fire had broken out and every available crew in the vicinity was despatched to the Bedell's assistance.

The injured men were Engineer Robert Greiner and Fireman Daniel Bossner of Buffalo. They were the only occupants of the engine room at the time the valve let go.

RUM RUNNERS IN PISTOL BATTLE WITH U. S. PATROL

WINDSOR, Ont., June 19—(AP)—Rum runners of the East Windsor sector today fought a running revolver battle with a United States customs patrol cutter on the Detroit river and escaped into Canadian waters.

Walter S. Petty, acting collector of customs at Detroit, said the rum runners deliberately opened fire when the rum craft was near the foot of Joseph Campau avenue, Detroit.

Revolver shots struck the customs patrol cutter and penetrated its prow. The customs men returned the fire and the rum runners retreated, maintaining a heavy fire, Petty said, even after they had crossed the international line. The United States boat abandoned the pursuit at the line.

Advices from Ottawa tonight said the department of external affairs had received partial information of the occurrence and was awaiting a more complete report.

HARTFORD, June 19.—(AP) — Miss Charlotte E. Forsyth, director of religious education for the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Connecticut, has resigned effective September 1, to become director of religious education for two parishes in Baltimore, it was announced today by Rev. Dr. John F. Plumb, executive secretary of the diocese. The executive council has appointed Miss Helen R. Stevens, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., who has been director of religious education at St. John's church, West Hartford, to succeed Miss Forsyth. Miss Forsyth is understood to have preferred the Baltimore position because there she can be with her mother.

EIGHT PERSONS KILLED IN VIOLENT THUNDERSTORMS

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, June 19.—(AP)—Eleven persons were killed and many more were injured in violent thunderstorms throughout Croatia and Macedonia today. Many children were hurt when the primary school at Kamensko, Croatia, was struck by lightning.

In the neighborhood of Uskub a bolt of lightning struck among twenty peasants who were rushing for shelter. Two of them were killed and six were badly shocked. Storm havoc paralyzed railroad communication between Veles and Gratzko.

ACTION IN THE HOUSE ON THE FRENCH DEBT

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(AP)—The Hawley resolution to authorize postponement of the date of maturity of $400,000,000 of the French debt from August 1, 1929, to May 1, 1930, in the event of ratification before it falls due, of the Mellon-Bereheger agreement, was adopted today by the house and sent to the senate.

AIRPLANE REFUELING ENDURANCE FLIGHT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 19—(AP)—Gene Shank and Owen I. Haugland, Minneapolis aviators, took off from Wold-Chamberlain airport here at 2:55:8 p. m. today in their second attempt to break the world's airplane refueling endurance record of 172 hours.

Lindberghs Attend Test Of Airplanes

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., June 19—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh came out of their honeymoon seclusion today, the place of their return to public life being, fittingly, an aviation field.

The famous flier and his wife spent the morning here to witness the first tests in the $150,000 competition being held by the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics in the hope of discovering a "fool proof" airplane.

Before the testing of the first entrant began the Lindberghs drove up to the hangar in the colonel's car, sunburned from three weeks on their honeymoon yacht, and became at once the center of all interest. They posed for news pictures together and then with a group of officials of the the Guggenheim fund and later the colonel told reporters something about the safety competition.

He expressed the opinion that although aviation was on a sound footing commercially, planes must be made far safer and easier to handle than at present before the day of universal flying could dawn.

Col. Lindbergh took up the first entry in the safety competition for a trial flight, with Harry Guggenheim, president of the fund, as passenger. His only preparation for the flight, the first since his marriage, was to cast aside his blue serge coat and don a helmet and parachute.

After a short spin in the air, during which he did no stunting, he landed and almost at once took Mrs. Lindbergh up for a trip in a fast army biplane. They stayed in the air about 10 minutes, circling high about the long island fields.

The Lindberghs seemed in high spirits and only for a moment did the colonel show any annoyance at the attentions of the press. When he went up for his first flight he left his wife sitting in their car and a bevy of camera men who had come late and so missed the posed pictures began "shooting" Mrs. Lindbergh, who is the daughter of the American ambassador to Mexico, Dwight W. Morrow. Mrs. Lindbergh promptly ordered the engine and drove along the edge of the field to a position near the two hangars where she was hidden from the photographers.

When the colonel landed and learned what had happened he frowned and strode to the car, which he drove to the other end of the field where the army ship was warming up. He helped his wife aboard her parachute, aided her to climb into the passenger cockpit, and strapped her in carefully.

After this flight the Lindberghs left the field and almost simultaneously Guggenheim announced that formal testing of the first entry in the competition, a Brunner Winkle Bird biplane with a Kinner 50 horsepower motor, had been postponed for probably several days, due to a defective operation of the oil pump. The fund's pilots spent the afternoon familiarizing themselves with the plane in the air, it was considered likely that the actual tests would not be made until next week.

REPARATIONS OFFICIALS ARE TO REPORT TO HOOVER

NEW YORK, June 19—(AP)—The four Americans who represented the United States at the recent reparations conference in Paris will go to Washington next Tuesday to report orally to President Hoover on the meetings which resulted in a settlement.

Announcement of the proposed visit to the capital was made here today by Thomas W. Lamont, one of the four. The others are Owen D. Young, the chairman, Thomas Nelson Perkins and J. P. Morgan.

Mr. Lamont said that no formal report would be presented to the president, but that the experts would be prepared to clarify any points in the negotiations and settlement on which Mr. Hoover might desire further information. It was possible, the banker added, that Secretaries Mellon and Stimson might sit in the informal meeting with the president.

STATE SUES FOR DAMAGES TO A MILITARY TRUCK

HARTFORD, June 19.—(AP)—Having refused, by legislative act, to pay damage claims aggregating $15,000 as the result of an automobile accident in East Haven last June involving a Connecticut national guard truck, the state now has brought suit for $2,000 to recover for damages to the military truck caused by alleged negligence in operation of the other car. The suit has been brought by Deputy Attorney General Ernest L. Averill in behalf of the state and Col. Harry B. Bissell, U. S. property and disbursing officer for Connecticut. Roland Steeves, of West Haven and Max Isenberg, of New Haven, are the defendants.

GALE ADDS TO PLIGHT OF QUAKE SUFFERERS

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, June 19.—(AP)— Westport, Murchison and other points in the earthquake zone today reported further shocks but generally of lessening intensity. At Nelson the quakes last night were of greater violence than any since the big shake last Monday.

The chief concern now is for news regarding the inhabitants of numerous valleys around Murchison. Searching parties have been sent out to visit those places and the real state of affairs will not be known until they return.

Westport said that a heavy sale today added to the plight of the quake sufferers.

To Protect Maritime Interests Of Boston

Movement to Equalize Rail and Ocean Rates For Freight Passing Through Eastern Seaboard Ports.

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Investigation of the problem of equalizing rail and ocean rates for freight passing through eastern seaboard ports with a view of removing alleged discrimination against the port of Boston, was asked in a resolution today by Senator Gillett, republican, Massachusetts.

The investigation would be made by the interstate commerce commission and the shipping board. They would be asked to determine whether a way could be found by which the rates might be equalized and to recommend legislation to congress.

Gillett said that Baltimore now has a three cent advantage in rate schedules over Boston while Philadelphia and Montreal have a two per cent preference.

Maritime interests of Boston who contend that rate discrimination has caused a serious decline in freight passing through the port, have asked for an equalization based on the contention that Boston is nearer many foreign ports and should, therefore, be given a rate commensurate with that advantage.

TARIFF HEARING HELD BY SENATE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Dissatisfied with the increased duties granted many agricultural products in the house tariff bill, representatives of the major farm organizations of the country launched a movement before a senate finance sub-committee today to obtain higher protective rates.

Chester H. Gray, of the American Farm Bureau federation, told a subcommittee that higher rates on jute and jute yarns, fabrics and coverings would open a market for 1,000,000 additional bales of American cotton.

After Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut, observed that farmers would have to pay an additional $10,000,000 if they used cotton instead of jute bags for baling, Gray said cotton would last longer and the outlay in the long run would not be more than for the jute covering.

So many witnesses convened on the three sub-committees in session during the day that Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, warned that unless witnesses appearing on the same item with similar pleas agreed upon one witness the committees "would be here until next December."

WALTHAM, Mass., June 19—(AP)—Teachers quelled a panic among children at the Lawrence grammar school here today after lightning had struck the building. More than 125 children made a rush for the doors when fire apparatus drew up at the school but Miss Mabel Furbush, principal, led the teaching corps in preventing any mishaps.

The children were about to leave the school when the lightning struck. It sounded the school fire alarm and the city alarm. The children paid no heed to the school alarm and remained in order when Miss Furbush told them it was best that they wait until it stopped raining before leaving the school. The ruse worked until the firemen arrived.

A PLAN TO PUT WISCONSIN IN THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

Resolution For a Commission to Sell Citizens Wine, Beer or Whiskey For Medicinal Purposes is to Be Introduced in the Legislature—Plan Would Be For the Citizen to Sign an Affidavit That He Would Use the Liquor Only as a Medicine—Liquor Would Be Sold Only by the Case.

MADISON, Wis., June 19—(AP)—Amplifying the proposal for a state liquor business, a resolution calling for a commission to sell citizens wine, beer or whisky for medicinal purposes is to be introduced in the legislature.

All that would be necessary under the proposed plan would be for the citizen to sign an affidavit that he would use the liquor only as medicine. A heavy penalty for those caught falsely swearing would be imposed.

Senator Ben Gettleman, a wet and a leader of the legislative group which led the successful fight for repeal of state dry laws announced he would present the new plan, amplifying his proposal of a constitutional amendment to allow the state to manufacture, transport and sell liquor.

The new scheme, which also calls for a constitutional amendment, was given to the senator by A. W. Lafferty, New York attorney, who described himself as a former member of congress. Lafferty has prepared a brief arguing that the eighteenth amendment leaves to the states the power to legislate on medicinal liquor, and does not give it to the federal government.

"The medicinal liquor commission," would be composed of three salaried members appointed by the governor and sell liquor only by the case. A penalty of one year in prison or a fine of $1,000 for buying liquor from the commission and using it for other than medicinal purposes, is provided in the resolution.

Like the resolution yesterday, the new one would have to be voted on by two successive legislatures and then in a referendum. It could not possibly be adopted before 1935 because of this, and it is believed that it will not get beyond committee because of the constitutional prohibition against the state entering private business.

PROHIBITION OUTBURSTS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Prohibition outbursts reverberated again today in the legislative and executive branches of the government, attention being devoted chiefly to the Hoover law enforcement commission and shootings by dry officers.

Wets and drys of both parties clashed in senate debate to provide a high point in the recently prevalent controversy over use of weapons in enforcing the Volstead act. The closing day of the session was featured by charges of Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, that the administration was "submerging" prohibition in the law enforcement inquiry.

Senator Jones, republican, Washington, another dry, rushed to the president's defense, asserting that while he "may not have said to his law enforcement commission what I would have said, nevertheless on two twigs before gives his prohibition views and we must give him more time and opportunities before we can believe he has forsaken the principles he announced."

Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, a wet, denounced shootings by prohibition agents and deplored the "fanatical attitude" toward dry enforcement which he contended was undoing the law.

Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, an ardent dry, replied it was time to "stop all this gush about murders and force senators to help enforce the law."

He declared "the senator from New York could make a louder speech about the fifty five-dry agents who have been murdered," saying most of the killings by dry agents were "accidents and some of those who were killed ought to have been killed."

Senator Glass is the author of the $250,000 fund under which the president's law enforcement commission is operating. He said it was the prime purpose of that appropriation to authorize a prohibition inquiry, and contended Mr. Hoover had shifted from a discussion of prohibition in the campaign to talk about general law enforcement since then.

"I am citing these facts," he declared, "to show how completely the major problem has been ignored and submerged. I will not say its purpose is to shift the responsibility for the determination of a perplexing problem, but, at least that will be the inevitable result."

Assistant Secretary Lowman, in charge of prohibition enforcement, also came in for attention in the day's turmoil. He ushered from his office Louis Jacques, who recently resigned as customs border patrolman at Detroit and who was quoted in the house by Representative Clancy, republican, Michigan, as having said he was told to shut up in connection with a recent killing there by a prohibition officer.

Lowman declared "I wouldn't consult with a man like that," as he showed Jacques and a Detroit newspaperman, who accompanied him, to the door.

Senator Glass told the senate that in the campaign no mention was made about general law enforcement and the issue was always the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act.

"And I challenge any man to point to a syllable uttered or a sentence written by the president in the last campaign," he continued, "which committed him specifically to advocacy of the Eighteenth amendment or in any wise to advocacy of the eighteenth amendment. Nowhere explicitly or implicitly has he said that he is an advocate of the Volstead act."

BLOODSTAINS ON GLOVES OF DR. JAMES H. SNOOK

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 19—(AP)—A report from C. H. Long, a chemist, that blood stains were found on the door jamb of the automobile and gloves of Dr. James H. Snook, held for investigation in the murder of Theora Hix, 24, Ohio State co-ed, and the release of the other man held, Marion T. Meyers, marked developments today in the murder investigation.

Long's report made to County Prosecutor John Chester, Jr., said it had not been determined yet whether the blood was human or animal.

Dr. Snook, deposed Monday as a professor of veterinary medicine, at Ohio State university, had told police that he injured his hand while repairing his automobile, last Wednesday, the day before Miss Hix was hammered and knifed to death and her body left on a rifle range near this city.

Shortly after Meyers was released from jail, President George W. Rightmire of Ohio State university announced that he had recommended that Meyers be dismissed from the staff of the department of horticulture for "alleged moral delinquency".

FUNDAMENTALISTS GAIN AT BAPTIST CONVENTION

DENVER, June 19—(AP)—Fundamentalists gained a point in a clash today at the convention of the Northern Baptist church here when the convention went on record to receive but not approve a report by a committee on cooperation with the Disciples of Christ.

The convention voted to empower the committee to continue its work for another year and adopted a resolution under which a change can be made in the complexion of the committee.

Modernists among the delegates looked with favor upon a movement for closer cooperation between the denominations, but the fundamentalists opposed the report. It recommended that the mission societies and boards of the Baptist church cooperate with the Disciples of Christ but did not recommend that the two denominations consolidate.

Another clash on the convention floor today came over a resolution denouncing war. Major Alva J. Brasted, army chaplain, took the floor leading the opponents of the anti-war declaration, and endeavored to have an amendment inserted. The effort met defeat and the resolution was adopted in its original form.

SKIPPER OF THE LAUREL RESCUED BY COAST GUARD

ASTORIA, Ore., June 19—(AP)—Slightly bedraggled but cheerful, Captain Louis Johnson, skipper of the wrecked freighter Laurel reached port today after being rescued by coast guardsmen.

The Laurel's master was taken off the stern section of his broken ship this morning by a power boat from Capt Disappointment whose crew braved the heaving rollers pounding the battered hulk.

For fifty hours Captain Johnson had kept a lone vigil on his wrecked vessel after the rescue of his crew.

On reaching shore he told why he had rejected all offers of rescue, until forced to hoist a white flag late yesterday as a signal for aid.

He thought the terrific storm off the mouth of the Columbia river would subside, and that the stern section on which he took refuge would drift inshore to a point where salvage might be possible. The Laurel was broken in two shortly after it ran aground Sunday.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., June 19—(AP)—Emmet J. White, the border customs agent charged with killing Henry Virkkula June 1 waived preliminary examination today on a charge of second degree murder and was bound over to the district court to await action by the grand jury.

A class of 43 graduates, the largest in the 30-year history of the school, received diplomas at the closing exercises of the Windham street school held in the auditorium of the school this evening. A clever program was presented as an operetta entitled The Contest of the Nations. This was followed by musical selections by Miss Beatrice Lamothe, violin, with Miss Miriam Silcox, accompanist. The graduates then marched to their places on the stage where the diplomas were presented by William B. Sweeney, member of the town school committee. The D. A. In connection with the awardment of the five dollar D. A. R. prize for the promotion of interest in American history, Principal Frederick R. Noble of the Windham street school placed the prize on a new awardment basis this year at the school. Principal Noble's new departure, which gives the prize to the best student in history rather than for the writing of a winning essay, met with the general approval of the donors and educators. In offering the prize which was awarded at the graduation exercises of the school tonight to Rose Limanni, the application of the pupil to the study of history, with allowance for possible resources and home assistance, was considered. It was felt that the writer of a winning essay on American history need not necessarily be the most ardent student of the history and that the prize was awarded in the past to a number of pupils who had superior advantages of research and literary ability over others who benefitted only from applied study of school courses.

He gave figures to show how few grade crossings there are in comparison to the number of other hazards and charged that the greatest harm was done by the public in over-emphasizing such accidents while other types of accidents brought but casual attention. The railroad man said that if a driver exercised the same caution required of him at street intersections upon approaching a grade-crossing, such accidents would never happen.

Vicious Literature

Secret distribution of vicious literature, distorting the truth in an effort to mislead the public, cannot offset the fact that only the finest tobacco—the cream of the crop—is used in Lucky Strike Cigarettes. Leaders of sport, art and fashion testify to the improved flavor. 20,679* physicians say toasting does in fact make Luckies less irritating to the throat. And the public confirms these opinions. DANIELSON

DR. C. R. GARCIN MARRIED TO MISS LUCILLE CARON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 19—This afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. James' rectory Miss Lucile Caron of Hawkins street and Dr. Cecil Redvers Garcin of Dayville were united in marriage by Rev. Antheleme Mollard, M. S. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Alice Caron of Putnam and A. A. Bonneville of road street was best man. The bride wore an ensemble of white flat crepe and a small white hat. Her bouquet was a corsage arrangement of lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid's gown was of egg shell shade georgette and her hat to match. Her bouquet was of talisman roses. Following the marriage there was a reception for relatives and intimate friends at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Caron. The bride received many beautiful gifts. Dr. and Mrs. Garcin are now en route to New Foundland, where Dr. Garcin's parents, residents of Montreal, have a summer home.

The bride's going away gown was of brown and biege tweed, with hat and shoes to match.

The bride has been a resident of Danielson all of her life and has a great number of friends. She is an especially talented musician and singer and has been a prominent figure in many amateur theatrical events in Danielson. She is a graduate of Killingly high school and is secretary to General Manager Herbert H. Pepler of Powdrell and Alexander.

Dr. Garcin, Killingly's youngest physician, is a graduate of McGill university at Montreal with degrees in both medicine and surgery. He has been practicing with much success in this town for the past two years.

Announcement was made this morning that George O. Thomas, engaged in business here for many years has sold his business to Horowitz Brothers of New Haven and is to retire. The purchasers are the same as those who purchased the stock of F. E. Bitgood a fortnight ago. Mr. Thomas said this morning that 49 years have elapsed since he first entered the mercantile business in Danielson. His first employment was in the dry goods store of Sherman and Keech—Danielson's original Boston store—as a clerk. For a time he with a partner, William James, he operated a drug store here, but later returned to the dry goods field in which he was destined to be actively interested for so many years. For several years he was a member of the firm of Bitgood and Thomas, with a store in the Keystone block, but later sold his interest and purchased the dry goods business of James Perkins, in the Hyde block, where he has continued to do business for upwards of 35 years, carrying a stock noted for its excellence. Mr. Thomas' retirement coming so closely after the retirement of F. E. Bitgood, his partner during his early business career and neighbor merchant for more than three decades, came as a surprise to the people of Danielson. Horowitz, who have a large store in New Haven, are to greatly reduce the stock of the Thomas store at once and then will have some announcements to make relative to their future activities in Danielson.

Mrs. Julia Baker Spalding, 83, widow of George D. Spalding, died early this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Burnham in East Windsor, where she had been making her home since the death of Mr. Spalding about two years ago. Mrs. Spalding was a native of Brooklyn, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker. She lived the greater part of her life in Brooklyn and was well known in Danielson, where her husband was employed for years, as a clerk in a hardware store. Prior to Mr. Spalding's death the couple lived on Retreat avenue in Hartford and he was in the employ of typewriter manufacturing concerns of that city. Mrs. Spalding leaves in addition to her daughter, a son Arthur Day Spalding of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., four grand-children and a half-sister, Mrs. Harris Arnold of Dayville. Mrs. Spalding is to be buried beside her husband in Cedar Hill cemetery in Hartford.

The fact that Governor Frank G. Allen of Massachusetts yesterday viewed a bell cast by Paul Revere in 1795, that is to be shown about New England in an effort to raise funds to erect a replica of the home of General Henry Knox, donor of the bell, is of special local interest. Over in Brooklyn in the tower of the historic Unitarian church there is a bell reputed to have been cast by Paul Revere. There is some obscurity as to its history, one version being that the bell, as it now is, was recast from metal of the original Revere bell that hung in the tower. When the General Knox Revere bell comes into this territory as it may, there will be an effort to check up accurately on the Brooklyn bell, and meanwhile any information about its history will be welcomed for publication in this column.

Unless rain comes soon, sweet corn and light garden crops must fail. One report stated that corn planted Monday, June 10, showed June 19, no sign of germination.

PUTNAM

PROVIDENCE ST. BRIDGE AGAIN PRONOUNCED UNSAFE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, June 19—The Providence street bridge, which underwent partial reconstruction last year is again in a weakened condition it was learned authoritatively today. Joists supporting the span on the east end linking the bridge to the highway were found to be corroded and rusted out when beams were removed by workmen today.

A gang of workers are now employed in resurfacing the flooring on the bridge and when the worn rafters covering the steel work were removed the condition of the joists was discovered. The fact was immediately reported to the selectmen and efforts to place the beams into a safe condition are now being made.

The bridge is now closed to traffic and it is thought that about two weeks will be required before work will be completed and the span reopened again.

William P. Warren, a member of the board of selectmen, in company with City Engineer George W. Perry, examined the Providence street bridge tonight in view of drawing specifications for the repair of the weakened east end. After a complete examination Selectman Warren said that the present joists which are rusted away are to be removed and be supplanted with new beams.

The old Cutler house on Main street for many years an old landmark is now raised onto moving blocks and is prepared for its journey to a new site on the corner of Main and May streets, about 75 yards north of its present position. While the matter of clearing the site is nearly completed no definite word as to when the Beacon Oil company of Everett, Mass., will commence the construction of the proposed refined petroleum products distributing point, has been received.

The city highway department is now engaged in the laying of sewers on Harrison street, an item for which appropriations were made at a recent special meeting of the voters of the city.

Rotarian John F. Reardon of North Grosvenordale equipped with a deck of cards, each card bearing the name of a member of Rotary, and with two questions "What has Putnam to offer for new industries?" and "Why is Putnam the best city in the state?" made a most interesting programme at today's luncheon of the Putnam Rotary at the Putnam Inn. As Mr. Reardon turned the cards each member of the club was called upon to deliver an answer to the problems submitted by the Rotarian. Each member of the club presented a carefully reasoned and selected opinion and efficiently answered the two questions given him to debate.

Rotarians Arthur E. Smith and William P. Warren were elected by the club as auditors to examine the treasurer's books and report their findings to the club at the first meeting of the organization in July.

Visitors at today's Rotary gathering were Henry Dubuc and Sabin Russell of Danielson, Charles Martin of New Haven, Edward Turison, Hartford and T. Labouef of Webster.

Two long observed customs of class day at Putnam high school which faded from the programme of events following the graduation of the class of 1924 were again missing from the programme of class night of the class of 1929 Tuesday. They are namely, the "salting" of the freshman students and the battle of the undergraduates for the senior class standard.

FOR WORLD PEACE.

While talk has indicated that a real move was to be made by the United States and Great Britain for further efforts in behalf of arms limitation and therefore in behalf of world peace, it was successfully put into action by Ambassador Dawes in his first public address in London. Not only was it successfully put forth but it was accorded a warm reception with assurances of hearty support from Prime Minister MacDonald.

On different occasions efforts have been made to bring about further limitation of armament. Conferences have been held but there has always been something to block the progress desired. General Dawes took into consideration the first of the failures when he indicated that civilians might successfully accomplish the naval limitations. He knew, of course, that the differences in the past were attributed to the experts. He would not throw them overboard entirely but he would not put them in the first line of the negotiations. He would have the problem handled by statesmen with the experts kept in the background, and his idea is one which has been supported by others.

From their statements it would appear that Ambassador Dawes and Premier MacDonald were in complete accord regarding the naval problem, and with both countries desirous of accomplishing something there ought to be some headway made.

Care was taken, however, to make it clear that whatever was aimed at in regard to the navy was not intended to be an agreement solely between the United States and Great Britain. The representatives of other leading nations were at the dinner and they were there for the purpose of giving them first hand information of what was being launched and to let them know that it was a move in which all were expected to join. Only by such action could there be any real accomplishment in the way of world peace. Well did General Dawes declare "New agreements should have not partial but world sanction". With the United States and Great Britain taking the lead in such an agreement they make the right kind of an appeal to those countries which have joined hands in signing the Kellogg treaty for the outlawing of war.

WHEN SOMETHING GOES WRONG

Loss of life is so much a part of the every day record that we are inclined to expect it and to express surprise only when many are involved. We shudder at the crashes of automobiles and the lives that are sacrifices and the bones broken, but the number of accidents increases instead of decreases. Even the fact that there are more than 25,000 persons killed every year by autos doesn't create an effective demand for safer conditions.

There was a serious loss of life when the City of Ottawa, the big passenger carrying plane plunged into the English channel. Some were rescued but seven were drowned. It was a case where the engine went wrong, where it was possible to communicate the situation to the airdrome, where the attempt was made to drop the plane near a trawler after it was found it could not stay in the air until a landing field was reached but where it was impossible to prevent the loss of life.

In view of the hazard that is attached to flying it is interesting to note that this was the first loss of life that had been experienced by this particular transportation company which has carried more than 100,000 passengers over a distance of 5,000,000 miles. Such a record is excellent, but in view of the break in that record close attention should be given to the results of the investigation surrounding the accident.

Even though there have been no lives lost in the past the question now arises as to whether the plane was adequately equipped with motors to meet the situation when something happened to one of the motors. Now that something has happened and a fine record has been broken there will be opportunity for anticipating the uncertainties and guarding against them. It has to be done by other transportation and it is only proper that it should be done by those using the air.

TACKLING THE TARIFF.

It is expected that the senate will revise the tariff bill received from the house. Senator Borah endeavored to have the senate's work on the tariff restricted to the revision of the farm schedules, and he thought he had succeeded, but when the votes were counted it was found that he lacked a majority and the tariff will therefore be considered on broader lines.

It was made clear by President Hoover some time ago that it was expected that there would be a limited revision of the tariff. It was expected that the farm schedules would get attention in connection with the farm relief story, but those were not the only schedules needing attention. Inequalities prevailed elsewhere and it was anticipated that they would come in for revision.

Opinions differ as to whether the tariff revision accomplished in the house was in keeping with the suggestions of the president. There are administration supporters who insist that the house bill is justified and should be adopted. Others contend that the revision has been too sweeping, that it was never intended to change so many schedules, and there are those who maintain that the revision has not been broad enough and has left out certain things upon which a tariff ought to be placed or the existing duty increased.

While there has been reference to the belief that the senate is for a high tariff the close vote on the restriction to farm schedules would not indicate that it was in a position to put through any such plan.

The fact is that no general revision of the tariff is sought or wanted at this time. The administration is opposed to any such move. This was made clear in the call for a limited revision and the vote in the senate gives the impression that if the senators had been asked to express themselves on a limited revision instead of a restriction to the farm schedules the vote would have been in the affirmative.

It is probable that there will be a difference of opinion between the house and the senate on tariff action but when the final vote is taken it must conform with the president's views or the president's veto can be expected.

SWIMMING INSTRUCTIONS.

It is gratifying to learn that the Y. M. C. A. is again to give a week's instructions in swimming to those 11 years of age or older who cannot take care of themselves in the water.

Through such instructions all boys physically fit in Norwich ought to know how to swim. It is well that they should, for in addition to being a fine form of exercise it means protection of a vital character. There is never any telling when such knowledge may be required to save one's life or to give assistance to others in trouble.

Swimming is simple and most boys learn without difficulty, but it is highly desirable that they should receive instructions under conditions that are favorable, where there is no danger and where efficient instructors will be at hand.

The opening of the Y. M. C. A. pool for this purpose means a distinct service in behalf of the boys of Norwich. The good results in previous years can be attested by many swimmers and it will be surprising if the boys of this city do not take full advantage of the association's offer.

Many who go to the shore or to other places for bathing must appreciate their handicap in not being able to swim. They must realize their helplessness should they go beyond their depth, should they step into a hole or should they by accident be thrown out of a boat or off a dock into deep water. Knowing how to swim doesn't insure protection against all conditions, for reason must be exercised by swimmers as well as other people, but it does provide them with the means of taking care of themselves in the water and helps to prevent many cases of accidental drownings in the course of a year. People should know how to take care of themselves in the water as well as on land, and the Y. M. C. A. does a fine thing in offering to supply this instruction.

SUMMER VISITORS.

From now on the vacationists are going to be much in evidence in New England. This part of the country has been making a bid for more summer visitors and the hopes are that the number will exceed those of previous years.

There are those who have been summering in New England for years. They are going to come back to the shore, to the mountains, to the country, to the lakes. They are coming back because they like it and because they find here just what they seek in the way of recreation. If there was any question about it even within the vicinity of Norwich it was answered by the recent visit which was made by chamber of commerce members to the camps nearby. An even more effective answer could be obtained should a visit be made in another week or so when the camps will be filled by the thousands who will be enjoying their attractions following the closing of school.

Then there are those who will be touring through New England to see its historical places, its old cities, its old houses and the countless other attractions which are to be found in all directions. Good roads lend encouragement to these visitors and they carry them through some most delightful scenery.

It is expected that there will be something like 3,000,000 visitors to this part of the country before snow flies and the coming of these visitors means that they are going to spend money. We believe that we have that which furnishes a fair exchange for the half billion dollars which will be left here, but it is to be borne in mind that along with other things there should go fair treatment and due courtesy. They are responsible for a large volume of the good advertising which New England needs and they are of the utmost importance in creating the right kind of an impression. They should always have a conspicuous place among New England attractions.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A stowaway is always the wrong kind of ballast.

Just at present it looks as if rum row had shifted from the Atlantic seaboard to the vicinity of Detroit.

The man on the corner says: Though exhorted to live and learn, many have trouble following the advice.

Senator Borah wanted a tariff limited to farm schedules and pretended to support the administration. When he insisted upon the debenture plan he was well aware that it was against the wishes of the administration.

Dr. Faunce claims that the person who claims the privilege of the street after he has muddled his sense organs by drink should be shut away from civilization, and we imagine we hear a chorus of amens.

JOY CHASERS

At noon Dot telephoned to her husband.

"Joy Malone wants us to go to the show with Ted and her tonight," she said.

"Those two are just like rubber balls," grunted Bob, "always on the bounce." Dot replaced the receiver on its hook and thought, "Bob's right. Those two are like rubber balls. But why aren't we? Are we getting stale or falling out of the run of things, or what?"

All day the idea was like a thorn lodged in her customary complacency—pricking—pricking. The evening arrived, and with it came not only Joy and Ted but a violent storm as well.

"Really," said Joy, "I think we should be moving along. The clouds look positively menacing."

"As soon as I slide into my coat, I'll be ready," promised Dot. But just then one of the French windows in the sun parlor swung open with a sudden vehemence and a wild gust of wind burst through the room, upsetting a tall vase of flowers and scattering a pile of papers in all directions.

"Oh, dear," wailed Dot, "the water's all over my rosewood stand, and look at those books. Quick, Bob, shake them off. I'll get a rag." A moment later she came sailing back with a frightened look on her face. "It might be a cyclone. Let's go down into the basement," she said.

The men laughed, restoring her courage somewhat, but the wind continued to blow furiously and the rain followed in torrents. Joy tapped the toe of one shoe nervously against a rocker.

"How stupid of us not to have hurried," she said petulantly. "If we had used a little forethought, we might have been at the show. As it is, we are likely to be cooped up here for the night." There was a sharp, disagreeable edge on her voice, not at all in keeping with the texture of her dress or the modish outline of her figure.

"We might have a game of cards," suggested Dot, and immediately made a mental tabulation of the contents of her icebox. Just what, she wondered, were the possibilities for an impromptu lunch. With a flush of embarrassment she realized that the right provisions were decidedly few.

"In a pinch," she thought, "I could pull out the popcorn popper, but I don't know whether that sort of thing would register with Joy."

And Joy shattered such contemplations by saying "Surely the storm won't last forever. If we do have to stay here the first part of the evening maybe we can run out to Red Owl later on and have something decent to eat, and a dance or two. Ted, call up and see if we can get a table."

The card game was a failure. Joy's conversation reeked with peevishness. She scored her husband openly for his mispLays.

"Good grief!" cried Ted at last, "you are always criticizing me."

"You make so many blunders," snapped Jory. "If you'd just watch what you are doing—but you don't. It's like the soup this evening. If you'd have watched it, you'd never have made that horrible stain on my best damask runner." Ted looked at Bob.

"This sit-by-the-fire business is all right in books, but when it comes to real life—" He finished not with words, but with a shrug of his shoulders and an exasperating outward movement of his arms. "What do you say to the Red Owl, folks? The storm's about over. Let's beat it."

Toward morning Bob and Dot yawned their way through their own front door. Bob let fall a shoe here and an observation there.

"Under the skin, these joy-chasers are a discontented lot. Can't stick it out by themselves long unless they begin to score one another about spilling soup. Take us stay-at-homes, we can sit by the fire any old time and be contented."

"All day I've been wondering what's wrong with us," drawled Dot. "Now I know. It's nothing. Turn out the light. I'm half asleep."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 19—To one member of the supreme court the summer recess must have come shadowed by dread of the lonely months to intervene before duty again called him to self-forgetfulness in the tasks of his great office.

Not even the striking tributes paid him by the press in the last weeks of the court term could have compensated Oliver Wendell Holmes, associate justice, for the summer he would not share with the wife who had been his closest comrade for nearly threescore years.

Because of this, some of his colleagues on the bench were filled with apprehension as to what the summer might mean for the aged justice.

They had seen his unfaltering courage meet the shock of his wife's death with head erect. Day by day on the bench or in conference he was the same.

The blow failed to dim his ready wit or the calm independence of thought that has marked him in the 27 years of his court service.

In the Schwimmer case, almost the last of the term, which gave him opportunity to voice the dissenting views for which he was famous, Justice Holmes was at his best in pungency of expression.

Friends Solicitous

Yet his friends dreaded for him that lonely summer when he could not find solace in the work of the court that was his immediate refuge when death broke the long comradeship.

Yet Justice Holmes, just a little more than a decade from a century mark of life, seemed to have no doubts himself. Always he has been invariable in observance of those days set apart for memorial services of the comrades who died with the colors in the war between the states.

The memories of his own gallant service in war seemed to crowd more closely about him as the years turned to snowy white his hair and flowing, military mutache.

Caring little for social diversion, advanced age gave him excuse to shirk even white house receptions; but never was he missing at Arlington cemetery on memorial occasions.

It was thus this year on Decoration day, Justice Holmes was there, but found no preparation had been made for his attendance. And he promptly saw to it that adequate reservation should be made for him a year from that day. The fact that he then would be in his 88th year weighed with him not a jot.

The War Was Over

It is an odd touch about Justice Holmes, that harking back to the warlike days of his youth. When Justice Lurton, once a gray clad trooper in the confederate army, was on the bench, the pair of former enemies in war had a rigidly observed ritual of their own.

Holmes, as senior, always led the march of the justices to their place on the bench, walking behind the chief justice. At one point he invariably paused to wait until Lurton passed him. Then, with eyes twinkling under snowy brows, he saluted with rigid military precision, and Lurton would return the greeting in kind.

Stories That Recall Others

Turned Off.

The other evening while little Robert was getting ready to retire, he suddenly reached toward the top of his head and made a motion as if he were turning a knob. "I can't grow now," he remarked.

"Why not?" questioned his mother.

"Because I'm turned off," he replied.

Not Exactly.

Peppy little Annie is a youngster whose enthusiasms sometimes lead her statements through a labyrinth of inaccuracies before she tells her daddy the story she has saved for his arrival home from the office.

"Oh, daddy, I killed a cockroach today," she shouted gleefully as she rushed to him and threw her arms about his neck.

"I didn't kill him really, but we threw him on the fire and he burned to death. Oh, no that wasn't exactly the way we killed him. We threw him on the fire and he didn't light on the fire, but back of it, and he crawled away."

So Annie's lethal tale ended.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time for Town Authorities to Act.

Mr. Editor: May I trespass upon your patience once more? Since my other letter about the "First Burying Ground" appeared in your columns I have met several people who were kind enough to say: "You are quite right and if you ever locate the exact spot something should be done about it".

To which I answer: "We have located it".

Can anyone who has read carefully the very clear and able article of W. S. Case, which appeared in your issue of June 15, entertain any reasonable doubt on the subject?

Mr. Case happened to be in a position to know and he does know. Tradition, history and recorded deeds confirm what he says.

The Norwich town authorities, if not satisfied with our findings, should in our presence, rope in the space indicated and proceed to make proper excavations to discover whether the soil is geologically intact, which will not be so if any interments have taken place in former times. If we are proven to be wrong we are ready to retire, but if we are right the town should take possession of its property and record and enclose it properly so that such a disgraceful condition may not arise again.

YOUR HEALTH

Further Health Improvement Depends on People's Instruction.

By John F. Wilson, M. D., Lakeland, Florida.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Health has ever been recognized as the chief basis for wealth and happiness, and in this age is the subject of a science administrative practice of its own, in which the physician plays a most important part.

The fundamental necessity of purity of air, water, food, milk, and freedom from communicable diseases, has rendered it necessary that steps be taken to eradicate such nuisances as tend to promote the spread of these preventable diseases, and has made it obligatory on the part of every physician to study the subject and make a proper application of his findings in his daily practice.

The science of health conservation has grown apace with other branches of medicine, and has so developed that if it were now thoroughly applied to the conditions of human life, there would result a wonderful amelioration of disease.

It is no small achievement to have so improved health conditions that the reduction of the general death rate has been lowered, resulting in the saving of many thousands of lives and preventing an incalculable amount of sickness each year.

Much of this is due to education in the principles of hygiene and the practice of sanitation. Now further improvement must depend upon the instruction of people along lines even broader and more thorough than ever before. So it is the duty of the physician and health officer to recognize and to correct unsanitary conditions wherever they may be found. Hence the work of all physicians and health authorities becomes that of educating the general public.

This is where the physician plays a most important role, for he is interested in the conservation of health, for it is he who is consulted, and his opinions requested on all new methods advanced by health authorities. He must assist in the education of the general public, because it must be informed as to its need for personal and public hygiene and sanitation. It is through this medium the greatest good can be attained.

Physicians should advise their patients how to secure perfect health, to increase the inherent power to resist noxious and harmful influences, and to make all the surroundings and environments of the body safe and free from depressant factors. Purity of the external media and environment of the body is essential to its welfare. If we strengthen the resistant powers of the system to the fullest extent and remove all predisposing conditions, the exciting causes will in all probability be inoperative in most cases, and there will be little or no incurrence of disease.

Patients should cooperate with their physicians by going to them for a yearly health audit, instead of waiting until disease has gotten a headway.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Happy Jack Loses a Breakfast

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Surprise has often won a fight;
'Tis sometime better far than might.
—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Happy Jack Squirrel and Farmer Brown's Boy are the best of friends. They have been for a long time. All winter long Happy Jack was always sure of finding something to eat, put out especially for him. When spring came Farmer Brown's Boy still continued to put out food for Happy Jack. There was one particular big flat stone on the old stone wall, along the edge of the Old Orchard, which Farmer Brown's Boy said was Happy Jack's table. Mrs. Happy Jack used to go there with him. She was not quite so fearless as Happy Jack, for she had never had quite courage enough to take food from the hands of Farmer Brown's Boy, as Happy Jack did.

It was to this table that Mr. and Mrs. Happy Jack proudly led a little family of four, as soon as the latter were old enough. With always plenty to eat, these young gray squirrels grew fast. Very proud of their family was Happy Jack, and a wonderful time they all had early in the morning as they frisked about on the old stone wall and in the trees near by. Farmer Brown's Boy used to delight in watching them.

Early one morning, Happy Jack had gone over for an extra early breakfast. He was sitting on the edge of the table—which, you know, was a big flat stone in the stone wall. It was a beautiful spring morning. The feathered folk were singing and everything was as peaceful as could be. Happy Jack was nibbling a bit of food rather daintily as he waited for his family to arrive.

Now, unknown to anyone, Robber the Rat had moved over from Farmer Brown's barn to a hole under the old stone wall, not far from Happy Jack's table. From the entrance to that hole he had watched Happy Jack and his family stuffing themselves morning after morning. Later, when he was sure that no one was watching, he had stolen over to that big flat rock and greedily eaten what was left. Then he had scurried back into his hole, for the ways of Robber the Rat are ways of darkness, and he does not like the sunlight.

On this particular morning Farmer Brown's Boy was up unusually early. He had left a bountiful breakfast on that flat stone before Happy Jack arrived. There were several things that Happy Jack was particularly fond of. "This is the best breakfast I've had for a long time," thought Happy Jack as he nibbled and waited for Mrs. Happy Jack and the children to arrive. "I wish the family would hurry up. If they don't come soon I am afraid I shall be greedy."

It was just then that there was a sudden rush along the top of the old stone wall and Happy Jack looked up to see Robber the Rat—big, dirty, evil-looking—rushing straight at him with all his sharp teeth showing. Happy Jack almost turned a back somersault, ran for the nearest tree and climbed it. There he was joined by Mrs. Happy Jack and the children, and they all sat there and chattered and scolded, while Robber the Rat, grinning between bites, stuffed himself.

Now, there is no one greedier than Robber the Rat. By the time he had finished and gone back to his hole there was little left. Happy Jack was the first one to venture down. He moved rather cautiously. There was something rather terrible looking about Robber the Rat. Happy Jack reached the flat stone. Robber the Rat did not appear. Mrs. Happy Jack and the children ventured down to join Happy Jack. It was rather a sorrowful breakfast party. You see, all of the best of the food had disappeared and there wasn't enough left to give them much more than a bite all around.

"This is the best breakfast I've had for a long time," thought Happy Jack

Little Talks on Thrift

Widespread Need for Old Age Pensions Emphasizes More General Need of Thrift

Considerable attention at this time is being given to the subject of old age pensions. No one can in fairness say that the hand of helpfulness should not be extended to those whose years are many and whose possessions are few. Opportunities for employment are not plentiful for such as these.

Generally speaking, those who have reached the afternoon of life must depend on charity unless in their younger years they have been able to accumulate enough to furnish a living income. Whether it is right that every humanitarian consideration should be given to our aged dependents, these humane activities should not blind us to the folly of thriftless habits during that period of life when we are able to save and save. Even though society may throw open its protecting arms to those who have neglected to provide for their old age, this assured help in times of need does not in the slightest degree justify the neglect of safeguarding one's own future.

To shirk one's duty to one's self willingly is to accept dependence as being quite as desirable as independence.

Every individual should rise above the plane simply of striving to protect himself against aged pauperism. His thrift should carry him to the greatest possible heights of usefulness and success. He should not be satisfied with the mere condition of material independence. Nevertheless, the very fact that so much attention today is being given to old age pensions shows that many of our citizens have neglected even to care enough for their own welfare to provide against the exigencies of old age.

Let us view with generous and charitable consideration current old age pension activities but let us meanwhile do all we can to encourage widespread practices of thrift which will reduce to the minimum the possibility of old age dependence.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

THE MODERN WAY TO COOK VEGETABLES

Save the Vital Elements and Improve the Flavor

Every woman who knows the importance of vegetable foods and wishes to make these healthful dishes tasteful, will welcome the work of two groups of nationally known cooking experts. These women experimented at length with vegetables cooked in the various ways. Their conclusions are of value to everyone interested in diet and health. Use little water in cooking vegetables. Do not overcook. Add a dash of sugar while the foods are cooking.

What does the dash of sugar do? It does not make the vegetables taste sweet as might be expected, but it intensifies the piquant flavors. It restores the freshness of flavor. It helps to heighten the color of the vegetables.

Try this Carrot Loaf recommended by one of the experts. Scrape enough carrots to make a pint of pulp. Boil in slightly sweetened water until tender. Then mash. To the pint of pulp, add 2 well-beaten eggs, ½ teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pepper, 2 teaspoons of sugar and ¼ cup of cream. Pour into a well-buttered mold. Stand this in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Turn out on hot platter and surround with peas and serve with white sauce.

Use a dash of sugar to make the healthful foods so appetising that people will eat them. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 5 1-2 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

SIX YEAR OLD BOY DROWNED AT TAFTVILLE; BODY NOT RECOVERED

Joseph Kramisck, 4, son of Mrs. Antoinette Kramisck of No. 11 South Third avenue, Taftville, was drowned in the Shetucket river at Taftville about 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The boy is said to have gone down just above the canal gates at the north end of the spinning department of the Ponemah mills. Up to a late hour Wednesday evening the body was not recovered.

Conflicting stories were related by the young boys of his age, who were said to have been with Kramisck at the time of the accident, as to how he happened to be drowned. One claimed that he was walking along the high wall on the east side just above the canal gates and was precipitated into the river in slipping, while another claimed that he was paddling in the water at the edge of the lower wall, stepped off and plunged in.

Still another story was that he entered the water from the lower wall on the east side and tried to swim backwards. It was said that he could not swim. It was also said that he fell off the west wall. But it is an established fact, as all those who were with him claim, that he was seen in the channel and that he submerged about in the middle of it, not coming up the second time.

Shortly after 7 o'clock efforts were made to recover his body. At one time there were about 15 boys diving for it, just above the canal gates, while a boat with four mill employes were dragging the canal with grappling irons. This proceedure was given up along towards 8 o'clock. It was thought that the body might have been carried by the strong current through the canal gates into the canal, which runs alongside of the mill in the rear. So the gates were lowered and the canal was drained out with the exception of about three feet of water. All the water could not be taken off, as one of the gates could not be lowered to the bottom.

A private machine and the fire department apparatus of the Ponemah company were driven alongside of the canal and the spotlights were directed into the canal in an attempt to locate the body. Near the gates the searchers saw what appeared to be the boy's body, but this proved to be a number of cans and paper. Three volunteer searchers in a rowboat and armed with a spotlight also went up in the canal holes.

ESTIMATE 117,749 POPULATION FOR NEW LONDON COUNTY

A population of 117,749 for New London county on July 1st, is the estimate reached by the system used by the bureau of census. This is an increase from 104,611 in 1920 and 113,600 in 1926.

In 1920 Connecticut had 1,394,000 persons within its borders, but it is safe to estimate that the figure will be nearer to 1,700,000 on the first of next month. The estimates for the various states, however, can be made only by the census experts, who have the means at hand.

According to the latest statistics available there were 936 marriages in New London county in 1927, a drop of 89 from the figure for 1926, and in 1927 the courts of New London county divorced 109 couples as against 89 in 1926.

The agricultural census of 1925 revealed that New London county had 2,834 farms in that year, as compared with 2,747 in 1920, making up in 1925, over 63 per cent of the county's 421,760 acres. The farm land and buildings on it were valued at $16,593,715 in 1925. Uncle Sam will take an agricultural census in connection with the decennial census next spring.

TRAILED HER HUSBAND TO GET DIVORCE EVIDENCE

Mrs. Lena Thurlow Parsons of 67 Norwich avenue, Taftville, testified before Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court here Wednesday how she and two detectives from Hartford in an automobile trailed her husband, Thomas Parsons, in Bristol in order to get evidence against him in a divorce suit. The suit was on trial Wednesday on the ground of infidelity with Mr. Parsons contesting the suit, and questions put to Mrs. Parsons on cross-examination by Attorney J. Greenstein, counsel for the defendant husband, indicated that the line of defense would include the claim that there was a frame-up.

Besides the divorce, Mrs. Parsons wants alimony and change of name. Her case is presented by Judge A. F. Libby.

Mr. Parsons was a widower with two children when he married the petitioner in Norwich on Sept. 25, 1919. They were both weavers in the mill when they were married and she testified that she went to work after they were married because she wanted a bungalow. Her husband told her if she wanted a bungalow, pretty clothes, a nice house with nice furniture in it, she would have to work for it and his mother would take care of the two children. She had earned she said $6,488.68 during her married life and had over $2,000 left at the time she separated from him on Nov. 10, 1927. At that time she said she had no suspicion of his running around with other women and if he had kept his promise of giving her back the money which she had advanced to establish him in business she would not have attempted to get a divorce. She learned about the other women the day after she separated from him, she testified, and now she did not want to go back to her husband to whom she referred as a "low-down character". She told of giving him money, one of these occasions being to pay a fine of $200 imposed upon him for selling liquor at a garage.

Relating how she secured the evidence on which the divorce suit is brought, she told of trailing her husband's machine for two nights in Bristol with two detectives and seeing her husband pick up girls. The next night, which was Sept. 24, 1927, they saw him pick up a girl, drive off into a country road and park his machine. From what they saw when they looked into the machine with a flashlight, the divorce suit was brought.

In reply to a question from Judge Brown as to why she wanted a divorce, Mrs. Parsons replied that it was to become an American citizen again as he (Parsons) was not an American.

Thomas Marley, one of the detectives testified that Parsons had eleven women in his car the first two nights they trailed him and that the girl with him on the third night said her name was Mary Anderson and that she had come from Providence to Bristol to look for work. He denied that he had ever known the girl before.

The plaintiff's side was concluded as court adjourned Wednesday afternoon. The defendant's case will be put in when court opens this (Thursday) morning.

A Flint touring car was badly damaged in the rear end when it was struck on the right side on Norwich avenue, Taftville, by a Nash touring, which was coming out of a private driveway near the Lisbon (black) bridge trolley stop. The impact of the collision forced the former machine, which is owned by Louis J. Jarry of No. 8 Hunters avenue, Taftville, and driven by Andrew F. Jarry of No. 3 South B street, also of Taftville, across the road and onto the trolley tracks, with its rear end up against a telephone pole. PIANO PUPILS GIVE THEIR FINAL RECITAL

The final recital of the piano pupils of Miss Margarete Suck, took place Friday afternoon at the schoolroom of the Norwich Private Day school with the mothers of the pupils present.

There was a varied programme of classical music which was thoroughly enjoyed by all those present. As nearly all the pupils were the same ones who had played a year ago, it was most interesting to note the progress made by each one, and most favorable comments rewarded the young musicians for their faithful work during the past year. The good touch, the clear technic and the intelligent rendering of the various numbers spoke well of the careful study and also of the love with which every one of the pupils handled their tasks. A number of the selections were played entirely from memory. Prizes were given by Miss Suck to those of the pupils who had done especially good work during the year. The following numbers were played:
